A REVERIE.

Down through the dim gray gates of the west
A ship sailed out on the billows' crest,
And a soul she bore to eternal rest.

I watched her sails till they gleamed no more,
And I moaned in grief, ah! my heart was sore,
And the way so long to that other shore!

Oh! gleaming sails on the distant blue,
Canst bear me there on they bosom too,
'Yond the mystic gates thou art sailing thro'?

For I, too, would go to than distant land
And rest 'mid the joys which His love hath planned;
Yes, I long for the gleam of the golden strand!

ANOTHER TRIUMPH.

VICTORY has again perched upon the Conservative banner. A stiff contest in Middlesex, Ontario, yesterday, in which the influence of both Federal and Provincial Governments was thrown upon the Liberal side, resulted in the election of Mr. Robson, the Conservative candidate, by a hundred majority. It is becoming more and more evident that the Conservatives will score a great victory in the next general election.

FRUIT AND POULTRY MOVEMENTS.

PROFESSOR GILBERT held a large meeting at St. Peter's Bay last evening, and ended a series of fourteen highly successful lectures on behalf of the poultry interest in this Province. His addresses were at once spirited and practical, fixing the attention of his hearers and affording just that kind of information and instruction needed by the people in the improvement of their poultry. We anticipate a considerable development of our wealth in poultry as a result of Mr. Gilbert's timely and able addresses.

Accompanying him were Mr. Walter Simpson, the President of the Farmers' and Dairymen's Association, and Mr. J. S. Clark, the latter of whom spoke, and spoke well, on the subject of fruit trees and how to improve our orchards.

A great deal of interest and enthusiasm have been stirred up here by Professor Gilbert and those who accompanied him, and we look for the results in increased quantities of improved hen fruit and other fruit.

—The report of the destruction of the chief shell factory at Johannesburg is confirmed.

—General Joubert's French adviser has gone to Colesburg, which will ere long be the centre of interest.

BRITISH EMPIRE.

A short time ago, Mr. Geoffrey Darge, M. P., for Derby addressing a meeting of his constituents on the subject of the South African war, reviewing clearly the events leading up to the struggle and holding that the war had been forced by causes beyond the control of the present British government, and was on the British part a war for justice liberty. In closing he remarked upon the the co-operation of the colonies and and said:

"In the same connection there are one or two great ideals I would submit to you. You may, I think, live to see them realized.

"When we have got over this war successfully—and, God willing, we shall do so—you will have to bear in mind what every great statesman out there has set forth as a solution of the troubles in South Africa, and that is the federation of all the States under the English Crown, just as it has been done in Australia and in Canada.

"There is one more great ideal which I submit to you, and I believe it is one which we shall see realized. You have heard in times past a great deal about Imperial federation in our colonies, but I have never before seen how it was to be realized. If, however, you electors in this country will take an interest in it, you have the means of assuring Imperial federation. All your great self-governing colonies, for the first time in history, have together sent soldiers to your help. In the final settlement those colonies have got to be together consulted—can't you see the opening for Imperial federation? Cannot you take a few hard-headed men from Canada, from Australia and from South Africa to sit down with statesmen here to solve the problems by which they will be confronted when the war is over? It is an idea—you may think it is a dream—but it is the first practical proposal which was ever been made in connection with Imperial federation."

It is evidently not improbable—if the British can only obtain a general to lead the troops to decisive victory—that one of the results of the great struggle now in progress will be the closer union and co-operative of the Mother Country with the auxiliary nations composing Greater Britain.

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

—The stoppage of the system of paying commissions to passenger agents, it is calculated, will save the United States railways from $3,000,000 to $5,000,000 a year.

—Commenting upon the recent developments at Winnipeg the St. John Sun says: "The affair has probably condemned Mr. Greenway to a loss of the provincial leadership, and has perhaps deprived him of his chance of obtaining a seat in the Senate. There is a limit beyond which the government at Ottawa will not venture to go in offending the west, and a reward to Mr. Greenway, under the present circumstances, would perhaps be taken as a crossing of the line.

—Our readers will join with us in deep regret on learning of the death, this morning, of Miss Elizabeth Essery, of this city. Her health had been very delicate for several months past. The deceased lady was the eldest daughter of the late Thomas Essery, Esq. contractor, of this city. She had a very large circle of friends by whom she was much beloved, and who will deeply miss her kind, thoughtful and helpful spirit. Two sisters, the Misses Sarah and Mary Essery remain to mourn their loss.

—From a published letter of Private Stephens, 1st Gloucesters, we quote the following: "You can judge what it is like—the worst war the world has ever witnessed. It is not only the Boers, but as many of our own countrymen and deserters out of our own army, German gunners, German, French and Russian officers, we are fighting. We are fighting the whole world. The place General Buller had to attack was a second Gibraltar, and he wasn't as strong as the enemy." This seems to be the truth of the matter.

—The Monetary Times refers to the gratifying fact that "the receipts of the civic government of Charlottetown during the past year exceeded the expenditures by $4,000, and says:

"It used to be a reproach to Charlottetown that the city had no drainage system, and that as a consequence it was exposed to serious mortality in the direction of typhoid and diphtheria. But the authorities were wise enough to adopt a sewerage system, and now we learn that no less than ten miles of sewers were laid during the year, and that a large number of buildings are already connected with the system."

—In his "History of England," after describing the successful assault of the citadel of Namur by William III.'s army in 1695, Lord Macaulay writes:—

"The judgment of all the great warriors whom the nations of Western Europe had sent to to the confluence of the Sambre and the Mause, was that the English subaltern was inferior to no subaltern and the English private soldier to no private soldier in Christendom. The English officers of higher rank were thought hardly worthy to command such an army. Cutts, indeed, had distinguished himself by his intrepidity But those who most admired him acknowledged that he had neither the capacity nor the science necessary to a general."

—The Montreal Gazette remarks that the detachment of Canadian mounted troops which left Halifax on Saturday, the third to go to South Africa since the war began, is by all accounts as fine a body of men as ever followed the colors into the field. Physically they are near perfection; in evident capacity for their work, they are fit for whatever comes to them. And this is the opinion of men who have seen many corps under many varying conditions. They will be a credit to the country that sends them out on a perilous mission, with hope for them strong above any anxiety that may prevail.

ESTEEMED EXCHANGES

Toronto Globe: It can certainly not be said that Canada is a fair-weather friend of Great Britain. Whenever there is a reverse or a disappointment of any kind in the war news the Imperial feeling rises higher.

ACCIDENT.—We regret to learn that Mr. Harold Angus, while adjusting some electric wires today, slipped from a window ledge of the First Methodist Church falling a distance of twenty five feet, fracturing both ankles.

JAS. PATON & CO.

A HOCKEY INCIDENT.

"What's the matter with Willie?" said the young lady in the box-back coat to her dearest girl friend

The young lady in the box-back coat was Willie's sister who had come to see Willie distinguish himself in the hockey match, Bank vs. College. Her dearest girl friend was also supposed to have a sneaking regard for Willie's sister's only brother.

Willie was on the forward line for the College and up-to-date he hadn't been distinguishing himself in the right direction. His check from the bank, Bunty Trawler, was playing all around him and Willie wasn't having a "look in" as the saying is.

Willie's sister was dismayed.

"That Trawler is a perfect beast," said she.

The young lady beside Willie's sister took Bunty's part.

"He's playing a beautiful game, whatever he is" said she.

Willie's sister was indignant.

You know perfectly well that Willie's a better player," satd she. "If that Trawler wasn't doing something mean you'd see that Willie would be cutting rings all around him."

"Mr. Trawler is a friend of mine," said the young lady with dignity.

"I don't care if he is; Willie is a brother of mine."

But the fact of the matter was that Willie wasn't feeling well. He couldn't hold the pace. To use a sporting phrase, "his stomach had gone back on him." Some indiscretion of diet had upset him. So at half time they gave him a Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablet.

"What do you think of that Trawler now?" asked Willie's sister.

Willie had just secured the puck dodged Mr. Bunty Trawler and after a grand stand rush down the ice passed to centre, who scored. The Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablet had made all the difference in the world.

"I think he's just lovely," said the young lady absently. But her eyes were shining. It was not of Mr. Trawler she was thinking.
