Opening lead—king of clubs.
Many times, at first glance, a contract appears impossible to make. When this happens, the declarer has an obligation to double-check his prospects to see if it is possible for the opponents' cards to be so divided that the contract can be made.

has an excellent chance to make the slam. West's two heart bid is highly significant and forms the basis for the correct play.

The club lead is ruffed and the ace of spades is cashed, both defenders following. Already, a great deal is known about the opponents' hands. West had one spade and presumably five hearts for his overall. In turn, this meant East had at most one heart (as well as only one spade).

Eleven of East's cards therefore consist of diamonds and clubs. It does not seem unreasonable to suppose that East has greater diamond length than West. If this supposition turns out to be the case, the slam can be made.

The A-K of diamonds are cashed and a diamond is ruffed in dummy. The ace of hearts is now cashed, the purpose being to remove East's only heart from his hand. Then the queen of clubs is trumped.

All the preliminary steps have been taken. Dummy is out of clubs and East is out of hearts. The key play is now made.

The ten of diamonds is led and one of dummy's two hearts is discarded. East wins the diamond and is compelled to lead a club. South ruffs the club and discards dummy's last heart.

The net result is that declarer loses no heart tricks at all but substitutes instead a diamond loser. The exchange is a bargain indeed—two for the price of one!

Choppy Seas Prevent Visit To Lobsters

YARMOUTH, N.S. (CP) — A choppy sea Tuesday forced postponement of a research project aimed at discovering whether lobsters prefer wooden or metal traps.

Navy frogmen and National Research Council cameramen went to Roaring Bull Rock off Yarmouth Cape near here early Tuesday. A spokesman said rough seas made conditions unsuitable and the start of the project was postponed until Wednesday morning.

The fisheries department, National Research Council, Fisheries Research Board of Canada and the navy, are taking part in the study.

Cameramen will photograph the sea bottom from a diving bell to record lobster activity in an area where wooden and metal traps have been set.

Fisheries Minister Maclean said in Ottawa last week results of the tests may have far-reaching effects on lobster fishing in the Atlantic provinces.

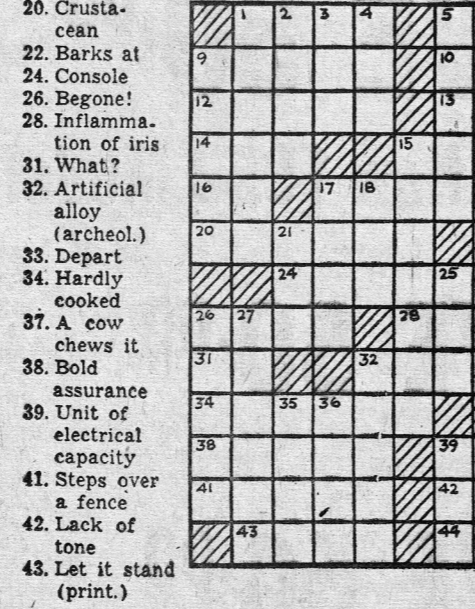

The fisheries department started experimenting with metal traps four years ago. This is the first attempt to accurately gauge their effectiveness.
