

ELLEN'S DIARY

Alderlea Bound Stork Misses Winter Storm

In the wake of the sunshin e of a pretty Sunday morning, the fourth storm of our winter season came. Toward the dusk it was from a lowering gray sky, that the snowflakes commenced to drift down. Lightly, they came. Even when the sun shined, it seemed, of those odd early pellets that a laugh in the mind of the June time carries off from a garlanded orchard tree. Lazy flakes.

But with them that wind racing, which to feel on a cheek is to be forever a red, though it comes from those music rages which give us the sunrise. "I don't like the look of the weather, Ellen," James commented, taking a stock of it. "There's that wind again, a pair of wild ducks, roding in off from the River, home in good time, up the creek. Praying the visiting cars at lanes a d faced h o m e w a r d. Stud e n t s, weekending at home, weighing at conditions wisely, chose not to wait for the morning to betake themselves to classes, but snatched their evening chores, and then turned up books, a n d went toward again.

And seeing the storm intensify, bearing the wind blow quickly about chimney and eaves, and knowing that at this road was catching the drifts, we said to James, come to the old armchair, his evening chores, "Isn't it fortunate that a storm didn't come last night!" "I surely is," he smiled.

Saturday night — actually toward the next morning, it was — the same stork that James had spied not long ago winging above our far fields, near Rob's farm, chose to alight there on a roof. This was the cue for a mother — to be, to be on her way to the hospital.

Yesterday morning then, we watched his evening chores, with joy and relief, the news, which

Here's Something Novel In The Meat Pie Line

IDEA BAILEY ALLEN
AFTER Paul Revere finished his midnight ride in 1775, he undoubtedly met some of his cronies in taverns for a brief conference on the critical situation.

Ordinarily, they would have beten a square meal. But this time the inn-keeper rushed in foaming tankards of ale, "cold meat" (roast) and a big loaf of crusty bread, similar to the bread-in-a-basket on the table in the new Paul Revere Tavern in New York City, where the Chef and I recently spent a leisurely old-fashioned evening of great cheer.

REPEATER'S BOWL
A standard dinner with Repeater's Bowl (broth) with added bone marrow and chives. The Chef recovered a fish sauté by from the cold table.

"These Meadams," our Chef interpreted, "were reminiscences of the plentiful shell fish o n t h e Colonials found on the Atlantic Seaboard."

This fine service was arranged by the Paul Revere Tavern chef as follows:

Line a large pewter tray with crushed ice. On this arrange clams and oysters on the half shell; half a boiled lobster, cooked shrimp and a slice of cold cooked halibut.

Pass two sauces — "Might-time" made by adding diced peeled shallots to vine vinegar with plenty of fresh ground black pepper and mustard; a o u r cream with table salt and anchovies to taste.

Crop Insurance Improvements Are Planned

OTTAWA (CP)—Three new farm measures are planned for this session of Parliament in addition to creation of the new portfolio of rural development and forestry. Prime Minister Pearson said here.

The Farm Credit Corporation, created in 1959 and lending some $110,000,000 in 1963 to farmers, would be provided with broader extended powers, he said.

One such step is expected to be the maximum loan ceiling higher than the existing $27,500. Mr. Pearson also listed "major movements" in crop insurance.

He gave no details but the proposed bill would deal with scheme — Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Prince Edward Island — as well as the federal government to provide back-up protection for any year when crop losses are unusually heavy.

Mr. Pearson said the third planned bill would deal with measures to lighten the high cost of modern farm machinery—presumably through a system of rentals or co-operative ownership.
