MR. AND MRS. RALPH ARSENAULT

CFB Summerside Chapel Scene Of August Wedding

In a quiet double ring ceremony on August 6th, 1966, Miss Jean, daughter of Sgt. and Mrs. Walter Grant of Washington, D. C. became the bride of LAC Joseph Arsenault, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Arsenault. Father Weagle officiated at the ceremony. The bride was attended by her sister, Mrs. John Robertson and cousin, Mrs. Roger Goss, and Mrs. Joseph Thomas, a cousin of the groom. The best man was her brother-in-law, Dr. John Robertson. The wedding gown was a floor length fitted model of white sata peau with long lily-point sleeves and a sweet-heart neckline. Her headpiece was of white illusion and her bouquet of white mums. On a honeymoon trip to Ontario, Mrs. Arsenault wore a white nylon and sharkskin fitted dress and matching cape lined with pink, pink accessories, and a corsage of pink sweet heart roses. The bride is on the staff of Parkdale School, and the groom is with the RCAF. (Photo by Sears)

Cantaloupe Plum Jam Treat From West Coast

The queen of plums, Santa Rosa, and the princely western fruit of the vine, cantaloupe, combine into a burgundy-colored Cantaloupe Plum Jam. This easy-to-make spread is delicious on bread and for topping ice cream or cake. Approximately 35 percent of all plums produced in California are the Santa Rosa variety. You will recognize it by the conical shape and purplish crimson color. The flesh is yellow to dark red near the skin with a pleasing tart flavor and plenty of juice. Cantaloupe on the firmer side, rather than ripe-for-eating stage, is best for making jam. Measurements level: recipes for 6

CANTALOUPE-PLUM JAM
2 medium cantaloupes (2 c. puree)
2 lb. red plums (2 c. puree)
4 c. sugar
1 tbsp. lemon juice

Remove rind from melons, halve melons, remove seeds, and cut flesh into chunks. Puree in a blender on food mill. Remove pits from plums and puree the flesh. Put both fruits in a 4 to 6 qt. kettle and bring to a boil. Add sugar and lemon juice. Gently boil the mixture until the desired consistency, from 30 to 45 min. Skim off any froth from the top. Pour into sterilized pint jars and seal. Makes 2 pts.

MONDAY DINNER
Thick Slices
Beef - Steak Tomatoes with Chives-French Dressing Braised Lamb Shanks with Gravy (previously columned)
Tossed Noodles - Spinach Cantaloupe Wedges - Hot or Iced Coffee or Tea Milk or Grape Juice Cooling, unusual and easy to prepare.

CANTALOUPE AND TOMATO SALAD
1-3 c. French dressing
1-c diced cantaloupe
Lettuce
Peel and slice the tomatoes; pour over half the French dressing, to moisten, and combine remainder with the cantaloupe, refrigerate. To serve, border plates with lettuce; center with sliced tomatoes; edge with sliced cantaloupe.

ELLEN'S DIARY

The Little Truck Brings Wood For Our Baking

Today, loads of firewood came down the fields' lane, in the little truck and were stowed away in the woodshed. As is usual, while hardwoods predominate, it is a mixture of woods that comes home to the cook, Stout maple sticks, Birches - the yellow and the white with its paper-white curls so handy to kindle a fire. A versatile fabric, the bark was, in our childhood - Shaped to a funnel-like container, we could dip cooling drinks from the brook. On occasion, we used the like to carry home nosegays of violets in spring, or the summertime's offerings of berries, if one were found unprepared for such gatherings. Or shaped into tiny canoes, what fun it was to launch them on the ripples of the brook and watch them sail away beneath the spanning rustic bridge and the high rail fence below and out beyond sight around a bend of field to fairy sailings beyond! The softwoods too contribute a share to our mixture, the scented spruce and fir to make the hurried fire for the quick cups of tea. "This will bake your loaves" Mack smiled, getting down from the truck he had backed within the rather narrow doorway of the woodshed. "And boil our kettles" we smiled. And sing content tunes to us, lullabies of things. Result. Of summer zephyrs and birdsong, of sunshine and gentle showers, and all the fullness and the loveliness of the summery days, when wildish breezes rant and rave about our eaves and roofline. How snug we shall then be - we two! "I've wanted so long to see this farm" a trim nice lady, neither young nor yet old, who with an also interesting daughter and grandson "going into grade eleven" were among Alderlea's visitors today. "And as we happened to be in town, we came the extra miles. And we're a long way from home now! she smiled, obviously pleased to have had a long wish come true. "Had you ever before been on the highway that runs by the end of this Road?" we inquired. "Oh yes! When we went on our honeymoon to the States" she replied, the remembrance returning the girlish glint to the eyes. Island communities have their chosen place-names. Some tell a tale of loved districts left behind overseas. Some declare a loyalty to the Crown by names of kings and queens and princes now long gone. Others are original, and even though we may know them only by name, they are still most interesting. We were specially taken up with "Oak Valley", the name of this visiting lady's home community. What pretty scenes the name conjures up! An island valley, secluded perhaps as is this one. A place of shady trees and a green loveliness where summer comes to linger in an all embracing peace. Another of today's callers was a gentleman, retired after more than a half-century of faithful service given to the company he served. It was often his lot to pour in a measure of that Balm of Gilead into hearts, which makes for satisfaction between company and patrons. "That I think has been my main purpose in life: to make peace wherever I went" he smiled happily. And as he talked with this pair a verse we had read somewhere came to mind: "We don't have to tell how we live each day; We don't have to say if we work or play; A tried true barometer serves in our place, However we live, it will show in our face!" It was true. This evening an enviable serenity of spirit was written in grand characters on his features. "I feel a mite hungry, Ellen" James says, at the door. "After all, we had an early supper, remember?" Until tomorrow... Diary... Good-night...

Divorce Laws Under Study By Churchmen

Many of the world's churches have committees studying the question of divorce in the light of demands for updating the laws. Some of these committees have already made preliminary reports on their recommendations. Most favor change.

Latest to take this position is the committee appointed by the Archbishop of Canterbury in England. And the recommendations are in line with those made earlier this year by a branch of the Anglican church of Canada. The Huron Diocese suggested to the federal government that present divorce laws be extended to include such grounds as desertion, incurable mental illness, and in the case of the husband, convictions of rape and some forms of sexual deviation. These are now conditions in British divorce laws.

The British committee would abolish the outdated concept that there is one innocent and one guilty party in a broken marriage. It is the perpetuation of this myth that now forces couples to arrange for rigged evidence of adultery. But under the British recommendation, both parties would have to prove their marital failure in court and neither would have to bear the stigma of the sinner. As the report notes, a divorce case would be more like an inquest and less like a trial.

All the churches seem anxious to rid our divorce laws of their hypocrisy. Canada lags sadly behind the rest of the world's major countries and we will have to take a giant step to get into this century just catching up. We should be anxious to get rid of the present fraudulent atmosphere now attached to our divorce laws.

Saudi Arabian Brides Are Down In Price

Jedda, Saudi Arabia A Saudi Arabian suitor will no longer have to pay more than 2,000 riyals (about $560) when buying a bride, under a new government law.

Previously parents never accepted less than 6,000 riyals and sometimes the "mahar" or purchasing price ran as high as 10,000 silver pieces. When the bill was still under consideration, however, Saudi newspapers complained that many educated young men preferred to remain bachelors rather than be forced to pay such high sums of money to get them selves a wife.

Most of the time, suitors' reluctance was dictated by the fact that, according to Moslem law, the bridegroom is not allowed to see his bride until the marriage contract has been signed by parents on both sides and the newlyweds enter the matrimonial room.

Commenting on the situation one newspaper said that numerous social problems had arisen out of such practice because disappointed young men had been married to ugly, old and uneducated women by greedy matchmakers whose sole aim was to pocket a substantial "cut" from the money paid. Membership Has Increased In Canadian CWL

HAMILTON (CP) - Membership in the Catholic Women's League of Canada has increased by 48,000 in the past year, according to national president Catherine Toal of London, Ont.

Miss Toal said 37 new parish councils were formed. Membership is now 163,467.

The British Columbia provincial president reported that the provincial CWL was commended by the British Columbia welfare department for the success of its adoption program, part of a national project.

Saskatchewan reported its chapters gave baby sitting courses to Grade 7 and 8 students and Girl Guides.
