That Body Of Yours

RETURNING FROM OVERSEAS

As our wounded men and women return from overseas, our first thought is to get them re-established so they will be their old selves again. As near to being their old selves as is humanly possible. Naturally we never think that too much care can be given to those who have risked their lives and gave themselves for our freedom. However, this rehabilitation must be handled in a sympathetic manner, always with the idea of helping them to help themselves. No one can estimate the amount of damage done to the brain and to the emotions of one who has experienced the effects of war.

In an article in The Rehabilitation Review, Dr. John A. P. Millar reports the good work and the mistakes made by rehabilitation physicians in caring for our returned men.

- 1. There was insufficient knowledge and therefore not enough understanding of the nature and impact of the social environment in which the patient lived and had his being. This situation was often complicated by loss of employment and the necessity for applying for assistance.
2. The evaluation of the patient's psychology was incomplete.
3. Special emphasis should be laid on the constructive significance of early teamwork shown in the handling of his problems. This was shown by the advice given to the patient to consult Mobility, Inc., and by joint decision between the physician and the social work supervisor to join forces in following up his case. The resultant improvement in the patient's rehabilitation, therefore, could be said to have been due entirely to streamlined planning and full cooperation of all the agencies concerned.

The Stars Say

By Genevieve Kambale

For Tomorrow SUNDAY finds the stars in most friendly aspect where social activities are concerned. Any plans you have made for the entertainment of friends or relatives should work out most pleasantly. Romance, courtship and travel are under extremely benign influence now.

This is also an excellent period in which to reciprocate favors, indulge in group activities, encourage new friendships; in general, to concentrate on personal relationship to the exclusion of business problems.

For the Birthday

If tomorrow is your birthday, you should find the year ahead one of quiet but steady progress. The successful culmination of a cherished program, perhaps within the next two months, may incline you, in a spirit of optimism, to increase your financial obligations or to take on more responsibility than you can reasonably handle, but don't yield to the temptation.

During the fall, you will enter a more propitious period for taking on new ventures or indulging in the luxuries for which you yearn.

During July and August, you may have to make important decisions regarding a change of living environment or travel, but do not make them without

ELLEN'S DIARY

By An Island Farmer's Wife

And now to end the week there is rain on the windows. Out of the night-clouds it descends, in a shower which washes gently the panes. It was preceded, we remember, by snowfall. Great feathery flakes that grasped the bare branches of the lawn trees in passing, adorning whitely also every roof and post and fence-rail about.

James came in then with flakes lingering on his shoulders, and it came to mind that these were not those of the winter cold and austere but rather the teasing fragments of spring. James had been to "the other farm", next over to this place of Rob's, gathering up with the younger farmer the last grain in a bin there, to make grout for the mill, the "chop" to be used in the stables.

"There's a fair-good supply of straw up there yet," he comments now to Rob. And on another thought queries, "just whereabouts are you planning to cut your lumber there?" Not that all three have not already settled the best spot in mind, a fact which to us and the family is a direct gift of Heaven in this pleasant partnership which has suffered no rifts as yet. Not even the faintest ripple of displeasure has appeared to mar the pleasant comradeship which has existed so agreeably all down the years.

It is true we have sometimes heard patriarchal murmurs at the addition of more livestock, but in the main James is as interested as one others and lends his approval to all the younger farmers' ventures. He, it was who especially encouraged them as youngsters to learn by practice the financial ends of the farming. And if they odd times learned "the hard way" in the long run these experiences were to their profit.

"And so you've been trading?" we overheard James say to Gage recently as the latter had recounted to him some of his exploits. "And were you satisfied with your deal?" The youngster smiled.

"It's one way," James nodded, "of training a fellow to keep his eyes open. But," he chuckled, "I wouldn't advise you to go into it yet."

A nice week this has been, though of variable March weather, the mild lovely days changing quickly to those over-set by prying winds. But how gracious mostly were the nights, as the moon of month spent her silver stores along the length and height of this valley!

This week, Jamie noted on a calendar the opening date of trout season. And we saw the Lenten season bearing folks steadily nearer to Easter. And counting our savings we recalled how easy, indeed how natural it is when incensed even for a moment, to give back the grievous word—one with a wicked barb to it, forgetful that it will lodge "forever and a day" in the red fastness of some human heart. Remembered too, on the other hand, that on provocative occasions, "Silence is golden."

W. E. Eisenhower says: "It's better just to weep a bit than have an ugly, angry, fit. When provocations cross your path: Or bow your head and breathe a prayer. That God may keep you sweet and fair. With lips that hide a tongue that's kind. While others speak their angry mind."

How Can I!!!

By Anne Ashley

Q. How can I clean cut glass? A. Wash in hot soap suds. Let the air dry it. Then rub with a Turkish towel, and this leaves no lint and gets into the cuts better than ordinary toweling.

Q. How should silk be laundered? A. Never wring silk, but allow it to hang loosely to dry, letting the water drip. Silks should always be dried in the shade.

Q. What is a good floor whitener? Ordinary beach sand is one of the best floor whiteners.

Morning Smile

The chairman's introduction was such a eulogy that the speaker looked bewildered as he stood up. "Ladies and gentlemen," he began, "I can hardly wait to hear what I am going to say."

Cook's Corner

ORANGE PUDDING 2 cups milk. 2 tbs. cornstarch. 4 eggs. Vanilla, salt. 2 oranges. 1 c. sugar.

Heat 1 1/2 c. milk in double boiler. Mix remainder of milk with cornstarch and egg yolks. Add to hot milk. Stir constantly until thickened.

Peel oranges, quarter, and cut in large bowl. Cover with sugar. Pour hot custard over oranges and sugar. Top with meringue made from egg whites, beaten stiff. Add 3 tbs. sugar and vanilla. Bake until brown. Serve cold. —Mrs. C. A. Woolner, Sterling, W. I.

DOROTHY DIX'S COLUMN

Moody Mother

Young Wife, Husband Desire To Leave Her Parents' House

DEAR MISS DIX: First for the background—my parents are in their early forties, and as far back as I can remember Dad has been unfaithful to mother. They have separated several times, but she's always taken him back, offering as an excuse the fact that she loves him in spite of everything.

Four years ago I married Gilbert. Our financial situation seemed secure, but at the time of our wedding things had gone a bit wrong for him, so to conserve our funds we took an upper apartment in my parents' home. Since Dad works away from home much of the time, that meant that Mom was with us a great deal. She's a wonderful person, but given to moods, which sometimes are rather trying. When Dad is home, everyone is supposed to wait on him hand and foot—he being fully aware of the honor he does the family by coming home!

Now to the problem. Gilbert and I are ready, at last, to finance our own home, but my parents don't want us to leave. They insist we can't afford our own home, etc. The real trouble is that Mom doesn't like to stay alone, and Dad has too many other interests to spend time with her (including, at the moment, another woman). Would it be cruel of us to go off on our own, or do you think we're obliged to stay here? We have one child, and hope for more.

AN INCONSIDERATE MOTHER Betty P.

ANSWER: Your mother is a comparatively young woman, and well able to make her own social life. There's no reason why she should have a phobia against being alone, but since she has, it's clearly up to your father to do something about it. He's shirked family responsibility for many years and it's about time he decided to take some on. Your mother has chosen her life deliberately; she knows he's unfaithful and South was well aware that he had no right, technically, to bid the slam over North's return to five spades, since North had assumed captaincy with his use of Blackwood. But the mere fact of North's jumping to three diamonds on the first round gave South the fixed idea that a slam must be possible—so he bid it. Actually, with North putting down such a horrible diamond suit, there was virtually no chance for the slam, but strange things can happen at the bridge table.
