Mr. Pickersgill suggests effort to devise equal partnership.

MONTREAL (CP) — Liberal J. W. Pickersgill said Monday that after the general election in Quebec a French state and the rest of Canada an English state with a loose union between them. But profound changes there must be, and once the general election is over, the sooner we Canadians tackle this problem the better.

Mr. Pickersgill said the union of English- and French-speaking Canadians can best be compared with a marriage.

"There is no short cut to a solution, such as making the province of Quebec a French state and the rest of Canada an English state with a loose union between them. But profound changes there must be, and once the general election is over, the sooner we Canadians tackle this problem the better."

Mr. Pickersgill said the union of English- and French-speaking Canadians can best be compared with a marriage.

"And I sometimes think too many French Canadians believe that if certain rules of formal equality would be imposed the problem would be solved. It is not that simple."

NEED NEW TERMS
Mr. Pickersgill said a great many factors have made it necessary.
