

Our Highlanders at Halifax.

COLONEL MCGILL and his co-delegates of the Caledonia Club deserve the thanks of the community for not allowing Prince Edward Island to be quite forgotten by the Governor General and the Princess Louise.

We cannot help mentioning our regret that no member of the Island Government welcomed the Governor General and his Royal wife to the country of which we form a part that ought not to be lost sight of.

Capital and Labor.

A London special says a fresh war between capital and labor has broken out in Lancaster, dashing the hopes of those who anticipated a revival of trade in England, and adding additional gloom to the situation already depressing enough.

THE British Wesleys, notwithstanding the severe pressure of bad times, have, we note, undertaken a serious financial task. They propose to raise, within a couple of years or so, one million dollars, as a general relief fund.

On the evening of Wednesday last, the Presbytery of P. E. Island met in the Prince Street Presbyterian Church for the induction of the Rev. Dr. Murray. There was a very good congregation present.

The streets throughout the City are now extensively coated with the "beautiful mud," which threatens to swamp the crossings, and bids fair to reign supreme monarch of the town.

ADDRESS OF THE CALEDONIA CLUB OF P. E. ISLAND AND HIGHLAND SOCIETY OF ANTIGONISH.

The address was read by Mr. Angus McGillivray, M. P. P. for Antigonish. To His Excellency The Most Honorable Sir JOHN DOUGLAS SUTHERLAND CAMPBELL, K. T., C.C.M.G., Marquis of Lorne, Governor-General of Canada, etc., etc.

We, the representatives of the Caledonia Club of Prince Edward Island and of the Highland Society of Antigonish, Nova Scotia, tender Your Excellency our most sincere congratulations upon your advent amongst us as Governor-General of Canada.

Among the four millions of people over whom your Excellency will rule, from the lochs of Cape Breton to the mountains of Vancouver, a large number will feel drawn to you by the accent of the Highland tongue.

To Her Royal Highness the Princess Louise we beg to tender also our enthusiastic and respectful welcome. Her presence among us makes us feel, more surely the high place held by Canada among the dependencies of the Crown in the brilliant and statesmanlike scheme of the later policy of the Empire.

WILLIAM MCGILL, Chairman of Delegates from Caledonia Club of P. E. Island.

ANGUS MCGILLIVRAY, Chief of Highland Society of Antigonish, N.S. REPLY.

To the President and Members of the Caledonia Club of Prince Edward Island and of the Highland Society of Antigonish.

I return you my thanks for the kind and complimentary address which you have presented.

I can assure you it is a matter of no small pleasure to me to find on this side of the Atlantic so many of Scotland's sons and their descendants, and to receive as Her Majesty's Representative your assurance of continued steadfast and devoted loyalty to the Throne and person of our Most Gracious Majesty.

I have been specially desired by the Princess to return to you her best acknowledgments for the enthusiasm with which you have been good enough to welcome her arrival in Canada, and we are both deeply touched by the high compliment you have paid us in having, at considerable personal inconvenience, come so great a distance for the purpose of bidding us welcome.

I hope that ere long an opportunity may be afforded me of making the personal acquaintance of more of the inhabitants of Prince Edward Island, than have been able to compose the deputation entrusted with the presentation of your loyal address.

LORNE.

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.

The New York Herald.

PERSONNEL OF THE MARQUIS AND PRINCESS.

The Marquis of Lorne, who appeared next, pleased everyone alike with his youth, his smile and his bearing. What the Queen alluded to in her diary as his "reddish hair" has since grown too nearly blonde to justify in itself the prediction among the early legends of the Argyll family that all the glories of the Campbell line are to be renewed in the first chief who in the hue of his locks approaches to Jan Roy Cean, "Red John the Great."

Noble names, if noble borne, Live within a nation's heart; If of such thou bearer be Never let that name for thee Paint the scorn shined within Its narrow bound.

Other hopes than thine hath part, For it once in life was theirs Who from weight of earthly cares Peace have found.

Yet remember 'tis a crown That can hardly be thine own Till thou win it by some deed That with glory fresh shall feed Their renown.

Pride of lineage, pomp of power, Heap dishonor on the drone; He shall lose his strength who never Uses it for fair endeavor— Brief his hour.

These are fair words, and something in the aspect of the young man, as he ascended the steps and responded to the greetings of the group who saluted him, denoted that they did not belie his real character and sentiments.

APPEARANCE OF THE PRINCESS.

The Princess, who accompanied him in a dark travelling suit, with a cap adorned with a feather, was, of course, the "cynosure of all male eyes," those of the assembled ladies being certainly diverted toward her noble and handsome husband. Any one who supposes that the stories about Queen Victoria's ugly children have the least grain of truth in them should have been here to be startled by the beauty, united to modest, grave and quietude which the people of Halifax cheered to-day. A face and manner more literally charming are seldom joined in the person of any lady whomsoever, and princesses who possess a scant portion of this one's loveliness are more than rare.

THE WELCOME TO LORNE.

The exceedingly enthusiastic reception which the city of Halifax gave yesterday to the Marquis of Lorne and his wife, the Princess Louise, is fully described in our despatches from that point. If any doubt were felt that the sending of a son-in-law of Her Majesty to rule over the Dominion would prove in the least unpopular or ill-advised it is dispelled by the events of yesterday. The good old city was stirred to a depth of enthusiasm such as she never felt before, and it is very certain that the exhibition of loyalty and affection she manifested toward the mother country is but the forerunner of the display of exuberant devotion that will be presented all over the chief colony of Great Britain.

(The New York World.)

THE MARQUIS AND PRINCESS IN THE PROCESSION.

Along the whole length of the procession not for one moment did His Excellency have an opportunity to replace his hat, while the Princess was kept smiling and bowing from the beginning to the end of the drive. It is certain that these qualities which have made the Princess Louise so popular in England were to-day displayed to the best advantage on this her first entrance upon public life in the Dominion of Canada. It is to her that the people chiefly look to supply the loss of their late Viceroy, whose popularity, now that he has gone, increases day by day instead of waning.

THE PRINCESS'S BEAUTY.

In the handsome street dress of the morning the Princess was beautiful. In the richer dress of the evening she was surpassingly lovely. Her beauty is of the style that endures. It is not made for youth only, but for a long lifetime. In receiving the Marquis is hardly equal to his predecessor, the Earl of Dufferin. He had not his kind and easy smile, nor yet his familiar style and grace, but he evidently meant to do the popular thing, and as evidently succeeded. The Princess certainly did, for she smiled most amiably on every one and fairly took the hearts of the people by storm.

THE GOVERNOR GENERAL AND THE PRESS.

Before the first ten minutes of the journey were over, His Excellency did a graceful act, which will be kindly remembered by the press representatives. The order passed to rise to receive the Governor General. In a moment he made his appearance and passed through the press car, and then the members of the press were introduced to him by Col. Littleton, His Excellency shaking hands with each, and expressing in a few affable words the pleasure he felt at meeting the gentlemen of the press. The manner of His Excellency was very gracious, and the close view which all had of him increased the favorable impressions of his appearance which had already been produced.

THE NEW GOVERNOR GENERAL'S TACT.

Lord Lorne's first words to the Canadians were skillfully framed and showed as much tact and sense as his last words on the other side in answer to an address from the corporation of Londonderry. There is at present and will be for some time to come no surer way to conciliate Canada than by praising their last ruler, and this obvious but to some men not very easy duty of his position was performed heartily and without reserve by Lord Lorne. A vain man, too, would have found it difficult to recognize and act upon the recognition not only that the interest of this first appearance at Halifax was at least divided between himself and his wife, but also that the Duke of Edinburgh was almost as much of a lion to the Halifaxians as either himself or the Princess. It is quite possible, as history has often shown, for a man to be officially jealous of his own wife, and Lord Lorne was even under some temptation to ignore the patent fact that the Canadians felt less honored by having the son of even so great a Scottish duke as the McCulloch Mor sent out to them as Governor-General than by having the Queen's daughter at the head of the social hierarchy of the Dominion. By his frank praise of Lord Dufferin and by the skill with which he put the Queen's son and the Queen's daughter into the foreground of his speech and withdrew himself as much as possible, the new Governor General gave the most favorable augury possible to be given in such a speech for the success of the administration.

SEVERAL merchants on the North Side of Queen Square, becoming heartily sick of the spathy which characterizes the City Council in the matter of laying a crossing between Queen and Great George Streets, formed themselves into a committee this morning, and temporarily placed a number of plank across the street in different parts. This consideration has been the means of bringing rich benedictions upon the heads of the benefactors, and the lustre upon the shoe leather remaineth longer than it formerly used to.

Genealogy of Her Royal Highness the Princess Louise.

Her Royal Highness, Louise, Caroline, Alberta, Princess of Lorne, is the fourth daughter of Her Imperial Majesty, our august Sovereign.

VICTORIA, who is the daughter of Prince Edward, Duke of Kent, who was son of George III., son of Frederick, Prince of Wales, son of George II., son of George I., Sophia, Electress of Hanover, who was daughter of Elizabeth, Queen of Bohemia, who was daughter of James I., of England, who was son of Mary, Queen of Scots, who was daughter of James III., of Scotland, who was son of Margaret, who was daughter of Henry VII., and Elizabeth, which Princess was the undoubted heiress to the Throne of England, Representative of the Red Rose, being daughter of Edward IV., who was son of Richard Plantagenet, Duke of York, who was son of Anne Mortimer, who was daughter of Roger, Earl of March, who was son of Philippa, who was daughter of Lionel, Duke of Clarence, who was son of Edward III., son of Edward II., son of Edward I., son of Henry III., son of Henry I., son of King John, son of Henry II., who was daughter of Empress Maude, who was son of Henry I.

WILLIAM THE CONQUEROR

Henry I, married Mathilda, who was daughter of Margaret, Queen of Malcolm III, of Scotland, who was daughter of Edward (the Ostracised) who was son of Edward the II, who was brother of Edward the III, the Confessor, the only Prince at that time, in England, who could pretend any right to the Crown. Edward, the Confessor, was son of Ethelred II, who was son of Edgar, son of Edmond I, son of Edward, called the Elder, who was son of ALFRED THE GREAT.

The commingling of the Milisian and English, Blood Royal, begins with, dates from, Mathilda, daughter, as already stated, of Malcolm III., of Scotland, and Queen of Henry I, of England.

Malcolm III, of Scotland, his orians reckon the 53rd Milisian occupant of the Scottish Throne, and descendant, 19 generations back of

Teagrus the Great, of Ireland, who was son of Earea, Queen of Murdoch, of Scotland, who was grandson of the Irish Monarch, Nial of "The Nine Hostages."

Queen Earea was daughter of Laro, King of Scotland, who was descendant, eight generations back, of Carabay, who was the founder of the Royal Milisian line, in Scotland, about the middle of the second century.

Carbay was son of Queen Larad, who was the daughter of the renowned Conn of the "Hundred Battles," who was the 110th King from Heremon, who was the first Supreme Monarch of all Ireland, of the Milisian race, and son of its great progenitor.
