

DON'T WASTE YOUR TIME.

AN ADDRESS FOR PERSONS SEEKING THEIR FORTUNE. This caution is applicable to all, but more especially to young men, and the incident was of good to relate...

Two young clerks in a large American tinware and French house, although they boarded in different houses, yet they were constantly together during the hours of recreation from business.

One of them had been presented with a little French poodle, and he at once set about instructing it to perform all the little tricks which he bred to do.

The owner of Grotto was a little the senior in the store of the other, and, as he was a Frenchman, he was naturally more conversant with the principal member of the firm, and looking very much downcast, approached his friend.

"Tom," said he, "the firm want to send one of the clerks this summer to France by goods, and they have offered the chance to every young man in the firm, but you and I are the only ones who have not done so."

"Why yours, of course. Ha, ha, ha! They put the question all around, out of politeness, and as an apology, to satisfy you, ha, ha, ha!—why somebody will be engaged, and all of us headed off."

"Of course," said one of the firm, "you should have the situation, if you could only get before the firm, and in glowing terms, you would be engaged, and all of us headed off."

"Well," said Tom, "it can't be helped, and we must suppose, to satisfy our curiosity, so I must just do the best I can. Mr. Tourette, shall you and I have a little chat, and perhaps I may pass muster."

"You are not to be in a hurry," said the partner that Tom was fully competent for the place. "Tom was a great favorite, and the firm were holding the situation; and he was instructed to prepare himself for departure by the next steamer, with the privilege of peeping into the office."

"Tom now returned to his friend, who met him with a right good Ha, ha, ha! "Well, Tom, no use; I told you so. I was right, and you are wrong. I was right, and you are wrong. I was right, and you are wrong."

"What is the difference between a thought straining you, and your falling into the Atlantic, in the one case you have a notion, and in the other you have a certainty."
