

Miss X.

Dear Miss X

My friend of mine wants me to go out with his friend as a "favour". Problem is I don't like his friend he makes me feel uncomfortable. But he likes me and is always after my friend to "fix us up". What should I do?

Uncomfortable

Dear Uncomfortable

Don't go out with him. If he makes you feel uncomfortable you don't "owe" it to anyone to go out with him. You should always follow your instincts. If your friend really your friend he'll understand.

Miss X

Dear Miss X

My friends are mostly Business students and I'm in Arts. This is my first year and they are always teasing me about being in Arts courses. What should I do.

Arts

Dear "Just" Arts

Use to it! You will always hear jokes about arts courses being easy. Funny thing is, there not. Wait until next year when your course load will be heavy. My joke about us not having exams we have to write paper. Ha Ha. I would love to see some business students I know write a 20 page paper (on average) little they have three of them due weeks apart.

Miss X

Miss X

My best friend is dating a member of one of UPEI's sports teams and they have been seeing each other for a long time. Speaking from experience I know that he has not been faithful. I am just as guilty as him for not telling her in the first place but I thought it was only going to be a one shot deal. That was almost a year ago and nothing has changed. We're still together and so are they, at first I could handle this but now I want him for good. Losing her friendship is not what I wanted but if it means keeping him, I would. I'm just scared I'll lose him too. Any advise?

Fatal Attraction

Dear Fatal Attraction

OPEN YOUR EYES!! If this guy stayed with you after you expose your affair, he will not be faithful to you. He may for a while but once he gets bored with one girl he will start cheating on you.

As for keeping your friendship with your "best friend" I don't think you are much of a best friend. she obviously can't trust you. If she forgives you she deserves a medal.

As for you, you should be ashamed of yourself. You don't deserve her friendship. Anyone who would stab a friend in the back like that is not anyone in my books.

You should end the relationship with this guy he will only hurt you in the end. Then tell this girl what you and her boyfriend have done. If she forgives you then you better work your butt off to earn her trust back.

Miss X