

Professor focus

Professor Wills

Professor Wills has been teaching at UPEI for the last thirteen years. He teaches anthropology in a very informative way utilizing films, lectures, readings, class papers, and class discussions. Don't take a course from Professor Wills if you are afraid of learning something.

C: What field work have you done as an anthropologist?

W: I've done field work with the Subarctic Cree Indians. I've studied severely retarded adults in Washington State. I've done field work all over PEI.

C: Why did you come to UPEI?

W: For a job. I liked the name Prince Edward Island. Lots of reasons, many things I liked - The size of the anthropology department and the young faculty. Often other universities will have a larger and older faculty, where you'd have to wait until someone retired if you wanted to teach a certain course. Here you have more freedom to choose what to teach, and you have more contact with the students.

C: Describe the typical student in your class.

W: Lots of variation, very hard to say if there's a typical. Most students are interested in the material and anthropology. Most people really enjoy doing the research paper. They find it fun.

C: Have you published any books?

W: I've done two books. Conflicting Perceptions and The Institutionalized Severely Retarded.

C: What one magazine would you work as editor if given the chance?

W: Probably the Scientific American. I like it because they do articles on science for the public. They try to explain complex issues of science to the public.

C: Is it like Omni magazine?

W: No Scientific American is more technical than Omni.

C: What kind of movies and entertainment do you like?

W: I enjoyed the "Terminator 2" but I thought the first one was better. I really enjoyed "The Baghdad Cafe". La Grand Ballet in Montreal was great.

by Chris McCarron

Dear Tenant;
We'd like to take this opportunity to welcome you to our newly renovated building. Please note that as of January 1, 1984, all lights will be turned off at 10:00 PM.

Best Regards,

BIG BROTHER
Holdings Ltd.

