

MARY HAWORTH

Boredom in Marriage Stems From Dulness

Dear Mary Haworth: Is there an answer to boredom in marriage? I, too, as you young ones have referred to it as the deadly enemy of marriage. And you advised an individual young woman, courted by a rich man whom she despised, that "a great deal of boredom" is necessary to give marriage a healthy life.

So I see you recognize, as a difficult problem, John and I have been married five years and we are both 31 and in good health. We are well educated and fairly normal and average. I think

I love him dearly as a brother and he apparently loves me as a mother. Sex is almost nonexistent in our marriage and such as it is, is rather self-conscious, as if it had no place in our companionship.

John never has been particularly ardent but seems well aware of other women. He seems to have memorized and forgotten me as a woman. No amount of grooming and fine-dressing makes any difference. And to be honest, my interest in him has been dropping.

I have found myself attracted to other men but I am not seeking a divorce. I am not sure, but still I'm restless, despite activity and fatigue.

Maybe John is just as bored as I am, though he too is constantly busy. I don't think he's really busy affairs since we married.

As I see the passing show of human behavior, it is always presenting new combinations of interaction, which call for fresh consideration. If one is to venture a relevant comment.

Now, to field your question—Is there an answer to boredom in marriage? Well, whose boredom? Yours or the partner's? Boredom is a state of being, not a quality, by proximity or dullness, the dictionary says. It also has to do with the "inner" and "outer" narrow, very limited, routine.

The person habitually bored with his daily routine experience is probably anxiously self-absorbed in an unconscious hatred between the "inner" and "outer" drives in his nature, to such an extent that he isn't really free to invest enthusiastically in the adventure of being alive.

And as Dr. Edmund Bergler makes clear in his book "Divorce Won't Help" (Harpers), neurotics tend to pair off together. It seems that you and John are both neurotics, but of different sort; then fret at failing to find perfect perfection in the other.

It seems that you and John are both neurotics, but of different sort; then fret at failing to find perfect perfection in the other. It seems that you and John are both neurotics, but of different sort; then fret at failing to find perfect perfection in the other.

MR. AND MRS. JOHN NOONAN

Pretty Wedding Ceremony Is Solemnized At Summerfest

A pretty wedding was solemnized in St. James Church, Summerfest, recently by Rev. Basil Croken when Sheila Any Inez, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Walter Hughes, became the bride of Mr. John Noonan, son of Mr. and Mrs. Russell C. Noonan of Albany. Present in the sanctuary were Rev. Leonard McKenna, uncle of the groom, and Rev. Reginald MacDonald, pastor of St. Michael's Parish. Mrs. Thomas Turner was in charge of the wedding music.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, was gown in a white chiffon veiled, street-length, designed in princess lines with scalloped neckline and long tapered sleeves. Her shoulder length veil was held in place by a pearl tiara, and she carried a bouquet of red carnations.

Miss Florence Hughes, sister of the bride, was given ideally in red velvet and she carried a bouquet of white carnations.

Mr. James A. Duffy of White Plains, N.S., brother-in-law of the groom, was best man. Messrs. James Hughes, brother of the bride, and Philip Noonan, brother of the groom, ushered the bride to the altar.

Mrs. Hughes chose for her daughter's wedding a royal blue sheath dress with blue accessories and corsage of white carnations. The groom's mother was attired in a brown and moss green jersey with white accessories and corsage of white carnations.

A reception for sixty guests was held at the Birch Hill Lodge. For the honeymoon trip the bride travelled in a brown wool dress, topped with a brown coat and beige accessories. Her corsage was of white carnations.

Previous to the wedding, the bride and groom were married in a civil ceremony at the home of her uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Hughes, Noron.

Mr. and Mrs. Noonan have taken up residence in Summerfest. The groom is employed with the Imperial Oil Company at Albany.

ELLEN'S DIARY

Sleek Beautiful Animals Delight Folks At The Show

"Never mind stopping to make up the bed, Ellen! We can crawl into it tonight if we crawled into it this morning. Just be sure you are ready for town this morn'g. The milk's back and back from tending the stock at the other barns." James called up to us from the chamber above.

We heard him set down the pail containing a portion of the house-cow's milk on a table. "Where are the milk-buckets, Ellen?" he questioned.

"By the sink," we called down.

"Oh, so they are! I was looking for them in the pantry... How much haste because we want to be in town in good time... Where will I put this milk? It's so hot, it'll curdle. Perhaps I'll just leave it here. You can give it a bit of a time, when you come to the stall." Now, see that you don't keep the truck waiting!"

"I'm trucked," James possessed a milk skill, natural and learned but house-keeping is not among these. This doubtful stems from the fact that he called young and alone to take care of the farm and the farm, so that there was no time left for him to dabble in the housewifery arts. Nor was there any necessity for him to be young, blessed as he was with devoted mother and sisters to attend to the same.

So it was our good fortune to be among the large number of farm-folks and others interested, in attendance at the Ladies' Annual Easter Beef Sale today. We admit we know too little about what to look for in the way of a good beef animal, at the same time, because we have a feeling that the lines of earth, we can recognize that which merits admiration. And here stood the various animals entered for this show.

Each a picture in its herd. We decided a plucked, fat, indeed, man concerned. And what it had to do with the show, we could appreciate, such had received a lot of praise from the judges.

Following the meeting lunch was served by the club members.
