

ELLEN'S VARY

Memories Are Stirred Of Childhood's Paths

"I love to watch the shadows cast by sunlight through the rustling leaves. I love the fields, the scent of new-mown hay. The silence of a sleepy summer night!"

Someone has declared in verse. The former we had today; the summer's dancing shadows on the haylands, and on the paths about, reminding us of certain childhood trails, remembered, and still held dear. That narrow, beaten footpath beside the old-time Post Road which took us to and from the school on the hill. Or that beside the fields' lane, or angling a pasture, or running by a wheat field - or where the barley shimmered softly in an afternoon sun, where we followed a short-cut of route when we came "a piece" with some home-friend of the school days homing. Did ever a little brook mirror young faces more clearly, or dimple by more happily than that which we crossed on the way. Were there fernlands island-over, prettier than those which in a checkerboard pattern of crops, reached gently rolling away. Or was there ever a summer-sky more conducive to fostering young hopes and dreams. How satisfying those days were, all golden with charm! Days long and lovely. Little-perfumed winds. Fields, trees and shore our heritage, youth our delight.

The room will be washed bright with her silver. But now at the edge of twilight all is still. Not a leaf stirs. The hush obtaining is not unlike that air of expectancy which prevails as we await some religious rite, as our day now gives over to night. It is akin we fancy to that in which a boy and girl exchange marriage vows, or at a communal service when words are reverent in a churchyard, or at a christening of small ones. Like that, it comes to mind, when a grand-niece, the first daughter of our own namesake, a dark-eyed, dark-haired little miss of eight months, and a wee tad-of-cousin, were christened in a recent service, we with James attended. Very sweet this Ellen was, during the rite and presently she was smiling coyly to all who would notice her favors. And dear too, he was, the babe of two months, eyes with that shining light in them, not altogether yet of earthly places as he surveyed his world about.

Today's having had to do with the saying. We came at times to watch, from a window or doorway, the loading in the trucks. And at Scampie's excited bark, heralding their approach, caught sight of the heaped wagons rolling down the farm-lane. Today's having meant load after load of bales being drawn barnward to loft and mow. It was sweat-stained workers in the heat, and frosted glasses of beverages - and the haying wind and the sun. And the night's shadows now deepening, lowering dusky on valley and hill. And a silence. And presently our day over, our world come to rest. Until tomorrow - - - Diary - - - Good-night.

Milton Wedding Ceremony Performed By Candlelight

The marriage of Norma Gail Carter, daughter of Mrs. Robert Carter, Milton, and the late Mr. Carter, to Leslie Arnold Jay, son of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Jay, Mt. Stewart, took place by candlelight at St. John's Anglican Church, Milton at 7:30 p. m. on July 12th, 1966. The Reverend A. E. Piercy officiated at the double ring ceremony.

Margaret Coles, organist, accompanied Arlene MacDonald, a cousin of the bride, who sang "The Wedding Prayer" and "O Perfect Love". The church was decorated with standards of pink and white peonies. Miniature nosegays of pink roses marked the guest pews.

The bride was given in marriage by her brother, Gordon Carter. She wore a floor length gown of white organza and chaffily lace with short sleeves. The front of the gown was embroidered with small rosebuds which cascaded to the hem of the gown. Her softly flowing veil and train of silk illusion were held by a pearl crown ornamented with crystal droplets. She carried a bouquet of pink sensation roses and lilies of the valley.

The maid of honor was Diana Rodd, friend of the bride. The bridesmaids were Enid Coles and Marilyn Larter. The attendants wore identical gowns of white organza over taffeta designed on Empire lines and pink organza picture hats. They carried baskets of pink carnations and white daisies.

Karen Jay, niece of the groom was flower girl in a pink dress and matching hat. She carried a basket of miniature carnations. Her brother, Master Lorne Jay, was ring-bearer.

The groom was attended by his brother, Lynwood Jay. The ushers were Donald Carter, brother of the bride, and Donald Matheson, friend of the groom. For her daughter's wedding, Mrs. Carter chose an aquamarine Alencon lace molded over the sheath silk dress of the same color. She wore a matching wide-brimmed, deep crowned hat, and shoes of the same shade.

Her corsage was white carnations with tinted blue centres. Mrs. Jay, mother of the bridegroom, wore a turquoise lace sheath dress with large white hat and white accessories. Her corsage was pale pink roses.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at Gregor's-by-the-Sea. The bride's table was centered with a three tier wedding cake, flanked by silver candelabra and lighted tapers. Arlene Clow, friend of the bride, was in charge of the guest book. The toast to the bride was proposed by the Reverend A. E. Piercy and was responded to by the groom, who also proposed a toast to the bridesmaids. Congratulatory telegrams from all parts of Canada were read by Lynwood Jay.

For her going-away outfit the bride wore a three piece suit of pastel pink brocade with large pink organza hat. Her corsage was pink sweetheart roses.

Mr. and Mrs. Jay are spending their two month honeymoon in Great Britain and the continent. They sailed from Montreal on the "Carmania", and will return by plane to Prince Edward Island before returning to resume their teaching in British Columbia.

Out of province guests at the wedding were: Mrs. W. Chester S. McLure, Toronto; Lena C. McLure, Toronto; Peter Roberts, Wales, and his fiancée from Scotland, Mr. and Mrs. Manning Jay and their children Heather, Lorne, and Karen. Moncton, Mr. and Mrs. James Cormie, Moncton; and Norman Powell, Kentville, Nova Scotia. (Photo by R. B. Hamblly)

MR. AND MRS. MELVIN HUGHES

Wedding Ceremony Is Held At St. Dunstan's Basilica

Baskets of yellow mums and guest pews marked with satin bows made an attractive setting for a wedding at St. Dunstan's Basilica on July 16, when Rev. Robert MacDonald officiated in marriage Gail Frances, elder daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Amos Curley to Melvin Emmett son of Mr. and Mrs. Emmett Hughes, Fort Augustus.

The bride entered the church on the arm of her father to the music of Lohengrin's Wedding March. James Flanagan, 80-year-old, sang "What could Jesus do More" during the signing of the register, accompanied by organist, Mrs. Joseph Dougan.

The bride wore a floor length gown of white satin in A-line fashion with pop top bodice and long tapered sleeves of lace, featuring a back panel which flowed into a princess skirt. The skirt gathered at the back, ended in a train accented with lace. Her bouffant shoulder length veil was of tulle illusion was held in place by white roses and leaves trimmed with small white pearls, and she carried a cascade bouquet of red roses and lily of the valley. Her only jewellery was a pearl necklace with matching ear rings, a gift of the groom.

Shirley Curley, sister of the bride, was maid of honor and wore a gold floor length gown of peau de soie with bodice fashioned in matching brocade. Her headress was of roses fastened to a base of peau de soie, to which a shoulder length veil of net was gathered. She carried a nosegay of white carnations with the centre tinted to match her dress. Bridesmaids were: Reta Berrigan and Pearl Kearney, both cousins of the bride, who wore identical floor length gowns of pale green peau de soie with bodice of matching brocade and headresses identical to that of the matron of honor. They carried nosegays of white carnations tinted to match their
