

Seventy Times Seven.

Not once alone to turn thy face
In pity for a brother's sin;
Not once to open tender arms;
And let the dove, forgiveness, in;
Not once to heed the Master's word,
And bury wounds and heal the pain,
But through the woof of life to weave
The pattern o'er and o'er again.

Thus, over graves of broken trusts,
The ivy of a sweet regret
May make the bitterest memory sweet,
And hide the foulest ruin yet.
Thus, in the stagnant depths of life
The lilies of white peace may shine,
To make his charity more plain,
And human piety more divine.

Thoughts in a City Churchyard.

Quiet graves in city churchyards
Mid the rush of hurrying feet,
Silent forms beneath their surface,
Hearts that long have ceased to beat.

Little recks the life around them,
Surging past the grassy mound,
Few who enter in to wander
Through the consecrated ground.

Yet, amid the ceaseless passers,
Some worn spirit here and there,
Bowed, perhaps, with mortal weakness,
Bearing marks of toil and care.

Steps within the sacred precincts,
Reads, engraved on tombstones old,
Words of faith and hope undying,
Love that never can grow cold.

Words that speak of resurrection
Of the Lord who died to save,
And the heavenly joy and brightness
Of the life beyond the grave.

So he gathers solemn lessons,
Walks he forth with firmer tread,
Feels more kindly to the living
From his commune with the dead.

Not alone in shady churchyards
Stand the gravestones of the dead,
Living hearts bear "in memoriam,"
Hearts that loved and lost and bled.

Forth from memory's haunted chambers,
Voices hushed for many a year,
Teach us by their woeful silence
Patiently life's ills to bear.

Rest and peace—dear words of promise—
Rest and peace—the worn heart's balm—
These we seek 'mid earth's vain tempests
Looking unto heavenly calm.

Just What You Might Expect.

About two weeks ago, as the overland train was passing Cheyenne, the attention of the passengers was attracted by the lamentations of a poor Irish emigrant, whose berth had been robbed during the night, and every penny of his scanty savings stolen, and whose family would, therefore, arrive beggars in a strange land. The charitable members at once began a subscription which finally amounted to something over $250. When the money had been handed to the sufferer, a pious, plausible-looking man dressed in black and adorned with a white cravat, drew him aside at one of the stopping places and said:

"My poor man, I am truly sorry for you. Your sad case touches me deeply. I am myself provided with this world's goods, however, and so will give you $250 more. Here is a $500 gold note. Give me the $250 you have and keep the rest. May heaven bless you!"

The poor Irishman did as requested, with many blessings on the generous stranger, who insisted that his gift should not be made known. When the passengers reached this side of the bay the pious looking philanthropist was nowhere to be found, he having evidently gotten off at Oakland, for reasons of his own.

The next morning the emigrant repaired to a bank to get his note changed. The teller picked up the bill and began narrowly examining it.

"There—there is nothing wrong with the bill, is there?" gasped the poor fellow. (Now the clever reader has seen all along what was going to happen. He has read lots of just such incidents as this. It is the old—old story. Well we'll see about that.)

"Nothing in the world is the matter with it," said the teller quietly, as he handed the man 50 cents. That ended it.—San Francisco News Letter.

As an old man was driving a stout sled having two or three kegs of beer in the box, a boy called out to him: "Say, there! wheel's coming off!" The old man pulled up, looking around, and the boy said: "You had better look out, hind wheel's coming off." The driver got down, looked his sled all over, felt of the braces, and inspected clear to the dash board, and then asked: "What you say? What broke?" "I said the hind wheel was coming off," replied the boy. He made another inspection, gave the sleigh a shake, and all at once called out: "Why, dere ish no hind wheel on here!"

A teacher at Squigglechunk, Me., during the Bible lesson, when speaking about Cain and Abel, asked one of the scholars:—"Where did Cain go after he killed Abel?" "He went to sleep, sir," was the reply, "Went to sleep! Where did you get your information?" said the teacher. "It's in the chapter, sir, that Cain, after killing Abel, went into the land of Nod."

The Greatest Medical Discovery since the Creation of Man, or since the Commencement of the Christian Era.

There never has been a time when the healing of so many different diseases has been caused by outward application as the present. It is an undisputed fact that over half of the entire population of the globe resort to the use of ordinary plasters.

DR. MELVIN'S CAPSICUM POROUS PLASTERS are acknowledged by all who have used them, to act quicker than any other plaster they ever before tried; and that one of these plasters will do more real service than a hundred of the ordinary kind. All other plasters are slow of action, and require to be worn continually to effect a cure; but with these it is entirely different: the instant one is applied the patient will feel its effect.

Physicians in all ages have thoroughly tested and well know the effect of Capsicum; and it has always been more or less used as a medical agent for an outward application; but it is only of very recent date that its advantages in a porous plaster have been discovered. Being, however, convinced of the wonderful cures effected by DR. MELVIN'S CAPSICUM POROUS PLASTERS, and their superiority over all other plasters, they now actually prescribe them, in their practice, for such diseases as rheumatism, pain in the side and back, and all such cases as have required the use of plasters or liniment. After you have tried other plasters and liniments, and they have failed, and you want a certain cure, ask your druggist for DR. MELVIN'S CAPSICUM POROUS PLASTER. You can hardly believe your own convictions of its wonderful effects. Although powerful and quick in its action, you can rely on its safety for the most delicate person to wear, as it is free from lead and other poisonous material commonly used in the manufacture of ordinary plasters. One trial is a sufficient guarantee of its merits, and one plaster will sell hundreds to your friends.

Ask your druggist for DR. MELVIN'S CAPSICUM POROUS PLASTER, and take no other; or, on receipt of 25 cents for one, $1 for five, or $2 for a dozen, they will be mailed, post paid, to any address in the United States or Canada.
