EVERY MOTHER SHOULD Have it in the House

It will positively cure the many common ailments which will occur to the inmates of every family as long as life has woes. It soothes every ache, every lameness, every pain, every soreness everywhere. It prevents and cures asthma, bronchitis, colds, coughs, croup, catarrh, diphtheria, gout, hacking, hoarseness, headache, hooping cough, influenza and neuralgia.

Johnson's Anodyne Liniment

Originated in 1810, by the late Dr. A. Johnson, Family Physician.

For more than forty years I have used Johnson's Anodyne Liniment in my family. I regard it one of the best and safest family medicines; used internal and external in all cases. O. H. INGALLS, Dea. 2d Bapt. Ch., Bangor, Me.

CROUP. My children are subject to croup. All that is necessary is to give them a dose, bathe the chest and throat with your Liniment, tuck them in bed, and the croup disappears as if by magic. E. A. PERRENOT, Rockport, Tex.

conditions

In some conditions the gain from the use of Scott's Emulsion of cod-liver oil is rapid. For this reason we put up a 50c. size, which is enough for an ordinary cough or cold or useful as a trial for babies and children.

In other conditions gain must be slow, sometimes almost imperceptible, health can't be built up in a day. For this Scott's Emulsion must be taken as nourishment, food rather than medicine, food prepared for tired and weak digestions.

A NIAGARA TRAGEDY

A MAN DROWNED WHILE POWERLESS HUNDREDS LOOK ON.

He Started to Row Across the River, Lost Control of His Boat, Took Refuge in a Lodged Tree and Finally Went to His Death Attempting to Leap Into a Boat.

Since sunrise they had been reviewing the wonders concentrated between Lake Erie and Lake Ontario, for who could resist the stop over privileges? Certainly not Chicagoans, who love the rush and roar of life and stupendous ways of doing things. They chose a seat where they could look into the majesty of the American cataract and tried as the June day waned to realize that the grave thunder, the desperate leap of silver and sapphire, the grinding into white smoke on the rocks below had been going on for eras. This was a tremendous mental undertaking for mortals accustomed to the evanescence of great power, and they presently abandoned the effort as vain and confined themselves to remarking the daring position of a tree washed down the river by a recent freshet and apparently rooted in the ledge of rocks over which raved and plunged the American falls. The wooden giant extended at full length, seemed to be looking defiantly over the rocky wall down into the caldron below. That the torrent must finally conquer was evident, but to defy Niagara for even a few hours—how magnificent!

"That tree reminds me of my first visit to the falls," said a sudden and deep voice from beneath a bench a few feet away from where the two travelers were sitting. As no one else was within reasonable hearing distance, the awakened dreamers felt the remark must be for them, though the speaker looked as if he were addressing the Canadian shore or the Three Sisters. He was a stout elderly, benevolent faced man to whom it was surely quite proper to listen. He went on hurriedly as if he felt impelled to tell a story and wished it finished, somewhat after the manner of the Ancient Mariner.

"It must have been near the end of the fifties, that first visit of mine. I had just become captain of a boat on the river and had come down here between runs. A big tree had lodged over the falls, just like that one there now. I seem to see it all over again, only things along shore are different. A little before 6 o'clock one evening a man started from the other bank at what he must have thought a safe distance from the falls. Very soon we saw that it was desperate rowing with him, but he seemed to be getting across when suddenly his little boat began to whirl downward with the current. He went with it of course, but he uttered no cry, and when almost at the verge of the precipice he leaped up and caught a limb of that tree—no, not that one, but the one there 40 years ago and seated himself across the trunk. And there he sat with the waters roaring close around him like hungry wolves.

"You should have seen the excitement. Men, women and children gathered on the bank and stood, hour after hour shouting and praying and crying over that man, and not one of them knew him. I never did hear who he was. People coming in on the train stopped off to see what the excitement was about, especially those from the west on the Canada Southern, the one now called the Michigan Central. You know it runs several miles along the shore, giving a view of things from the rapids to the whirlpool, and so people could see from the car windows that something unusual was happening down here.

"And some of the men who stopped off clubbed together and offered $10,000 to anybody who would save that man—he a perfect stranger too! And they went up and down through the crowd, throwing up their arms as if they were insane and shouting out their offer till they were hoarse. Ten thousand dollars then seemed as much as $100,000 does now, and it was awfully tempting, but everybody was afraid, some because they didn't know anything about the rocks and undercurrents, and some because they knew too much.

"The man was but a few feet from shore—we could talk with him from the bank. He was a well built, fine looking young fellow of about 25. When men wanted a few years ago to get the cable across for the suspension bridge over there, and did not know how, some one—an American no doubt—suggested a way which they followed. They sent across a kite. To the tail of the kite they tied a cord, to the cord a rope, to the rope a cable. I've been wondering as I sat here why, in all that crowd, not one of us thought of trying to help in that way. The wind blew toward the island, just over against where the man sat, and we might have lowered a rope to him—possibly. Heaven knows we wanted to. As the hours ran on we seemed to get acquainted with that man until he appeared to be our own brother, and yet we could not get to him a mouthful of food or help him back to life. Well, he sat there looking into the face of death, speaking only when spoken to, from 6 o'clock in the evening to 4 o'clock the next afternoon—22 hours! At last something had to be done, and so a boat, secured by ropes, was drifted toward him. It seethed round and round and then seemed to stop a second right under where he sat. He gave a brave, well aimed leap, but the boat glided from under him, and with the words they say every one uses in meeting sudden, conscious death—'My God!'—he went over the falls."

Here the elderly gentleman rose abruptly and strode away as if he could not trust himself to say another word.—Chicago Tribune.

What is the difference between an educationist and an educator? On page 1837 of the International Dictionary are these two records: "Timothy Dwight, American edcationist," etc., and "Charles William Eliot, American educator," etc.

The Children's Enemy.

Scrofula often shows itself in early life and is characterized by swellings, abscesses, hip diseases, etc. Consumption is scrofula of the lungs. In this class of diseases Scott's Emulsion is unquestionably the most reliable medicine.

VASTNESS OF ST. PETER'S.

It Produces Almost the Effect of Terror on the Mind.

The building is so far beyond any familiar proportions that at first sight all details are lost upon its broad front. The mind and judgment are dazed and staggered. The earth should not be able to bear such weight upon its crust without cracking and bending like an overloaded table. On each side the colonnades run curving out like giant arms, always open to receive the nations that go up there to worship. The dome broods over all, like a giant's head motionless in meditation.

The vastness of the structure takes hold of a man as he issues from the street by which he has come from Sant' Angelo. In the open space in the square and in the ellipse between the colonnades and on the steps, two hundred thousand men could be drawn up in rank and file, horse and foot and guns. Excepting it be on some special occasion, there are rarely more than two or three hundred persons in sight. The paved emptiness makes one draw a breath of surprise, and human eyes seem too small to take in all the flatness below, all the breadth before, and all the height above.

Taken together, the picture is too big for convenient sight. The impression itself moves unwieldily in the cramped brain. A building almost five hundred feet high produces a monstrous effect upon the mind. Set down in words, a description of it conveys no clear conception; seen for the first time, the impression produced by it cannot be put into language. It is something like a shock to the intelligence, perhaps, and not altogether a pleasant one. Carried beyond the limits of a mere mistake, exaggeration becomes caricature; but when it is magnified beyond humanity's common measures, it may acquire an element approaching to terror. The awe-striking giants of mythology were but magnified men. The first sight of St. Peter's affects one as though, in the every-day streets, walking among one's fellows, one should meet with a man forty feet high.—"St. Peter's," by Marion Crawford, in the Century for July.

A Sculptor's Home.

Hamlin Garland describes Edward Kemeys, the sculptor, and his wife and home in McClure's Magazine! The cottage is not noticeable outside; inside, the presence of the sculptor is everywhere. In the little halls as you enter are his trophies; over the mantle a mountain sheep; opposite a huge black buffalo glowers; in the corner is the head of a grizzly bear, the hero and almost the victor in a battle with the sculptor. A beautiful bronze prairie cock brought back spring days on the farm in Iowa. A mountain lion in a beautiful and singularly graceful pose looked down from a stand as if from a high rock. In each room bronze reproductions in frame decorated the walls. Indian ornaments, heads, arrows, pipes and all abound. The chief ornament of his home is his beautiful wife, his actual comrade and helpmeet.

Mrs Kemeys is also a sculptor, and works with her husband each day. She superintends the reproduction of his work, and aids him in a manual way when she is not studying. She hopes to be able to take up his oar and become his fellow artist. She modestly disclaims the possession of any special power. She is almost as remarkable in many ways as her husband. Her marvelous physique, her skill as a hunter and her energy and adaptability make her a perfect comrade to him when they go out into the wilderness.

Good Memories of the Japanese.

The jinrikisha men are coolies, without education or mental training. Most of them can read and write the names of streets and men and merchants and factories. They know the location and the number of every one of the 318,320 houses in Tokyo and the name of almost every one of the 1,500,000 inhabitants. They are very seldom puzzled to find an address, even though it may be given incorrrectly, and if you tell them accurately where you want to go they will take you without the slightest delay or hesitation. The same phenomenal memory appears in other classes of the people, and you have to be careful about telling a Japanese gentleman the same story twice.—Chicago Record.

Mexican Indians dress a firefly against a piece of paper, when it resents the insult by producing a brilliant light extending over several inches. The smallest type may thus be read.

Nowadays when ladies take part in so many active sports it is necessary to have gowns that will preserve their graceful shape thro' every kind of exercise, and this is why Fibre Chamois is so immensely popular. It never loses its charming stiffness, yet owing to its flexible nature it imparts a sinuous grace to your gowns which nothing can disturb. Dresses interlined with it will have just the same style at the end of the season as at the beginning.

But don't expect these results from imitations, always see the label on each yard to be sure that you are getting the genuine Fibre Chamois—it never disappoints.

W. C. McCOMBER & SON, Bouchette, Que., report in a letter that Pyny-Pectoral cured Mrs. C. Garceau of chronic cold in chest and bronchial tubes, and also cured W. G. McComber of a long-standing cold.

MR. J. H. HUTTY, Chemist, 528 Yonge St., Toronto, writes: "As a general cough and lung syrup Pyny-Pectoral is a most invaluable preparation. It has given the utmost satisfaction to all who have tried it, many having spoken to me of the benefits derived from its use in their families. It is suitable for old or young, being pleasant to the taste. Its sale with me has been wonderful, and I can always recommend it as a safe and reliable cough medicine."

Italy and Gardens.

The climate of Italy renders it difficult and almost impossible to have flowers growing in the ground all through the summer. After the magnificent efflorescence of May and June the soil cakes into the consistency of terra cotta, and the sun, which has expanded and withered the roses and lilies and vines with such marvelous rapidity, toasts everything like so much corn or maize. Very few herbaceous flowers—the faithful, friendly, cheerful zinnias for instance—can continue blooming, and the oleander, become more brilliant rose color with every additional week's drought, triumphs over empty beds.

Flowers in Italy are a crop, like corn, hemp or beans. You must be satisfied with fallow soil when they are over. I say these things, learned by some bitter experience of flowerless summers, to explain why Italian flower gardening mainly takes refuge in pots—from the great ornamented lemon jars down to the pots of carnations, double geraniums, tuberoses and jasmines on every wall, on every ledge or window sill—so much so, in fact, that even the famous sweet basil, and with it young Lorenzo's head, had to be planted in a pot. Now this poverty of flower beds and richness of pots made it easy and natural for the Italian garden to become, like the Moorish one, a place of mere greenery and water, a palace whose fountains splashed in sunny yards walled in with myrtle and laurel, in mysterious chambers roofed over with ilex and box.—Longman's Magazine.

The Ancient Joke.

"Ha! ha!" chuckled the villager, after the beetle browed footpad had made a fruitless investigation of his pockets. "This is a good joke on you. I am on my way home from a church fair and haven't a cent left."

"Huh!" replied the beetle-browed footpad, sarcastically. "It strikes me that joke had its run about the time a fool and his money were parted."

Such is Fame.

In looking over new maps of the annexed "north side" of New York, a certain "Teetaw" avenue was observed by the board of street opening. One member thought the name was Indian; another said it would soon be known as Seesaw avenue, and it was at last discovered that the street was really named after Major Tetard, a noted Revolutionary figure, and a clerk had made the error through imperfect hearing six years ago.—New York Times.

A Resident of St. John, N. B., Makes a Successful Trial of Dodd's Kidney Pills

ST. JOHN, N. B., Aug. 3.—Mr. Robert Moore, residing in Indiantown, a suburb of this city, has recently made what is allowed by all who are acquainted with the fact to be a most remarkable recovery. He has been a sufferer from a serious complaint of the kidneys for over seven years and during that time has suffered excruciatingly. He has also suffered considerably in pocket, having paid large sums for medical advice. Quite recently he happened to read of the many cures effected by Dodd's Kidney Pills, and with a commendable promptitude made a trial of them, with the result that after taking three boxes of the remedy he was entirely restored to health.
