

Boot and Shoe Making.

The Subscriber has on hand, English calf skin very superior, French calf skin boot fronts, English and American sole leather, and can furnish first rate articles in the above line.

GEORGE BRACE.

Sydney Street, July 23d.

Pure Corn Starch.

PALATABLE, Nourishing and Healthy, unequalled for rich puddings, nice Blanc Mange, Pies, Custards, Cakes, Fried Cakes, Puffings, Ice Creams, &c. A great Delicacy for all, and a choice Diet for Invalids and Children. For sale by

W. R. WATSON

J. S. DEALEY,

SHIP BROKER AND COMMISSION AND SHIPPING AGENT, No. 7, Kent's Slip, New York.

Particular attention given to Freights and Vessels for the British Provinces and West Indies. Also, the sale of Coal, Fish, Lumber, and other Colonial Produce.

Carding Machines, &c.

The Subscribers offer for Sale Carding Machines, Machine Cards, Crank Plate, Cleaners, Wool Pickers, Powers, Frenzel Machines on a new construction. Orders punctually attended to. Address John Morris & Son, Sackville, County of Westmorland New Brunswick, or David Stewart, Charlotteville, July 18, 1855. If any

For Sale or to Let,

SEVERAL BUILDING LOTS, fronting on the East side of the Malpique, or Princeton Road, about a quarter of a mile from Charlotteville, and opposite to Spring Park. Apply to

WILLIAM FORGAN.

March 21st, 1855.

Lippincott's Cloth Mills.

WEST RIVER, PICTOU, N. S.

The Subscriber would inform the Inhabitants of Prince Edward Island, that he has erected a NEW Establishment for dressing Cloth, in addition to his old Mills, and having a sufficiency of water power, he will be able to do a greater quantity of work.

AGENTS:

M. KENNETH MCKENZIE, Charlotteville. ANDREW A. McDONALD, Esq., Georgetown. Cloth left with either of the above Agents, will be finished and returned with quicker despatch than usual.

Aug. 15.

S. LIPPINCOTT.

Dyeing and Cloth Dressing Establishment.

JOHN McP. FRASER of Pictou, N. S., begs to intimate to his numerous friends in Prince Edward Island, that from recent improvements in his Dyeing establishment he is enabled to give those favouring him with their custom a decided improvement in the appearance of his work particularly as regards his colours. From using only the best material as well as from personally superintending his establishments, he is enabled to give his customers the best and at charging moderate prices, he solicits a continuance of their favour.

AGENTS:

Georgetown, Finlay Mackenzie, Esq. White Sands, Mr. David Johnston, Charlotteville, Peter M'Gowan Esq., Queen St. St. Ann's, Redegre, Mr. Wm. Young, Merch. Pictou, Town, Mr. A. M'Phail,

WILLIAM C. HOBBS,

Brass Founder and Machinist, Shop—Corner of Great George and King Street, Charlotteville.

KEEPS constantly Manufacturing all kinds of Brass and Composition Castings, such as, Ship's Rudder, Brasses, Spikes, Bolt Wrenches, ornamental Patternings for Ships' Wheels and Capstons and Bells. Composition Mill Bushes and Threshing Machine Brasses, &c. All of which are warranted of the best material.

P. S. The highest price will be given for old Copper, Brass and Composition.

Valuable Farm & Business Stand.

FOR SALE, at very valuable BUSINESS STAND, at WILMOT CREEK BRIDGE, BRIDGE, consisting of Fifty Acres of prime LAND, all under cultivation, with the STORE, DWELLING HOUSE and OUT-OFFICES thereon. The Lease is for 999 years, and only subject to the Pound Seven Shillings, Currency, per annum, rent. Part of the purchase money may remain some time on interest, secured on the property if required. Enquire of HOWE D. BAXXAS, Charlotteville, or to the Subscriber on the premises.

JOHANNA CONNORS.

Wilmot Creek, Bedegre, Aug. 15. Also, Fifty Acres of Land on Lot 8. N.B.—If the above Property be not sold before the First of October next, it will be then offered at Public Auction. W

TO BE LET,

THE DWELLING HOUSE, and Premises near Government House, at present occupied by Captain Beazley, consisting of a Dwelling House which contains a spacious Dining-room and Drawing-room, Breakfast-room, 7 Bed-rooms, large Kitchen, Servant's Hall, 2 Servant's Bed-rooms, Pantry, Larder, Front-porch, large Entrance Hall, large Inner Hall, Back-porch, 2 Back entrances, Back and Front stair-case, Scullery, Bath and Wash-house, Lumber-room, and a splendid 6 roomed cellar.

A large and commodious Coach-house, 3 stabled stalls, Horse-stable, Cow-house, large Hay-loft and Grain-room, Manure-yard, large Kitchen garden with Fruit trees, &c., Flower garden, elegant front entrance and carriage drive, a large lawn extending to the Harbour with convenience for keeping boats, &c. Extensive plantation of young trees of all kinds, large Wood-house, Wash and shipping house, and a spacious and commodious yard.

There are front and back gate facing on different Streets, and a never failing well of water on the premises.

This splendid Manion from its situation commands the finest view of any place in Charlotteville, and from its proximity to Government House and other advantages the Subscriber cordially offers it as the most elegant, comfortable and desirable residence for a gentleman's family in or near Town For further particulars apply to DAVID WILSON, Richmond Street.

Sept. 6th, 1854.

NOTICE.

The Subscriber being about to close his present business, requests all persons indebted to him, to settle by the 10th of October, the 10th October next. All accounts unsettled after that date, will be sued for without further notice.

W. R. STEWART.

Sundayside, Aug. 30, 1855

BOAT LOST.

REWARD—A WHOLE BOAT drifted from Pictou-Capes on the 28th Aug., with sails and apparatus for Fishing. Bottom green, top sides black and white streak, inside green. Salvage will be paid by ALEXANDER LAIRD.

Rustico Cape, 6th Sept., 1855. x

APOTHECARIUS HALL.

The Old Established HOUSE, 1810. CHARLOTTETOWN, MAY, 1855.

T. DESBRISAY & Co.

HAVE just received, per late arrivals from London, a large and valuable assortment of their Supplies for the Season, comprising, in the whole, an Extensive and Varied Assortment of DRUGS & CHEMICALS, PERFUMERY, Brushes, Combs, Soaps, and other Toilet requisites; Paints, Oils, Colours, and Dye Stuffs; Fences, Spices, Confectionary, Medicated and other Lozenges; and all the Patent Medicines in repaite, and every other article usually kept in Family and Retail Druggists' Stores. The whole of which they can with confidence recommend to the public; and if quality be considered, at now, if not lower prices, than they can be procured in the market. Charlotteville, May 12, 1855.

From the Halifax Daily Sun.

The July number of Blackwood contains an article which is really valuable, if reviewed simply as an important addition to the contemporary history of the great struggle, now being made, for the control of the "Old Western Empire."

The writer of this contribution, it seems, had been a sojourner in Russia over a period of ten years, when the present hostile relations between that country and his own induced him to turn his face westward and homeward. Thus, there is every reason we should accept his statements touching the state of things at present existing in the interior of the autocrat's wide dominions, as altogether to be relied upon being based to a great extent upon the personal observation of one, whose intelligence and opportunities abundantly fitted him to hear testimony. Though the heart of the writer is evidently with his own people, he writes in unison with the ardent enthusiasm pervading all classes of the British Empire, still, his narrative reads as if wholly devoid of unreasoning prejudice, and the object were simply to depict "things as they are."

"It appears that in Russia, the great sufferers by the war are the landed proprietors, while the mercantiles, singularly enough, are indifferent to its continuance or desistment. His vigorous prosecution. The material losses suffer by the war, are, First, on account of the occupation of the Black Sea by the allied fleets, and the consequent large decrease in the demand of their linseed, fax, corn and tallow for exportation, which is estimated to have cost them one-third of their income during the past year, although they have saved themselves from absolute ruin, by the transportation of their wool overland to Germany. The late expedition to the Azoff it appears inflicted less loss upon the Russian government than upon individuals; for of the immense quantities of corn destroyed there, not more than one fifth was intended for the troops, the remainder being private property."

"The second oppressive effect of the war is felt through the conscription tax, which, always severe, (being at the rate of seven men yearly from every thousand serfs) had been, during the past eighteen months, at the rate of thirty-six from every thousand. In addition to the loss forever of these men, the proprietor is obliged to pay about forty dollars for the outfit and arms of each recruit, and to send with every body of the recruits a contingent, amounting to about one and a third number, to provide for the rejection as unfit for service."

"The third source of the woe of war to the home-dwelling Russian, is one infinite and various in its elements, and known under the name of voluntary contribution. These contributions are made at requirement; and during the past year have been astonishingly large and frequent. They are consisted, for instance, from one estate, on which are thirteen hundred serfs, of forty oxen for nations,—five wagons—ten a pair of horses and a driver each for the transport of troops to the Crimea,—thirty-six thousand pounds of biscuit, which were made and delivered in four weeks during harvest, requiring the labor of twenty oxen and drivers for four months,—ten wagons more with a pair of horses and a driver each,—$50 in money, in place of more oxen for nations,—and finally of seventy-two thousand pounds more of biscuit. In addition to voluntary contributions, such as the enormous rate, proprietors, great and small, and free serfs are called upon to furnish means of transportation for all munitions of war through the country. This service the serfs are obliged to perform, sometimes a hundred miles distant from their homes, cutting roads through snow from six to eight feet deep, and, as the tumbrils were put on wheels instead of sledges, furnishing twelve or fifteen horses to each tumbril, which number had to be doubled, and more than doubled, when the road led over a hill. From this service the peasants returned to find themselves literally "eaten out of house and home" by the troops who spread like locusts over the country devouring and stealing everything wherever they went. The troops themselves suffered in a corresponding degree from the severity of the weather during the last autumn and winter, and from the fatigue and sickness inevitable upon such long and harassing marches through the same country and the same climate which destroyed Napoleon's army. Even the Sisters of Mercy who set out from St. Petersburg about the middle of last November to attend the sick in the Crimea, although travelling with fifteen horses to each carriage, were unable to proceed after leaving Kharkoff, the capital of the Ukraine, until, after having doubled the number of their horses in vain, they were dragged out of the mire by oxen and went. The troops themselves suffered in a corresponding degree from the severity of the weather during the last autumn and winter, and from the fatigue and sickness inevitable upon such long and harassing marches through the same country and the same climate which destroyed Napoleon's army. Even the Sisters of Mercy who set out from St. Petersburg about the middle of last November to attend the sick in the Crimea, although travelling with fifteen horses to each carriage, were unable to proceed after leaving Kharkoff, the capital of the Ukraine, until, after having doubled the number of their horses in vain, they were dragged out of the mire by oxen and went. The troops themselves suffered in a corresponding degree from the severity of the weather during the last autumn and winter, and from the fatigue and sickness inevitable upon such long and harassing marches through the same country and the same climate which destroyed Napoleon's army. Even the Sisters of Mercy who set out from St. Petersburg about the middle of last November to attend the sick in the Crimea, although travelling with fifteen horses to each carriage, were unable to proceed after leaving Kharkoff, the capital of the Ukraine, until, after having doubled the number of their horses in vain, they were dragged out of the mire by oxen and went. The troops themselves suffered in a corresponding degree from the severity of the weather during the last autumn and winter, and from the fatigue and sickness inevitable upon such long and harassing marches through the same country and the same climate which destroyed Napoleon's army. Even the Sisters of Mercy who set out from St. Petersburg about the middle of last November to attend the sick in the Crimea, although travelling with fifteen horses to each carriage, were unable to proceed after leaving Kharkoff, the capital of the Ukraine, until, after having doubled the number of their horses in vain, they were dragged out of the mire by oxen and went. The troops themselves suffered in a corresponding degree from the severity of the weather during the last autumn and winter, and from the fatigue and sickness inevitable upon such long and harassing marches through the same country and the same climate which destroyed Napoleon's army. Even the Sisters of Mercy who set out from St. Petersburg about the middle of last November to attend the sick in the Crimea, although travelling with fifteen horses to each carriage, were unable to proceed after leaving Kharkoff, the capital of the Ukraine, until, after having doubled the number of their horses in vain, they were dragged out of the mire by oxen and went. The troops themselves suffered in a corresponding degree from the severity of the weather during the last autumn and winter, and from the fatigue and sickness inevitable upon such long and harassing marches through the same country and the same climate which destroyed Napoleon's army. Even the Sisters of Mercy who set out from St. Petersburg about the middle of last November to attend the sick in the Crimea, although travelling with fifteen horses to each carriage, were unable to proceed after leaving Kharkoff, the capital of the Ukraine, until, after having doubled the number of their horses in vain, they were dragged out of the mire by oxen and went. The troops themselves suffered in a corresponding degree from the severity of the weather during the last autumn and winter, and from the fatigue and sickness inevitable upon such long and harassing marches through the same country and the same climate which destroyed Napoleon's army. Even the Sisters of Mercy who set out from St. Petersburg about the middle of last November to attend the sick in the Crimea, although travelling with fifteen horses to each carriage, were unable to proceed after leaving Kharkoff, the capital of the Ukraine, until, after having doubled the number of their horses in vain, they were dragged out of the mire by oxen and went. The troops themselves suffered in a corresponding degree from the severity of the weather during the last autumn and winter, and from the fatigue and sickness inevitable upon such long and harassing marches through the same country and the same climate which destroyed Napoleon's army. Even the Sisters of Mercy who set out from St. Petersburg about the middle of last November to attend the sick in the Crimea, although travelling with fifteen horses to each carriage, were unable to proceed after leaving Kharkoff, the capital of the Ukraine, until, after having doubled the number of their horses in vain, they were dragged out of the mire by oxen and went. The troops themselves suffered in a corresponding degree from the severity of the weather during the last autumn and winter, and from the fatigue and sickness inevitable upon such long and harassing marches through the same country and the same climate which destroyed Napoleon's army. Even the Sisters of Mercy who set out from St. Petersburg about the middle of last November to attend the sick in the Crimea, although travelling with fifteen horses to each carriage, were unable to proceed after leaving Kharkoff, the capital of the Ukraine, until, after having doubled the number of their horses in vain, they were dragged out of the mire by oxen and went. The troops themselves suffered in a corresponding degree from the severity of the weather during the last autumn and winter, and from the fatigue and sickness inevitable upon such long and harassing marches through the same country and the same climate which destroyed Napoleon's army. Even the Sisters of Mercy who set out from St. Petersburg about the middle of last November to attend the sick in the Crimea, although travelling with fifteen horses to each carriage, were unable to proceed after leaving Kharkoff, the capital of the Ukraine, until, after having doubled the number of their horses in vain, they were dragged out of the mire by oxen and went. The troops themselves suffered in a corresponding degree from the severity of the weather during the last autumn and winter, and from the fatigue and sickness inevitable upon such long and harassing marches through the same country and the same climate which destroyed Napoleon's army. Even the Sisters of Mercy who set out from St. Petersburg about the middle of last November to attend the sick in the Crimea, although travelling with fifteen horses to each carriage, were unable to proceed after leaving Kharkoff, the capital of the Ukraine, until, after having doubled the number of their horses in vain, they were dragged out of the mire by oxen and went. The troops themselves suffered in a corresponding degree from the severity of the weather during the last autumn and winter, and from the fatigue and sickness inevitable upon such long and harassing marches through the same country and the same climate which destroyed Napoleon's army. Even the Sisters of Mercy who set out from St. Petersburg about the middle of last November to attend the sick in the Crimea, although travelling with fifteen horses to each carriage, were unable to proceed after leaving Kharkoff, the capital of the Ukraine, until, after having doubled the number of their horses in vain, they were dragged out of the mire by oxen and went. The troops themselves suffered in a corresponding degree from the severity of the weather during the last autumn and winter, and from the fatigue and sickness inevitable upon such long and harassing marches through the same country and the same climate which destroyed Napoleon's army. Even the Sisters of Mercy who set out from St. Petersburg about the middle of last November to attend the sick in the Crimea, although travelling with fifteen horses to each carriage, were unable to proceed after leaving Kharkoff, the capital of the Ukraine, until, after having doubled the number of their horses in vain, they were dragged out of the mire by oxen and went. The troops themselves suffered in a corresponding degree from the severity of the weather during the last autumn and winter, and from the fatigue and sickness inevitable upon such long and harassing marches through the same country and the same climate which destroyed Napoleon's army. Even the Sisters of Mercy who set out from St. Petersburg about the middle of last November to attend the sick in the Crimea, although travelling with fifteen horses to each carriage, were unable to proceed after leaving Kharkoff, the capital of the Ukraine, until, after having doubled the number of their horses in vain, they were dragged out of the mire by oxen and went. The troops themselves suffered in a corresponding degree from the severity of the weather during the last autumn and winter, and from the fatigue and sickness inevitable upon such long and harassing marches through the same country and the same climate which destroyed Napoleon's army. Even the Sisters of Mercy who set out from St. Petersburg about the middle of last November to attend the sick in the Crimea, although travelling with fifteen horses to each carriage, were unable to proceed after leaving Kharkoff, the capital of the Ukraine, until, after having doubled the number of their horses in vain, they were dragged out of the mire by oxen and went. The troops themselves suffered in a corresponding degree from the severity of the weather during the last autumn and winter, and from the fatigue and sickness inevitable upon such long and harassing marches through the same country and the same climate which destroyed Napoleon's army. Even the Sisters of Mercy who set out from St. Petersburg about the middle of last November to attend the sick in the Crimea, although travelling with fifteen horses to each carriage, were unable to proceed after leaving Kharkoff, the capital of the Ukraine, until, after having doubled the number of their horses in vain, they were dragged out of the mire by oxen and went. The troops themselves suffered in a corresponding degree from the severity of the weather during the last autumn and winter, and from the fatigue and sickness inevitable upon such long and harassing marches through the same country and the same climate which destroyed Napoleon's army. Even the Sisters of Mercy who set out from St. Petersburg about the middle of last November to attend the sick in the Crimea, although travelling with fifteen horses to each carriage, were unable to proceed after leaving Kharkoff, the capital of the Ukraine, until, after having doubled the number of their horses in vain, they were dragged out of the mire by oxen and went. The troops themselves suffered in a corresponding degree from the severity of the weather during the last autumn and winter, and from the fatigue and sickness inevitable upon such long and harassing marches through the same country and the same climate which destroyed Napoleon's army. Even the Sisters of Mercy who set out from St. Petersburg about the middle of last November to attend the sick in the Crimea, although travelling with fifteen horses to each carriage, were unable to proceed after leaving Kharkoff, the capital of the Ukraine, until, after having doubled the number of their horses in vain, they were dragged out of the mire by oxen and went. The troops themselves suffered in a corresponding degree from the severity of the weather during the last autumn and winter, and from the fatigue and sickness inevitable upon such long and harassing marches through the same country and the same climate which destroyed Napoleon's army. Even the Sisters of Mercy who set out from St. Petersburg about the middle of last November to attend the sick in the Crimea, although travelling with fifteen horses to each carriage, were unable to proceed after leaving Kharkoff, the capital of the Ukraine, until, after having doubled the number of their horses in vain, they were dragged out of the mire by oxen and went. The troops themselves suffered in a corresponding degree from the severity of the weather during the last autumn and winter, and from the fatigue and sickness inevitable upon such long and harassing marches through the same country and the same climate which destroyed Napoleon's army. Even the Sisters of Mercy who set out from St. Petersburg about the middle of last November to attend the sick in the Crimea, although travelling with fifteen horses to each carriage, were unable to proceed after leaving Kharkoff, the capital of the Ukraine, until, after having doubled the number of their horses in vain, they were dragged out of the mire by oxen and went. The troops themselves suffered in a corresponding degree from the severity of the weather during the last autumn and winter, and from the fatigue and sickness inevitable upon such long and harassing marches through the same country and the same climate which destroyed Napoleon's army. Even the Sisters of Mercy who set out from St. Petersburg about the middle of last November to attend the sick in the Crimea, although travelling with fifteen horses to each carriage, were unable to proceed after leaving Kharkoff, the capital of the Ukraine, until, after having doubled the number of their horses in vain, they were dragged out of the mire by oxen and went. The troops themselves suffered in a corresponding degree from the severity of the weather during the last autumn and winter, and from the fatigue and sickness inevitable upon such long and harassing marches through the same country and the same climate which destroyed Napoleon's army. Even the Sisters of Mercy who set out from St. Petersburg about the middle of last November to attend the sick in the Crimea, although travelling with fifteen horses to each carriage, were unable to proceed after leaving Kharkoff, the capital of the Ukraine, until, after having doubled the number of their horses in vain, they were dragged out of the mire by oxen and went. The troops themselves suffered in a corresponding degree from the severity of the weather during the last autumn and winter, and from the fatigue and sickness inevitable upon such long and harassing marches through the same country and the same climate which destroyed Napoleon's army. Even the Sisters of Mercy who set out from St. Petersburg about the middle of last November to attend the sick in the Crimea, although travelling with fifteen horses to each carriage, were unable to proceed after leaving Kharkoff, the capital of the Ukraine, until, after having doubled the number of their horses in vain, they were dragged out of the mire by oxen and went. The troops themselves suffered in a corresponding degree from the severity of the weather during the last autumn and winter, and from the fatigue and sickness inevitable upon such long and harassing marches through the same country and the same climate which destroyed Napoleon's army. Even the Sisters of Mercy who set out from St. Petersburg about the middle of last November to attend the sick in the Crimea, although travelling with fifteen horses to each carriage, were unable to proceed after leaving Kharkoff, the capital of the Ukraine, until, after having doubled the number of their horses in vain, they were dragged out of the mire by oxen and went. The troops themselves suffered in a corresponding degree from the severity of the weather during the last autumn and winter, and from the fatigue and sickness inevitable upon such long and harassing marches through the same country and the same climate which destroyed Napoleon's army. Even the Sisters of Mercy who set out from St. Petersburg about the middle of last November to attend the sick in the Crimea, although travelling with fifteen horses to each carriage, were unable to proceed after leaving Kharkoff, the capital of the Ukraine, until, after having doubled the number of their horses in vain, they were dragged out of the mire by oxen and went. The troops themselves suffered in a corresponding degree from the severity of the weather during the last autumn and winter, and from the fatigue and sickness inevitable upon such long and harassing marches through the same country and the same climate which destroyed Napoleon's army. Even the Sisters of Mercy who set out from St. Petersburg about the middle of last November to attend the sick in the Crimea, although travelling with fifteen horses to each carriage, were unable to proceed after leaving Kharkoff, the capital of the Ukraine, until, after having doubled the number of their horses in vain, they were dragged out of the mire by oxen and went. The troops themselves suffered in a corresponding degree from the severity of the weather during the last autumn and winter, and from the fatigue and sickness inevitable upon such long and harassing marches through the same country and the same climate which destroyed Napoleon's army. Even the Sisters of Mercy who set out from St. Petersburg about the middle of last November to attend the sick in the Crimea, although travelling with fifteen horses to each carriage, were unable to proceed after leaving Kharkoff, the capital of the Ukraine, until, after having doubled the number of their horses in vain, they were dragged out of the mire by oxen and went. The troops themselves suffered in a corresponding degree from the severity of the weather during the last autumn and winter, and from the fatigue and sickness inevitable upon such long and harassing marches through the same country and the same climate which destroyed Napoleon's army. Even the Sisters of Mercy who set out from St. Petersburg about the middle of last November to attend the sick in the Crimea, although travelling with fifteen horses to each carriage, were unable to proceed after leaving Kharkoff, the capital of the Ukraine, until, after having doubled the number of their horses in vain, they were dragged out of the mire by oxen and went. The troops themselves suffered in a corresponding degree from the severity of the weather during the last autumn and winter, and from the fatigue and sickness inevitable upon such long and harassing marches through the same country and the same climate which destroyed Napoleon's army. Even the Sisters of Mercy who set out from St. Petersburg about the middle of last November to attend the sick in the Crimea, although travelling with fifteen horses to each carriage, were unable to proceed after leaving Kharkoff, the capital of the Ukraine, until, after having doubled the number of their horses in vain, they were dragged out of the mire by oxen and went. The troops themselves suffered in a corresponding degree from the severity of the weather during the last autumn and winter, and from the fatigue and sickness inevitable upon such long and harassing marches through the same country and the same climate which destroyed Napoleon's army. Even the Sisters of Mercy who set out from St. Petersburg about the middle of last November to attend the sick in the Crimea, although travelling with fifteen horses to each carriage, were unable to proceed after leaving Kharkoff, the capital of the Ukraine, until, after having doubled the number of their horses in vain, they were dragged out of the mire by oxen and went. The troops themselves suffered in a corresponding degree from the severity of the weather during the last autumn and winter, and from the fatigue and sickness inevitable upon such long and harassing marches through the same country and the same climate which destroyed Napoleon's army. Even the Sisters of Mercy who set out from St. Petersburg about the middle of last November to attend the sick in the Crimea, although travelling with fifteen horses to each carriage, were unable to proceed after leaving Kharkoff, the capital of the Ukraine, until, after having doubled the number of their horses in vain, they were dragged out of the mire by oxen and went. The troops themselves suffered in a corresponding degree from the severity of the weather during the last autumn and winter, and from the fatigue and sickness inevitable upon such long and harassing marches through the same country and the same climate which destroyed Napoleon's army. Even the Sisters of Mercy who set out from St. Petersburg about the middle of last November to attend the sick in the Crimea, although travelling with fifteen horses to each carriage, were unable to proceed after leaving Kharkoff, the capital of the Ukraine, until, after having doubled the number of their horses in vain, they were dragged out of the mire by oxen and went. The troops themselves suffered in a corresponding degree from the severity of the weather during the last autumn and winter, and from the fatigue and sickness inevitable upon such long and harassing marches through the same country and the same climate which destroyed Napoleon's army. Even the Sisters of Mercy who set out from St. Petersburg about the middle of last November to attend the sick in the Crimea, although travelling with fifteen horses to each carriage, were unable to proceed after leaving Kharkoff, the capital of the Ukraine, until, after having doubled the number of their horses in vain, they were dragged out of the mire by oxen and went. The troops themselves suffered in a corresponding degree from the severity of the weather during the last autumn and winter, and from the fatigue and sickness inevitable upon such long and harassing marches through the same country and the same climate which destroyed Napoleon's army. Even the Sisters of Mercy who set out from St. Petersburg about the middle of last November to attend the sick in the Crimea, although travelling with fifteen horses to each carriage, were unable to proceed after leaving Kharkoff, the capital of the Ukraine, until, after having doubled the number of their horses in vain, they were dragged out of the mire by oxen and went. The troops themselves suffered in a corresponding degree from the severity of the weather during the last autumn and winter, and from the fatigue and sickness inevitable upon such long and harassing marches through the same country and the same climate which destroyed Napoleon's army. Even the Sisters of Mercy who set out from St. Petersburg about the middle of last November to attend the sick in the Crimea, although travelling with fifteen horses to each carriage, were unable to proceed after leaving Kharkoff, the capital of the Ukraine, until, after having doubled the number of their horses in vain, they were dragged out of the mire by oxen and went. The troops themselves suffered in a corresponding degree from the severity of the weather during the last autumn and winter, and from the fatigue and sickness inevitable upon such long and harassing marches through the same country and the same climate which destroyed Napoleon's army. Even the Sisters of Mercy who set out from St. Petersburg about the middle of last November to attend the sick in the Crimea, although travelling with fifteen horses to each carriage, were unable to proceed after leaving Kharkoff, the capital of the Ukraine, until, after having doubled the number of their horses in vain, they were dragged out of the mire by oxen and went. The troops themselves suffered in a corresponding degree from the severity of the weather during the last autumn and winter, and from the fatigue and sickness inevitable upon such long and harassing marches through the same country and the same climate which destroyed Napoleon's army. Even the Sisters of Mercy who set out from St. Petersburg about the middle of last November to attend the sick in the Crimea, although travelling with fifteen horses to each carriage, were unable to proceed after leaving Kharkoff, the capital of the Ukraine, until, after having doubled the number of their horses in vain, they were dragged out of the mire by oxen and went. The troops themselves suffered in a corresponding degree from the severity of the weather during the last autumn and winter, and from the fatigue and sickness inevitable upon such long and harassing marches through the same country and the same climate which destroyed Napoleon's army. Even the Sisters of Mercy who set out from St. Petersburg about the middle of last November to attend the sick in the Crimea, although travelling with fifteen horses to each carriage, were unable to proceed after leaving Kharkoff, the capital of the Ukraine, until, after having doubled the number of their horses in vain, they were dragged out of the mire by oxen and went. The troops themselves suffered in a corresponding degree from the severity of the weather during the last autumn and winter, and from the fatigue and sickness inevitable upon such long and harassing marches through the same country and the same climate which destroyed Napoleon's army. Even the Sisters of Mercy who set out from St. Petersburg about the middle of last November to attend the sick in the Crimea, although travelling with fifteen horses to each carriage, were unable to proceed after leaving Kharkoff, the capital of the Ukraine, until, after having doubled the number of their horses in vain, they were dragged out of the mire by oxen and went. The troops themselves suffered in a corresponding degree from the severity of the weather during the last autumn and winter, and from the fatigue and sickness inevitable upon such long and harassing marches through the same country and the same climate which destroyed Napoleon's army. Even the Sisters of Mercy who set out from St. Petersburg about the middle of last November to attend the sick in the Crimea, although travelling with fifteen horses to each carriage, were unable to proceed after leaving Kharkoff, the capital of the Ukraine, until, after having doubled the number of their horses in vain, they were dragged out of the mire by oxen and went. The troops themselves suffered in a corresponding degree from the severity of the weather during the last autumn and winter, and from the fatigue and sickness inevitable upon such long and harassing marches through the same country and the same climate which destroyed Napoleon's army. Even the Sisters of Mercy who set out from St. Petersburg about the middle of last November to attend the sick in the Crimea, although travelling with fifteen horses to each carriage, were unable to proceed after leaving Kharkoff, the capital of the Ukraine, until, after having doubled the number of their horses in vain, they were dragged out of the mire by oxen and went. The troops themselves suffered in a corresponding degree from the severity of the weather during the last autumn and winter, and from the fatigue and sickness inevitable upon such long and harassing marches through the same country and the same climate which destroyed Napoleon's army. Even the Sisters of Mercy who set out from St. Petersburg about the middle of last November to attend the sick in the Crimea, although travelling with fifteen horses to each carriage, were unable to proceed after leaving Kharkoff, the capital of the Ukraine, until, after having doubled the number of their horses in vain, they were dragged out of the mire by oxen and went. The troops themselves suffered in a corresponding degree from the severity of the weather during the last autumn and winter, and from the fatigue and sickness inevitable upon such long and harassing marches through the same country and the same climate which destroyed Napoleon's army. Even the Sisters of Mercy who set out from St. Petersburg about the middle of last November to attend the sick in the Crimea, although travelling with fifteen horses to each carriage, were unable to proceed after leaving Kharkoff, the capital of the Ukraine, until, after having doubled the number of their horses in vain, they were dragged out of the mire by oxen and went. The troops themselves suffered in a corresponding degree from the severity of the weather during the last autumn and winter, and from the fatigue and sickness inevitable upon such long and harassing marches through the same country and the same climate which destroyed Napoleon's army. Even the Sisters of Mercy who set out from St. Petersburg about the middle of last November to attend the sick in the Crimea, although travelling with fifteen horses to each carriage, were unable to proceed after leaving Kharkoff, the capital of the Ukraine, until, after having doubled the number of their horses in vain, they were dragged out of the mire by oxen and went. The troops themselves suffered in a corresponding degree from the severity of the weather during the last autumn and winter, and from the fatigue and sickness inevitable upon such long and harassing marches through the same country and the same climate which destroyed Napoleon's army. Even the Sisters of Mercy who set out from St. Petersburg about the middle of last November to attend the sick in the Crimea, although travelling with fifteen horses to each carriage, were unable to proceed after leaving Kharkoff, the capital of the Ukraine, until, after having doubled the number of their horses in vain, they were dragged out of the mire by oxen and went. The troops themselves suffered in a corresponding degree from the severity of the weather during the last autumn and winter, and from the fatigue and sickness inevitable upon such long and harassing marches through the same country and the same climate which destroyed Napoleon's army. Even the Sisters of Mercy who set out from St. Petersburg about the middle of last November to attend the sick in the Crimea, although travelling with fifteen horses to each carriage, were unable to proceed after leaving Kharkoff, the capital of the Ukraine, until, after having doubled the number of their horses in vain, they were dragged out of the mire by oxen and went. The troops themselves suffered in a corresponding degree from the severity of the weather during the last autumn and winter, and from the fatigue and sickness inevitable upon such long and harassing marches through the same country and the same climate which destroyed Napoleon's army. Even the Sisters of Mercy who set out from St. Petersburg about the middle of last November to attend the sick in the Crimea, although travelling with fifteen horses to each carriage, were unable to proceed after leaving Kharkoff, the capital of the Ukraine, until, after having doubled the number of their horses in vain, they were dragged out of the mire by oxen and went. The troops themselves suffered in a corresponding degree from the severity of the weather during the last autumn and winter, and from the fatigue and sickness inevitable upon such long and harassing marches through the same country and the same climate which destroyed Napoleon's army. Even the Sisters of Mercy who set out from St. Petersburg about the middle of last November to attend the sick in the Crimea, although travelling with fifteen horses to each carriage, were unable to proceed after leaving Kharkoff, the capital of the Ukraine, until, after having doubled the number of their horses in vain, they were dragged out of the mire by oxen and went. The troops themselves suffered in a corresponding degree from the severity of the weather during the last autumn and winter, and from the fatigue and sickness inevitable upon such long and harassing marches through the same country and the same climate which destroyed Napoleon's army. Even the Sisters of Mercy who set out from St. Petersburg about the middle of last November to attend the sick in the Crimea, although travelling with fifteen horses to each carriage, were unable to proceed after leaving Kharkoff, the capital of the Ukraine, until, after having doubled the number of their horses in vain, they were dragged out of the mire by oxen and went. The troops themselves suffered in a corresponding degree from the severity of the weather during the last autumn and winter, and from the fatigue and sickness inevitable upon such long and harassing marches through the same country and the same climate which destroyed Napoleon's army. Even the Sisters of Mercy who set out from St. Petersburg about the middle of last November to attend the sick in the Crimea, although travelling with fifteen horses to each carriage, were unable to proceed after leaving Kharkoff, the capital of the Ukraine, until, after having doubled the number of their horses in vain, they were dragged out of the mire by oxen and went. The troops themselves suffered in a corresponding degree from the severity of the weather during the last autumn and winter, and from the fatigue and sickness inevitable upon such long and harassing marches through the same country and the same climate which destroyed Napoleon's army. Even the Sisters of Mercy who set out from St. Petersburg about the middle of last November to attend the sick in the Crimea, although travelling with fifteen horses to each carriage, were unable to proceed after leaving Kharkoff, the capital of the Ukraine, until, after having doubled the number of their horses in vain, they were dragged out of the mire by oxen and went. The troops themselves suffered in a corresponding degree from the severity of the weather during the last autumn and winter, and from the fatigue and sickness inevitable upon such long and harassing marches through the same country and the same climate which destroyed Napoleon's army. Even the Sisters of Mercy who set out from St. Petersburg about the middle of last November to attend the sick in the Crimea, although travelling with fifteen horses to each carriage, were unable to proceed after leaving Kharkoff, the capital of the Ukraine, until, after having doubled the number of their horses in vain, they were dragged out of the mire by oxen and went. The troops themselves suffered in a corresponding degree from the severity of the weather during the last autumn and winter, and from the fatigue and sickness inevitable upon such long and harassing marches through the same country and the same climate which destroyed Napoleon's army. Even the Sisters of Mercy who set out from St. Petersburg about the middle of last November to attend the sick in the Crimea, although travelling with fifteen horses to each carriage, were unable to proceed after leaving Kharkoff, the capital of the Ukraine, until, after having doubled the number of their horses in vain, they were dragged out of the mire by oxen and went. The troops themselves suffered in a corresponding degree from the severity of the weather during the last autumn and winter, and from the fatigue and sickness inevitable upon such long and harassing marches through the same country and the same climate which destroyed Napoleon's army. Even the Sisters of Mercy who set out from St. Petersburg about the middle of last November to attend the sick in the Crimea, although travelling with fifteen horses to each carriage, were unable to proceed after leaving Kharkoff, the capital of the Ukraine, until, after having doubled the number of their horses in vain, they were dragged out of the mire by oxen and went. The troops themselves suffered in a corresponding degree from the severity of the weather during the last autumn and winter, and from the fatigue and sickness inevitable upon such long and harassing marches through the same country and the same climate which destroyed Napoleon's army. Even the Sisters of Mercy who set out from St. Petersburg about the middle of last November to attend the sick in the Crimea, although travelling with fifteen horses to each carriage, were unable to proceed after leaving Kharkoff, the capital of the Ukraine, until, after having doubled the number of their horses in vain, they were dragged out of the mire by oxen and went. The troops themselves suffered in a corresponding degree from the severity of the weather during the last autumn and winter, and from the fatigue and sickness inevitable upon such long and harassing marches through the same country and the same climate which destroyed Napoleon's army. Even the Sisters of Mercy who set out from St. Petersburg about the middle of last November to attend the sick in the Crimea, although travelling with fifteen horses to each carriage, were unable to proceed after leaving Kharkoff, the capital of the Ukraine, until, after having doubled the number of their horses in vain, they were dragged out of the mire by oxen and went. The troops themselves suffered in a corresponding degree from the severity of the weather during the last autumn and winter, and from the fatigue and sickness inevitable upon such long and harassing marches through the same country and the same climate which destroyed Napoleon's army. Even the Sisters of Mercy who set out from St. Petersburg about the middle of last November to attend the sick in the Crimea, although travelling with fifteen horses to each carriage, were unable to proceed after leaving Kharkoff, the capital of the Ukraine, until, after having doubled the number of their horses in vain, they were dragged out of the mire by oxen and went. The troops themselves suffered in a corresponding degree from the severity of the weather during the last autumn and winter, and from the fatigue and sickness inevitable upon such long and harassing marches through the same country and the same climate which destroyed Napoleon's army. Even the Sisters of Mercy who set out from St. Petersburg about the middle of last November to attend the sick in the Crimea, although travelling with fifteen horses to each carriage, were unable to proceed after leaving Kharkoff, the capital of the Ukraine, until, after having doubled the number of their horses in vain, they were dragged out of the mire by oxen and went. The troops themselves suffered in a corresponding degree from the severity of the weather during the last autumn and winter, and from the fatigue and sickness inevitable upon such long and harassing marches through the same country and the same climate which destroyed Napoleon's army. Even the Sisters of Mercy who set out from St. Petersburg about the middle of last November to attend the sick in the Crimea, although travelling with fifteen horses to each carriage, were unable to proceed after leaving Kharkoff, the capital of the Ukraine, until, after having doubled the number of their horses in vain, they were dragged out of the mire by oxen and went. The troops themselves suffered in a corresponding degree from the