ADDRESSES TRADE BOARD

Speaker Stresses Preparedness In Case Of RCAF Station Closure

SUMMERSIDE — What does the Summerside Board of Trade propose to do in the event that the Summerside RCAF Station should close down? This was a probing question asked by Wendall MacKay, managing director of the Island Development Company, as he spoke at a board meeting in Summerside last night. "The Town of Summerside," he said, took on a new look when the airforce base was established. "Business expanded, rents jumped and sales increased." The next question asked was what happens to a town when a large segment of its economy is based upon one thing alone — the Summerside Airforce base? "No town this size should ever allow itself to depend so greatly for its economic support on anything as unsure as a military installation," said Mr. MacKay, who added "it is a disquieting thought but what frightens me more is the apparent absence of preparations being made by the citizens of Summerside for such an eventuality."

BECOME OBSOLETE "Ground-based installations of this kind have a habit of becoming obsolete, or they become too costly, too heavy a tax burden on the people; or they suddenly become located in non-strategic areas and have to be relocated elsewhere." Mr. MacKay suggested that the Summerside Board of Trade adopt a policy of "be prepared" such as by making surveys, publishing brochures outlining in detail such factors as industrial sites available, civic data, tax concessions, labor potential, power supply, transportation facilities. These were some of the recommendations made by Ken Grant, industrial commissioner for Hamilton when he spoke to the Charlottetown Board of Trade a few weeks ago.

RESOURCE INDUSTRIES He recommended industries based upon primary resources — agriculture, fishing and tourism for a start but said, "we should not limit our vision to this concept alone." Citing other possibilities, he mentioned the manufacture of children's toys, most of which are imported from foreign countries but could possibly be made in Summerside. Industrial alcohol which could be processed in this province is not being processed, he said, as well as cat and dog foods which are merely by-products of packing houses and fish plants. Another possibility suggested was the production of flax and the establishment of a textile plant.

PARKING SPACE Among the reports given at the meeting was the downtown parking committee report given by R.T. Henthorn. Mr. Henthorn stated that a survey made by Laurie A. Coles and Associates showed that there were a total of 768 parking spaces in downtown Summerside, with 532 of these available to the travelling public, as opposed to employee otherwise restricted parking spaces. He passed on the recommendation of the committee that the area of the Queen's Wharf and the railroad tracks be used for greatly increased parking area in the downtown region. Charles Moreshead displayed and explained a sample of the projected brochure on the Summerside Industrial Park, and a sample of printing work done

Annual Burns' Concert Plays To Full Theatre

By LORNE YEO
Whether the performer was Scotch or otherwise, it didn't seem to matter for last night's performance of the annual Robert Burns' concert not only pleased the predominately Scotch audience but received approval from Irishmen, as well as others, included in the audience which packed the Confederation Centre Theatre last night. The program, sponsored annually by the Alpha Y's Men's Club of Charlottetown, was directed by Dave Hall who suggested that the reason why John Evans, master of ceremonies, was having trouble sitting down was because being a Welshman, he couldn't handle his kilt.

The first portion of the two-part program included selections by the colorful Lads and Lassies Pipe Band with their eye-catching attire and the agile Celtic Dancers in Reel O'Tulloch and Flora MacDonald's Fancy. The capable Scottish voice of Lloyd Martin required getting used to on the part of the audience which was a bit slow in its first applause but came on very strong in the second portion of the program when it demanded an encore. Mr. Martin was accompanied by Mrs. W.J. Mutch on the piano. His first solos were "Burns and Scotland Yet" and "The Barren Rocks of Aden".

In the second portion of the program, Mr. Martin sang "Donald Whar's Yee Troosers". He was accompanied on all numbers by Mrs. Mutch. John Evans and friends in their satire "sittin in council," preceded the Ross Highland Scottish Dancer who performed Scottish step dances and folk dances.

Mrs. Douglas McKenney in her solo "A Highland Lullaby," accompanied by George Halliwell on guitar, got a large response from the audience when she sang "The Wee Cooper O' Fife" and "Will Ye No Come Back Again" as did the performance of young Patsy and Jack Kipping in their Cape Breton reunion enactment.

The Sons of Erin, four capable folk singers who were not predominantly of Scottish descent were a delight to everyone. They came back in the second half with the popular folk song "The Wild Colonial Boy."

The Y's Men's chorus sang "My Love Is Like A Red, Red Rose" and "A Hundred Pipers". Included in the second portion of the program were Gordon Mills and his Scottish dance band and Heather Burns dancing the Seann Truibhas.

Campbell Says Government Apparently 'Obscuring' Help

Provincial Liberal Leader Alex Campbell last night went on record as being fully in favor of "the promotion and expansion of programs providing homes for senior citizens."

He was addressing a meeting of the Third District Queens Liberal Association at Mt. Stewart Memorial Hall.

Mr. Campbell stressed to his audience the fact that "despite any of the present government's suggestions or innuendos to the contrary, the senior citizens' housing program was financed 90 per cent by federal Liberal capital. Only 10 per cent of the cost comes from the Shaw administration."

He stressed the importance of "extending and improving upon the low-cost housing program." He went on to say that "in a number of areas, financed through federal-provincial cost-sharing programs, the Shaw government appears to use these to political advantage by obscuring the predominant part played by federal Liberal capital in the programs."

GRASS ROOTS POLICY In introducing Mr. Campbell, D. F. Sigsworth, policy aide to the leader stated that "a clear and resonant note of a revitalized Liberalism has been struck in the programs."
