Thinking Day Tea Marks End Of Special Girl Guid Week

One week of commemoration, in honour of the late Lord Baden-Powell, founder of the Girl Guides, and Lady Baden-Powell, World Chief Guide, came to a conclusion on Saturday afternoon when a Thinking Day Tea was held at the YMCA. Piano selections, under the direction of Mrs. Arthur Roper, musical advisor to the Girl Guides, were performed by Connie Rodd, Pamela MacKinnon, Faye Roper, Barbara Parker, Mary Lou MacLeod and Judy Presby.

The table was adorned with yellow and blue candles, guide colours, and the napkins were printed with the trefoil emblem in blue.

On the receiving line were Mrs. G.M. Auld, Mrs. E. Morrison, and Mrs. M. MacDonald, Guides, rangers, guides and hostesses acted as servers, refreshers, and exhibitors.

The 8th Baseline Guides displayed handicraft, made in order to earn camp-craft certificate. Other articles in the guide display include sketch map and compass project and a last class history scrap book.

A number of the rangers of Charlottetown and one from Souris, accompanied by Mrs. MacKinnon, leader, had a two week tour of Mexico in July and brought back souvenirs and art crafts which represent many of the arts and trades of that country, which were also on display.

The Lone Guide display consisted mostly of scrapbook and collections from Baiton B.A.Y. Barron, where a group of Lone guides camped in 1962.

An extension guide, Dorothy Hargrave, displayed an excellent collection of the wild flowers in E.L.I. pressed and arranged in a scrapbook.

The brownie display comprised articles made by the brownies for lock children and shut-ins and a variety of scrapbook collections.

MARY HAWORTH

Separated Pair Has Slim Chance Of Reconciliation

Dear Mary Haworth: My husband was done in the army for 10 years and in that time I moved from place to place with him. In 1953 he came out of the service and tried to adjust to civilian life, but seemingly could not find steady employment.

Gradually he lost interest in trying to find his responsibility to his family. He was away constantly about his lack of interest in his family. We were separated after 19 years' marriage.

For me he has been miserable without him. I've had to get a job to keep the children together. He and his parents have moved to another state and his mother intercepts my letters. I try to get in touch with him.

I am almost out of my mind with you and love for him. His mother has told me he was very sick but doesn't specify the illness. I feel he is ashamed of neglecting us and doesn't want to face us until he can meet his financial obligations.

I have thought of going to see him but I feel that the service would prevent a meeting. What should I do in the circumstances? I know he still loves me and I love him, but I want to find out if he ever is to be reconciled.

The children have lost all respect for their father, due to his actions. He's a good man who doesn't drink or have other faults, except letting his mother run his affairs.

Dear V.F.: In my judgment, you need first-hand professional guidance, in taking the measure of your unhappy situation and deciding whether it is worthwhile to try to get in touch with your husband; and if so, how to go about it.

In the city through which you write, you should contact the Legal Aid Bureau and a Family Service agency, either of which is qualified to study your problem, give you advice and, if necessary, act as your spokesman in trying to promote reconciliation with your husband.

Assuming a community agency of this sort is available, you should effort to set the stage for talking things over with your husband. Think his mother would feel obliged to step aside and let him speak for himself.

Write either the Legal Aid Bureau or the Family Service agency, and get straight answers regarding his purpose, she would be facing community agencies whose business it is to keep families together, if possible; or help them pick up the pieces and rebuild when this can be done.

Hence I doubt that she would have the nerve to stand in the way of their proper inquiry. I don't see how she could be so cruel as knocking at her door by mail or telephone, to check on his disposition towards his neglected duties. I don't think she would care to put herself on record, publicly, as being a "clay" Street, New York & N.Y.

I suggest you write to Robert Fallath at the latter address, asking where to buy a copy. M. H. Mary Haworth counsels through her column, not by mail or personal interview. Write her in care of The Guardian.

Dear Mary Haworth: I read in your column about a woman's problem. Jealousy. Her story could have been mine.

You advised her to read Don Aldred Watkin's book "The Enemies of Love." Can you tell me where to find it? Nobody seems to have heard of it. I am unable to locate a copy.

I too have consulted a doctor, but I am placing my hopes in this book. Sincerely, G. T. Dear G. T.: This book is published by Barnes, Bantam and Washburn of London, England and distributed in America by P. J. Kenedy and Sons, 12 Barclay Street, New York & N.Y.

ELLEN'S DIARY

Stock On Hand Checked In Preparation Of Storm

"What... thief... thief!" that said, hearing a suggestion of "back veranda", smiled, hearing a bluejay call from the old orchard this morning. "Now, you think it's 'Rain, rain, rain!' he is saying?"

"Well, in the Bedtime Books it says it's the other," he nodded. "And," she commented, "he's one inquisitive bird! Al ways," he sighed, "into other people's business."

"Rain," James offered coming by. "Perhaps, at any rate, it's a good idea to have a change. We should get some that wood sawed and home to the shed, and to get a new sheet from the roof of the house across the lane. Artists Fall In Two Classes, Art Society Told By Speaker

Rev. Adrian Aarsenault of St. Dunstan's University was guest speaker at the recent meeting of the P.E.I. Art Society held in the film room of Prince of Wales College.

Father Aarsenault gave an extensive talk on the "Polarities in Art" in examining the modern method of viewing art, he said that artists could be divided into two basic classes - described as Linear and Painterly. Linear artists bring to one who deal with fine precision of line and working with planes or flat surfaces, generally two dimensional.

The great mural artists of Europe worked chiefly in planes, and their work is practiced by the Greeks in a Dromans and carried on up to the time of the Renaissance. After this the Painterly artists came to the foreground with their work having rather blurred outlines and less and less precision of line. The Venetian and the Impressionist schools are included in this category. Rembrandt and El Greco were painterly artists who dealt with fine precision of line and working with planes or flat surfaces, generally two dimensional.

Father Aarsenault further pointed out that art itself could be classified as either plane or recessional and that such classifications were not confined to painting alone but to some extent embraced all forms of art as plainly shown in the literature of Milton and Shakespeare which carried with it an inquisitive bird! Al ways," he sighed, "into other people's business."

"Rain," James offered coming by. "Perhaps, at any rate, it's a good idea to have a change. Guest Artist To Sing At Musicales

Gaelyn Craig, soprano, well known here, will be the guest artist who will perform at the Annual Musicales presented by the St. Dunstan's University Club of Montreal, in the Versailles room of the Windsor Hotel, at 8:30 p.m.

The program will consist of works by Bach, Mozart, Strauss and Beethoven as well as Elizabethan and Maritime folk songs. Miss Craig was born in Regina, Saskatchewan, and lived in Halifax, London, Eng., and Toronto before coming to the Vienna State Academy in 1958, where she was a pupil of Dr. Erik Werba's class. She spent the summer of 1961 in Salisbury, Australia, in further study with Dr. Werba.

She has made public appearances in Vienna, London, Edinburgh, Amsterdam, and many Canadian cities, and is a frequent soloist in church work. She also performed in Montreal as soloist with the Bach and Egar choirs.

MRS. JANE COOK CELEBRATES 91st BIRTHDAY

Mrs. Jane Cook, Murray River, recently celebrated her 91st birthday at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Percy Sharran, Charlottetown, where she is spending the winter months. Mrs. Cook was born on Peter's Road and lived in St. John's, N.S., for 25 years. She has one son and seven daughters living, 23 grandchildren and 22 great-grandchildren.

BRISTOL The passing of one of Bristol's former residents, Mr. Harry Davidson, at his home in Charlottetown is regretted by his many friends in this community. Harry was a merchant and was an outstanding farmer before his retirement, his fine personality and character as a man to a great gentleman. Mr. Davidson never lost interest in his old home district and made frequent visits during the summer months, where his name will be spoken with love and respect.
