

Predicts Ice Blockade Of Entire Newfoundland Coast

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP) — A veteran observer of the coast waters of Newfoundland said Tuesday there was "a very good chance" of an ice blockade on every coast of the province before his winter ends.

Capt. R. J. Randell, district marine agent for the department of transport, said unless the weather turned freakish the usually ice-free south coast would be sealed as solidly as the west coast and the northeast coast are at present.

Ice continued to sprawl across the horizon off St. John's Tuesday. It had cleared out of Trinity and Conception Bays—most southern bays of the east coast—but refused to budge far from their entrances despite the urging of westerly winds.

The westerlies that eased the pressure on coasts near here brought the ice hard against the west coast again after the beginning of a respite.

The south coast, where little heavy ice has been reported so far this winter—should get its share with a wind shift, Capt. Randell said. "We'll have an easterly wind and it will block the coast from top to bottom. We've always had easterlies. We'll get one soon unless the world has changed."

MOVE SOUTH
He said ice ran from the Arctic along the northeast coast and around the southeastern corner of the province to the Grand Banks. It spilled through the Straits of Belle Isle and ran through the Gulf of St. Lawrence and out on

FREE PEOPLE (Everywhere)
On the summit of the mountains And o'er the fathoms of the sea There's a joy within the conscience Of the people who are free.

They may live upon the prairies Where the wheatland kiss the breeze As it rolls and sways in rhythm Like the waves upon the seas

Men may drill for oil in Texas In Oklahoma, Cal. or Mo. Or pick cotton in the Southland Where the maize and peanuts grow.

They may dairy in the Northland, Or farm 'tatoes down in Maine; They may fish along the coastline Or in mine lands stake their claim.

For the minerals that are buried In the crevice, crack and seams As the fusions in the atoms Or where gold and silver gleams

Workers live and laugh in mill-towns Office girls have skill and charm And the home resounds with laughter In the city, town and farm.

In every state across the nation From the midlands to the sea,— The flag of freedom waves in glory Over people who are free.

Sunday Paper Suggests The Duke Be Made Prince Consort

LONDON (CP) — Queen Elizabeth was advised Sunday to make the Duke of Edinburgh her prince consort.

The suggestion comes from The People, a leading Sunday newspaper. It emphasizes that, under the present royal setup, the duke is officially "a man without a real job."

"Until he is given one," the newspaper says, "he will always be tempted to seek out for himself a real job of work and go off on extended goodwill trips around the Commonwealth."

The duke's recent four-month separation from his wife while on a tour of empire outposts was cited as one of the reasons for the rumors of a royal family rift.

Tradition provides the duties of the sovereign shall be exercised by only one person. But Elizabeth has a precedent for giving Edinburgh official status.

PRECEDENT FOR MOVE
Her great great-grandmother

Bridge is now out and about again following is recent illness and was through the eastern districts during the past week delivering lobster trap material to his fishermen.

Mrs. Peter Massey, Little Harbour, attended her first hockey match at the Red Point Community Rink on February 8 and was delighted over the game and met many of her old friends.

Due to the large amount of woods work done in the eastern districts, our up and doing black smiths, Mr. Clarence MacDonald, South Lake, Mr. Kenneth MacGregor, Kingsboro, are kept busier than usual with an extra number of horses being brought in to be shod and several other jobs that are always needed on the busy farm.

Anyone, who has solicited support for a worthy cause, will agree there is nothing so satisfactory as receiving a cheerful and helpful response.

This has always been the experience of the scholarship committee when they solicit public minded citizens, societies and business firms for financial aid in promoting appreciation for good music among our young people.

We are now preparing for our 13th annual Festival, and feel we are beginning to see definite results from the effort and hard work, which has been put into this organization.

Again this year the committee has made some adjustments in the scholarships and awards. There have been new scholarships added and the list, and awards have been provided for classes 44 and 45 on the other hand it has been decided by the executive to remove classes 120, 121, 122, 131 of school choruses from competition and therefore these classes will not be covered by awards. All entries must be sent to the secretary, Mrs. Wendell Wood, Charlottetown, R.R. 6 not later than March 1st, 1957.

Plan Combined Airlift For Bringing Over Immigrants

OTTAWA (CP) — Immigration Minister Pickersgill said Tuesday negotiations with a number of private air lines to operate a large airlift from Europe are almost completed.

He said he may have an announcement to make on the matter later this week.

Replying to Commons questions, he said the airlift is aimed at supplementing commercial transport means to bring immigrants to Canada. The number of prospective immigrants would "far exceed" the capacity of regular services.
