THE DAILY EXAMINER
AUGUST 11, 1899.
A TEST OF SINCERITY

After Sir Wilfrid Laurier had announced the determination of the Government to obey the mandate of the minority in the Prohibition Plebiscite, and to flout that of the 14,000 majority, The Guardian was extremely anxious that the Conservative party should at once embrace the cause of the prohibitionists. We pointed out that the Conservative party was made up of many men, and had many and various interests to consider—its great object being the efficient management of public affairs and the promotion of the interests of the public at large; that if it should forfeit the support of all those who are opposed to prohibition, it would need a strong guarantee that it would have the undivided support of those who are in favor of prohibition; and that the most natural and most effective way for the prohibitionists to show their sincerity and their power was to unite to vote out the Government which had deceived and insulted them. The Guardian was at that time, if we remember rightly, indisposed to kick very hard; and it could not, of course, speak for the Liberal prohibitionists throughout Canada. There was, however, an alternative and that was provincial prohibition. For provincial prohibition The Guardian pleaded. But the Liberal Government has crushed this aspiration as unceremoniously as it did the majority vote in favor of National prohibition. Our discreet contemporary is, therefore, thrown back upon the alternative of exhorting its Liberal friends to unite with the Conservatives in voting out those who have deceived them. Strangely enough, it hesitates to do so,—even though urged by the cogent arguments and powerful voice of Mr. Duncan Marshall. The Guardian is, of course, always discreet, and discretion is, we all know, the better part of valour. But we submit that if it has the cause of prohibition at heart, if it thinks more of prohibition than it does of the Liberal party, it will at once set about advocating the adoption of Mr. Marshall's advice to prohibitionists, viz: the Federal government should be voted down—that was Mr. Marshall's word—because they had deceived the prohibitionists and insulted the intelligence of the electorate, and the Provincial Government should be voted down because they have betrayed a principle to which their leader was in honour bound. This is at once the quickest, simplest and best way by which the prohibitionists can show their sincerity and their power. The Guardian's bullets will be effective in the advancement of prohibition if it should adopt THE EXAMINER'S suggestion and follow Mr. Marshall's advice. We ask our discreet contemporary to carefully consider the matter. If it should persuade its Liberal prohibition friends to unite with the Conservative party in ridding the country of our $60,000,000 government, Prohibition will have a claim upon the attention of the Conservatives and the country. At any rate the value of the prohibition vote will have been demonstrated. Does the Guardian really desire the triumph of prohibition more than it does the continued rule of the Liberal Party? We shall soon see.

—The Acadians who were induced to vote for Meddie Gallant to secure a French judge are now realizing what there is in Liberal promises. "Farquharson and Laurier are all the same one brother."

A BABEL OF DANGER.

Sir,—With skilled negligence the machine is allowed to run, making disciplined inaction the substitute for life and energy. "No man can serve to masters" is a Divine declaration; but the genius of our corporate body laughs at inspired treachery, and with one magic pass deprecates the force of accepted philosophy. To serve two, three or even a dozen masters, seems fully within the scope of this originary power. For instance, the city surveyor is employed by the city for, say, 312 working days for which he receives a full salary, and higher than that upon which his predecessor accepted office. The same individual is also engaged for, say, 312 days as water works superintendent for which he also receives another full salary. He also seems to have an entered service in the sewer department or a further 312 days in the year at a third salary for an unknown amount. He is thus paid for 936 days of service in a year of only 312 days. When you ask a service such as this, you lay yourself open to the charge of "either knave or fool." But when you go further and undertake to make him dance continually to the tune of an unreliable horn and become a subsidiary flanker to a public joint stock monopoly, you relieve us of any difficulty in guessing which. How can you better account for the confusion of our street management? Why then wonder that instructions from the council are treated with contempt and man-traps allowed to remain at pleasure upon our public avenues? Why marvel that mines of electrical energy are set, and wires for the possible transmission of fire and death spread in reckless confusion over millions of dollars worth of our property and thousands of human lives? Why look with surprise at the engineer's reports of fires from "causes unknown." At the fires caused by electricity, and facts hushed up, that even the burning of the city fire alarm was kept quiet, so quiet that even the chairman of the fire board had to learn of it from outside sources. In verity, a Babel of offices and a Babel of masters can outwit the confusion of a Babel of tongues.

We have two electric light plants who exercise reasonable caution to ensure safety from the powerful currents under their control. But what can their efforts avail when forced to play hide and seek with hundreds of other wires spread like a ragged and tangled net in every direction and carry them on to a mission of destruction. Those companies are compelled to run their lines at their own discretion. They get no assistance from the city officials whom the statute appoints to regulate the matter.

While this classic neglect goes on, the danger of fire or loss of life still lurks around,—but with no signal for warning. None know who will be the next victim or victims. With unstable guardians upon the watch towers, they rest unconscious of the loaded danger strings overhead.

In comparative mildness I have opened up a few features of the situation. I would arouse the slumbering civic machinery, gently if possible, for rude awakening is dangerous in heavy slumber. But if sharper pricks are necessary I must use them that consciousness may be restored; for they sleep at the mouth of a loaded cannon with the slow match already burning close to the priming.

Respectfully,

—The Patriot has private advices to the effect that Sir Louis Davies will be here in a day or two. We sincerely hope that his friends who want offices, etc., will give him an opportunity to rest. Naturally the honorable gentleman is exhausted after taking an active part in the voting away of $62,000,000 of the peoples' money and in fighting the evidence in the ballot-stuffing case.

—The "impatience" of Sir Louis Davies with those who wanted to stipulate that the Province of Prince Edward Island might not, in certain circumstances, be compelled to pay the full amount of $12,000 a year on account of the Hillsborough bridge is explained by the fact that he knew his party would not pass it in any other way. Fair play for Sir Louis.

Sir Louis Davies used to think an expenditure of $38,000,000 or $40,000,000 "monstrous," "extravagant," "scandalous." Now he comes home to take a rest after voting away $62,000,000.
