Ferry Figures Show Decline

The number of passengers travelling on the ferries in the month of October 1965 is down 469 from the number travelling in the same month last year, it was shown in traffic figures released yesterday by Northumberland Ferries Limited.

A total of 16,875 passengers travelled in October last year with 15,906 travelling this year. Although the passenger rate was down the number of cars increased from 5,355 to 5,422 making 167 more this year.

Trucks using the ferry facilities were down from 1,501 to 1,377 or 124 less this year than last.

However the total figures from May to October this year show an increase in passengers and both modes of travel over last year's figures.

There were 219,764 passengers in that period this year in comparison with 215,469 last year; 69,772 cars compared with 67,871 and 10,711 trucks compared with 10,389, meaning an increase of 4,315, 1,901 and 322 respectively.

He predicted the Liberals would win more than 143 seats. Mr. Diefenbaker, whose minority government fell on a confidence vote in 1963, dealt only lightly with the issue but predicted that his party would win a majority this time.

The leaders of the smaller parties came out solidly against a majority, arguing that most of the better legislation passed by Parliament in the last decade resulted from compromises forced on a minority administration.

Each of the three hopes his group will hold the balance of power in another minority situation. Mr. Douglas has pledged to back a minority winner, if agreement can be reached on including NDP policies in the legislative program.

Mr. Diefenbaker made scandal a major issue, citing the Rivard case night after night.

He said the Conservatives would "clean up the mess." The prime minister said it had already been cleaned up.

Old age pensions, federal aid to universities, medical insurance, farm prices, the sales tax and resource development were also argued back and forth with every party promising some kind of action on each.

Throughout the campaign there were reports of public apathy towards the whole thing, but it wasn't reflected in the enthusiastic crowds that turned out for most of the major rallies.

Much of the spectator interest, however, centred on the two main personalities fighting what last big political battle. It was the fourth contest be-

VISIT SCHEDULED

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) — Wladyslaw Gomulka, Polish Communist party chairman, and Premier Josef Cyrankiewicz, will head an official delegation to Yugoslavia in mid-November, the Yugoslav government announced Thursday.

The visit originally was set for the beginning of October, but was postponed because President Tito was afflicted with grippe.

Hecklers Plague Both

But during the final week there was a third element—the rowdy hecklers and demonstrators who plagued both men, particularly Mr. Pearson. Security forces were called in after rowdy outbursts in Montreal, where a home-made bomb was found in a hall after Mr. Pearson's rally.

It was also the last campaign that will be fought on the basis of present riding boundaries, set up in 1952 on the basis of the 1951 census. A new electoral map, based on the 1961 census, is to become law next year. Nearly every riding will be reshaped.

Early in the campaign Mr. Pearson faced a storm of criticism over his decision that the election could not be delayed to await the new redistribution of seats.

Some of the voters have already made their choice. Last Saturday and Monday, an estimated 80,000-odd made use of the advance polls set up to handle voters who expect to be away from home on election day. Members of the armed forces began marking ballots Monday in all-week voting.

Results of the advance poll are not tabulated until election night. The armed forces vote likely will be announced Saturday, Nov. 13.

Liberals' Program Said Most Vital And Thrilling

One of the "most vital and thrilling programs" ever undertaken by a Canadian government is the Liberal government's "declared war on poverty," Mark MacGuigan, Liberal candidate for Queen's with B.B. Jones of Lunenburg, declared last night at a public meeting at Vernon River — the last such meeting prior to a final public rally to be held tonight at the Basilea Recreation Centre in Charlottetown.

Mr. Jones in his Vernon River speech stressed mainly the many new jobs which would be created for Islanders through various Liberal programs, including the causeway which, he said, would give well-paying jobs to hundreds over the next five or six years. Mr. Jones also declared that the Wood Islands ferry service would not only be continued, but expanded, "with improved facilities under a Liberal administration."

The Liberal government's war on poverty, as announced in the 1965 Throne Speech "and already considerably initiated," said Dr. MacGuigan, "is essentially a program for the full utilization of our human resources and the elimination of poverty among our people."

Although the goals themselves are not new admitted Dr. MacGuigan, "the extent to which they can and are being achieved is new and the methods of achieving them are new."

Much in the way of poverty had already been eliminated, said the candidate, through encouragement to economic growth and through greatly widened social security benefits — help for the aged the sick the unemployed and disabled and those with large families.

WIDENED PROGRAM

"What is now planned," he said "is a greatly widened work and opportunity program which is aimed directly at preventing poverty caused by people through no real fault of their own being outside the mainstream of the country's economic life."

Among the situations leading to poverty which were being and would be attacked even more vigorously under continued Liberal administration he said were: lack of adequate schooling and training in trade and industrial skills physical and health handicaps lack of mobility in the labor force slum conditions, rural isolation, uneconomic utilization of land, industrial decline and change and all the difficult readjustment resulting from automation in many different fields.

"When men and women miss in one way or another the mainstream of the new economy they are trapped," said Dr. MacGuigan "and without help can do little but become charges on the communities in which they live."

Social security alone was not the answer he said. "These unfortunate people must be rehabilitated so that they may continue to live useful lives and contribute to our national productivity."

Much already had been done through improved facilities for technical and vocational training for normal workers and those handicapped through ARDA programs affecting depressed rural areas and through encouragement to industrial development in backward areas. But this was not enough.

SPECIAL COMMITTEE

"The prime minister himself is chairing a special cabinet committee to work out new approaches and new solutions," said Dr. MacGuigan. "And I find this very thrilling as a challenge to more effective government action." Six programs, he said, had been chosen for immediate development. These had to do directly with manpower mobility, manpower training, area industrial development, rural development, the Canada Assistance Plan to provide extra financial aid when needed and for
