

The Presidential Election.

At the beginning of the campaign, everything seemed to be in favor of Cleveland. He had creditably performed the presidential duties for one term, and he had outlined a fiscal policy for another term which, it was thought, would easily be commended to the good sense of the nation as a means of avoiding the surplus and lessening taxation without diminishing the protection to American labor, which is, by both parties, regarded as the sine qua non of American politics.

If Cleveland had fought the battle honorably and consistently, he would now have hosts of sympathizers, not only in the States, but in every part of the civilized world. But he tried to enshrine the Republicans by stealing their best card and going one better. In utter disregard of his own utterances, he issued his Retaliation Message, to show that he, as well as the Republicans, was ready to inflict the "greatest injury" upon Canada; in utter disregard of the dictates of good taste and good feeling, he dismissed Lord Sackville, who is guilty of a mere indiscretion, as though he were guilty of a crime, in order that it might appear, that he, as well as the Republicans, was not afraid to subject the representative of Great Britain to an indignity. It was a mean game to play. But Cleveland played it—and has been defeated.

At the Presidential election four years ago, Cleveland's electoral vote was 219, and Blaine's 182. Now, Cleveland's electoral vote will be but 162, while that of Harrison will be 239. The vote returned yesterday by states will be as follows:

Table with 2 columns: HARRISON and CLEVELAND. Lists electoral votes for various states like Alabama, Arkansas, California, etc.

Cleveland's defeat is therefore decisive. Honorable men everywhere will agree that he has been rightly served. He has fallen a victim to his reasonable convictions about the right course to pursue as to the tariff and his alleged friendly sentiments towards Great Britain; and he has forfeited the respect of all Free Traders, of the whole British people, and of all who love straightforward, manly consistent conduct in peace and in war.

It is too soon to say what the result will be. Whether or not we shall see the United States tariff made yet higher than it is; whether or not the tail of the British lion will be twisted in an endeavor to obtain the coveted right to fish in Canadian waters and send fish through Canadian territory to the confusion and loss of Canadian fishermen,—are questions which can be solved only in the course of events. Probably the Republicans will soon settle down to a reasonable and not unfriendly course of action. In the meantime, Great Britain and Canada will, do doubt, maintain their present policy of quiet and dignified reticence.

Some one has suggested that Lord Dufferin be Sackville's successor at Washington. Nothing could be more absurd. Lord Dufferin is an Ambassador of the highest rank and ability. It is not likely the Government of Great Britain would ask him to go to Washington as a subject for the dirty tricks of fifth-rate Republican politicians; nor is it likely that Lord Dufferin would accept the position. No; the Government of Great Britain will probably act on the principle: "set a thief to catch a thief," and send to Washington the meanest, sharpest trickster they can find.

The combination of ingredients found in Ayer's Pills renders them tonic and cathartic as well as cathartic. For this reason they are the best medicine for people of costive habit, as they restore the natural action of the bowels, without debilitating.

Glynwood Stock Farm.

The name of Henry Longworth ought, perhaps, to have the first place on a list of our Island farmers. Certainly, if his ability be measured by his success at our annual exhibitions, he is fairly entitled to this distinction. In the past twenty years, he has won at these exhibitions a greater number of prizes for cattle and sheep than any other man in the Province; and no single farmer has, in practice, done more to maintain the purity and high standard of breeding.

It must, however, be admitted that he has labored under peculiar advantages. He is within easy reach of the chief source of good breeding which the Province presents, viz., the Government Stock Farm; and he lives in sight of Charlottetown. His residence overlooks the town, the bay, the river, the wide undulating landscape on either hand, and away beyond the strait, the hazy outlines of the rocky hills on Nova Scotia's unpromising shore. It thus commands one of the finest views to be found in Prince Edward Island,—a view which is the admiration of those who are so fortunate to appreciate and delight in extensive and beautiful scenery. Stretching from either end of this grandly situated homestead is an orchard of apple, plum, cherry and other trees of the best varieties. And the fields slope gently, in front and rear, to the north and south.

There are comprised in the farm a hundred and thirty-six acres of prime land. A hundred and twenty-eight acres are under cultivation. The size of the fields varies from ten to fourteen acres, and their fertility is maintained by means of liberal supplies of manure laid on at intervals, and a regular rotation of crops and pasturage.

In the past year, Mr. Longworth mowed about forty acres of hay, yielding at least seventy-five tons; reaped about thirty acres of grain, in wheat, oats and barley; and had fourteen acres under potatoes, turnips, mangolds, carrots and fodder corn; while forty-two acres were under pasture. The return of wheat was about twenty bushels per acre; barley, forty, and oats over fifty; and everything was harvested in good order and condition—notwithstanding the bad weather.

The stock at present on the farm comprises twenty head of cattle, in Durhams and Ayrshires, sixty-two sheep in Shropshire Downs and Leicesters, and eleven horses.

Both sheep and cattle are, for the most part, standard bred, with first-class pedigrees; and a number are animals of rare individual merit. This fact has for many years been recognized by the more enterprising farmers of this Province; and in recent years farmers in the neighboring Provinces and the States have become aware of it. From a Provincial point of view it is to be regretted that Mr. Longworth has found abroad a more lucrative market for the produce of his herd and flock than can be found at home. Only a day or two ago Mr. Longworth sent a number of his pure bred sheep to the State of Maine at higher prices than were offered by farmers living here.

Mr. Longworth has long made it a rule to breed only from the best herds and strains within his reach—hence his success.

Personal.

Hon. John Lefargey, Summerside, is at the Hotel Davies.

Cleveland sacked Sackville; now he is sacked himself. Serves him right!

The Czar has issued a manifesto stating that he shares with the people their thanks to God for his miraculous escape.

A Brooklyn school teacher has married one of her scholars. Perhaps the young man became tired of obeying her and went into matrimony for the sake of reciprocity.

Sir Adolphe Caron, Hon. Mr. Costigan, M. J. Griffin, Parliamentary Librarian, and Major Tilton, deputy minister of fisheries, accompany Sir John Thompson to New York.

Mr. Spurgeon is very ill, quite seriously so, and his enormous congregation is much worried. His trouble results from undertaking extra services at this time of the year, when fog and cold make a preacher's work in London so difficult. One of his hands and both feet are rendered useless, and he suffers great pain.

Another Group.

The custom of perpetuating an event by photography is becoming rather usual now-a-days. Public works in course of completion, or when finished, get pointed at by the camera, and make their appearance on the sensitive plate of a sun-artist. Groups of gay and festive tennis players pose for collective glory. Every day this instantaneous process of record displays the spectral effects of nitrate, pyragallic, and lyposulphate, and in the light and shadows of a life-like monograph, tell their "reflections" with unalterable truth. Why not "Barkis is willin'" and all the chemicals are on hand, and it is a treat to look over the productions and grouping of any well-developed and properly handled photographer. Now-a-days one can learn more in a few minutes (overhauling photographs) about the people of any place, as well as the places of any people, than by puzzling over guide books or taking buggy trips that consume days. But that is not all. In after years what strange emotions will be evoked, when say, a bridal party tells its story of half a century ago, just as it was, to those very participants?—oh! no, only to the survivors. The last of this kind of memento in Charlottetown, has for its folk, the officiating party of attendants upon the recent union of Mr. Watson and Miss Des-Brissay. Mr. Lewis has produced a fine picture of this group. Mr. Turner (the operator) has made another grouping success in this, and when he showed the happy result of his work to THE EXAMINER he seemed to forget its toil in the pleasure of its production.

Telegraphic Odds and Ends.

At the inquest on the body of the victims of the Kettle Creek, Pa., mine explosion the testimony showed that dynamite was used as an explosive. No blame was attached to any one except the miners themselves.

A Paris despatch says that the bodies of the miners recovered from the Campagnac coal pit, where an explosion occurred on Saturday, are fearfully mutilated and only a few have been identified.

The London Times Berlin despatch says: The replies of the Liberal press to the recent address of the Emperor to the municipal delegation are conceived in a spirit of freedom and boldness which has probably never before, or at least, not for a long time, been displayed in the criticism of any act of a king of Prussia or a German Emperor. The Post remarks that the Reichsanzeiger communication is another proof that a love of the truth is not less specially characteristic of Emperor William than of his grandfather.

President Cleveland has just pardoned a young man, who was sentenced to the State Prison for life on a charge of forgery. A petition from his mother setting forth that he was her "only child and only support," accompanied by certificates of good character, were read to the President, whereupon he signed the prisoner's pardon, paper, and he was released immediately.

Supreme Court.

James Paton, appellant, vs. Fanny Stunables, respondent. In this case, which occupied the attention of the Court yesterday and to-day, judgment was given by their Lordships Justices Peters and Hensley, confirming the judgment of the court below, and dismissing the appeal. The suit was originally brought to the County Court of Queen's County and referred by Judge Alley for trial to John T. Mellish, Esq., as a Justice of the Peace. The respondent, who was plaintiff in the County Court, sued the appellant in damages for breach of a contract made by him with her for board and lodging. The defence set up by him was that he did not make the contract as alleged, and that he was justified in leaving respondent's house because it was not comfortably heated. After hearing a number of witnesses on both sides, Mr. Mellish found that the contract, as proved by the plaintiff, was made by the defendant, and also that the accommodation furnished him was sufficient in every respect. He therefore awarded the plaintiff $89 damages and costs, from which judgment Mr. Paton appealed. After a very exhaustive re-hearing of the witnesses examined on the former trial, and several additional ones, Mr. Mellish's judgment was confirmed by both the judges who tried the appeal, which was dismissed by the court with costs against the appellant. Mr. W. S. Stewart for respondent; Mr. H. C. McDonald for appellant.

Watson Manufacturing Company vs. Patrick McDonald—Tried at Summerside October Term, 1888. A rule nisi, on motion of the Attorney General, was granted for a new trial.
