

IN MEMORIAM

MEAGHER BOYD BERNARD

Quietly and peacefully as he had accepted the sufferings of life, little Meagher Boyd Bernard, seven years old, answered the unmistakable call of the Angel of Death, who winged his soul to Heaven on Easter Sunday morning, April 15th, after an illness of five months.

Meagher was the youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. Boyd Bernard. Left to cherish his memory are his sorrowing parents, one sister, Vina, and one brother, Philip and a host of relatives and school mates, who will mourn his sudden passing. With almost impassable roads, his funeral was largely attended, on Tuesday morning from his home in Pleasant View to The Immaculate Conception Church, Palmer's Road, where Requiem Mass was celebrated by Rev. Patrick Walsh, who also conducted the service at the grave. His pall-bearers were his school-mates: Leo J. Doucette, Arthur Doucette, Vernon Gaudette, Wilbert Gaudette, Raymond Doucette and Reggie Shea. Those who carried the flowers were: Victor Doucette, Bert Peters, Edward Doucette and Gerald Perry.

Two Can Sing

by James M. Cain CHAPTER ELEVEN Part Two

I said there must be some mistake and I would see him that afternoon. I went out, and hustled over to Newark and borrowed $300 from a manufacturer of power shovels we had done some business with. I got back just in time to get in the bank, so I could cover that cheque before they closed; then went back and told the clerk it was all right, I had drawn on the wrong account, and he could put it through. I went up to my suite and counted my money. I had $76 over what I had deposited in the bank. My expenses, over the $170 a month I was paying for the suite, were about $50 a week, not counting club dues and other things. I could not save off very long. I was just about a week and a half from the bone and I began to feel it again, that thick rage against Doris and the way she treated me. It would suit her fine, I knew, to have me coming on my knees to her begging for money. I walked around the suite, and after a while something in me clicked. I began to think about Horn and the Hippodrome and his $150 a night. Next day he called up: "Mr. Borland?"

"Yes." "This is Bert Horn again. Remember?" "Oh yeah. How are you?" "All right. Listen; my other ten or got to town last night. Fact of the matter, I stole him off Rossi. Guy by the name of Parma. You know him?" "Yeah. I sang with him."

"Listen; if you're as good as he says you are, I might raise the offer. I might up the ante to $200. Now you're talking. Come on over." He came, and looked me over again and the place over again, and then he laughed and shook his head. "You play?" I asked. "Some kind of way, yes." "Come on up."

I took him up on the third floor, where the piano was, and opened the windows and shoved the "Traviata" aria in front of him. He played it and I sang it. When I got through he nodded. "Guess they won't be kidding me." We went down again, and he got down to cases. "How many roles do you know?" "Three."

"Just three?" "Marcel, Germont, and Rigoletto. I sang one other role, but it was a pinch-hitting job and I would not know it now if I heard it." "What role was it?" "Wagner in 'Faust.' I don't sing French, but they let me do it in Italian. They showed it at me in the morning. I sang it that afternoon, and I had forgotten it by night."

That made the same impression on him it had on the others. An opera impresario, he's a little like a baseball manager. He knows all about smoke. He gets that every day. But a guy that can come out of the bull pen and finish a ball game, that's different. When he heard that he quit worrying, and began to lay it out what I'd have to do. The hitch came over the guarantee. With just those three operas, he couldn't make it three times a week, because they weren't giving "Traviata" on a weekly schedule. He wanted me to get up "Trovatore," "Lucia," and "Aida," and then later "Don Giovanni," and they would revive it if they thought I was right for it.

I said I couldn't get up that many roles by the end of the winter if I had to sing three times a week, too. So then he had a different idea: "All right; we'll say 'Lucia' and 'Trovatore,' but get 'Pagliacci' up by next week, and then we can put you on three times. You see, ham and eggs is once a week, too, and—"

"What is?" "Ham and eggs. 'Cavalleria Rusticana' and 'Pagliacci,' the double bill. 'Pagliacci' you can get up quick. After the 'Prologue,' which I suppose you know, you have almost nothing to do, just two real scenes, not over 10 minutes of actual singing altogether. Then we can—"
