

LOVE'S FLOWER GARDEN.

In Love's Flower Garden there is the full-blown rose of married happiness and the holy perfume of joyous motherhood for every woman who takes proper care of her health in a womanly way. For the weak, sickly, nervous, despondent woman, who suffers untold miseries in silence from weakness and disease of the delicate organs concerned in wifehood and motherhood, there are only thorns, and to her the perfume of motherhood is the aroma of death. No woman is fitted for the responsibilities of wifehood and the duties of motherhood who is a sufferer in this way. Every woman may be strong and healthy in a womanly way, if she will. It lies with herself. She needs, in the first place, a little knowledge of the reproductive physiology of women. This she can obtain by securing and reading a copy of Dr. Pierce's Common Sense Medical Adviser. It contains 1208 pages and over 300 illustrations. It tells all about all the ordinary ills of life, and how to treat them. Several chapters and illustrations are devoted to the physical make-up of women. It tells how to treat all the diseases peculiar to women. It gives the names, addresses, photographs and experiences of hundreds of women who have been snatched from the verge of the grave to live happy, healthy lives by Dr. Pierce's medicines. This book she can obtain free. It used to cost $1.50, and over seven hundred thousand copies were purchased by women at that price. Over a million women now own copies. For a paper-covered copy send 31 one-cent stamps, to cover cost of postage and mailing only, to World's Dispensary Medical Association, Buffalo, N. Y. For cloth-binding, send 50 one-cent stamps.

Thin in flesh? Perhaps it's natural.

If perfectly well, this is probably the case.

But many are suffering from frequent colds, nervous debility, pallor, and a hundred aches and pains, simply because they are not fleshy enough.

Scott's Emulsion of Cod-liver Oil with Hypophosphites strengthens the digestion, gives new force to the nerves, and makes rich, red blood. It is a food in itself.

NIGHT.

The sun has vanished out of my sight, And the moments sadly roll, For my heart is dark with the thought of night, And the night is in my soul.

The day is set and never will rise, And my heart is sick and sore, For the sweet, sweet light of my true love's eyes Will shine for me no more.

My very sleep of rest is shorn, I am full of pain and care—4 Sick with the thought of what I have borne And of what is left to bear.

I see the rose with blushes fired, I hear the brook run by, But I am tired, so sick and tired, I almost long to die.

For I know the sun will dry the stream, And the flow'ret fade in the frost, And I know that my dream is all a dream And the charm of the dream is lost

There will never, never be any more light, For my hope and I must part, And my soul is dark with the thought of night, And the night is in my heart.

—Alice Cary in New York Ledger.

NEW YORK'S GROWTH.

The City Has Never Halting Since It Was First Fairly Started.

Ernest Ingersoll writes a paper on the Greater New York, entitled "Reasoning Out a Metropolis," for St. Nicholas. Mr. Ingersoll says:

The people of New York, Brooklyn, Staten Island and certain nearby northern towns resolved to join themselves together into one city, which is now the Greater New York. It embraces 341 square miles of territory and includes a population of nearly 3,400,000.

Besides these at least another million dwell on the New Jersey side of the Hudson river, quite as near and as closely identified with the great city on Manhattan Island as are those of the northern and eastern suburbs. This makes a population of nearly 4,500,000 which may be said to belong to New York, making it not only by far the largest center of human life and interests in America, but, excepting only London, the most populous spot on the globe.

How has it happened that this vast city has grown up where it stands? Why did not the American metropolis arise somewhere else? Is its position all an accident, or does history show sound reasons for its situation? The earliest settlement here was merely a trading station that gradually became a small seaport, like a dozen others along the coast. Before the year 1700 these were so nearly alike that he would have been a wise prophet who truly foretold which would thrive. Indeed many men of that day firmly believed that Newport and Annapolis were to be the two great American seaports.

Great cities arise at the points where the greatest number of people find it convenient to meet at first for business and later for pleasure. You cannot force a city to grow in an unnatural or unsuitable situation, and it is no easier to prevent a city from growing in its proper place. But the conditions that change a village into a big town and expand the town into a city or metropolis are not the same in different parts of the globe and vary with the march of the centuries; so that now many an ancient world market, like Nineveh or Memphis, has totally disappeared, while towns like Berlin have lately increased with amazing rapidity, after a long history as small and insignificant places. As for New York, it has never halted or gone backward for a moment since it was fairly started on its career in 1624.

KINGS AMONG ELEPHANTS.

Two Fine Beasts That Had Slaves to Wait on Them.

It was our good fortune to be present at an important meeting of the khed-ah at Chila, on the banks of the Ganges, where the Nepalese government had sent down their magnificent troop of tame elephants for the chase of wild ones. They were about 150 in number—magnificent, noble creatures, writes a contributor to the Boston Journal.

The two finest among them were the "kings" of the troop and were called Bijli Prasad and Narian Gaj Prasad. Bijli Prasad, which means "lord of lightning," was such a grand fellow! The width of his brows was so great that he could not put his head through our hall door, and he knows to the smallest point what a mighty creature he is.

He and his companion, Narian Gaj Prasad, which means "the peerless lord," are provided with two slave elephants, and the only duty of the latter is to fetch and provide fodder for Bijli and Narian Gaj. They do their duty right well. At early dawn their mahouts, or drivers, drive them into their jungles, and they work like real slaves. They collect the sweet sugar canes, tearing them up by the roots, the young, succulent grasses and tender leaves and heap them up in masses which weigh about 300 pounds each. These loads are put on their backs, and thrice a day they gladly carry in their burdens and lay them at the feet of their lords.

We went out by moonlight to see the latter fed, and any child would enjoy the strange sight. First of all the mahout makes a great big campfire of twigs and brushwood, and on it he places a large, flat iron dish, supported on two bricks. Then he takes wheat flour and kneads it with water into great round flat cakes about an inch thick and twice the circumference of a soup plate. These cakes he bakes on the iron dish.

We were anxious to taste them, and we found them very good. We punched out with our fingers all the nice brown spots and ate them, piping hot. And to make up to Bijli and Narian for taking part of their supper, we had prepared a treat, of which they are particularly fond. From the bazaar we had brought great balls of sugar cane juice boiled down and made solid, called "goor" in that country. Each ball was twice the size of a tennis ball and in each wheat cake or "capati" we rolled a lump of this molasses. You should have seen how the big beasts enjoyed their feed—how their great trunks rested down on our shoulders, always returned for the forthcoming delicacy!

At Home Again.

"I defy any man to stay away from his native town so long that on his return there will be nothing left to remind him of the old days," said a successful western man, who had just paid a visit to his birthplace, a little village of northern New Hampshire.

"When I saw Trowbury, after a lapse of 40 years, it seemed to me there was not a single thing which had remained unchanged. The town has become a place of mills and industry; all its old sleepy charm is gone. My old schoolfellows are gray headed, sober men, and the men of 40 years ago are either tottering with age or at rest in the graveyard.

"When I saw my old chums, 'Bouncing Bob'—so named from his prodigious weight—and 'Slab' Peters, whose name was also the result of nature's allotment of flesh, my heart sank, for Bouncing Bob is lank and bony, while Slab Peters would require two seats in a street car.

"'Doubting' Phipps, who used to mistrust all statements, whether as to the shape of the globe or the price of peanuts, I was told lived on a farm so far away that he seldom came to town.

"The night before I came away I was telling a couple of young men at the postoffice something about my wheat farm, in answer to their questions.

"I had just made a statement in regard to the number of bushels yielded the year before, when I was startled by a drawing voice behind me, proceeding from a man who had entered the store while my back was turned.

"'Sounds very fine,' said the voice, 'but I mistrust it can't be true.'

"The two young men turned with intolerant haste to confront the newcomer, but I wheeled around with a sudden feeling of warmth at my heart.

"'You are Doubting Phipps, I know!' I cried, holding out both hands, and I was not mistaken. We talked for an hour, and at the end of that time I felt that Trowbury was still Trowbury."—Youth's Companion.

Effects of a Bee Sting.

An English physician relates an instance of a lady who was stung by a bee. At the first moment she seemed to pay very little attention to it, but very soon her face became flushed and spots appeared all over her body. Suddenly she developed a most severe attack of asthma, finding great difficulty in breathing. Another instance is that of a young lady who was stung on the back of her head by an ordinary honey-bee. In less than five minutes her face began to swell, and very marked red and white spots appeared all over the surface of the body. The swelling extended over the entire person, accompanied by severe pain, burning and giddiness. The eyes were almost closed and the countenance was so distorted as to be unrecognizable. Very free bathing in soda water, with a little soda taken internally, and hot applications to the feet and thorough massage finally afforded relief, but it was some hours before the patient recovered from what was truly an alarming condition. Violent attacks of nervousness accompanied the trouble, and the sense of suffocation was almost intolerable. The young woman had been stung a number of times before without any apparent unpleasant result. The physicians were of the opinion that the bee had been feeding upon some extremely poisonous plant, which became concentrated in the venom of the sting. Be that as it may, the condition was such as to excite grave apprehension, the more so as it was several days before recovery was complete.—New York Ledger.

DAINGEROUS NEGLIGENCE.

Some people have as little regard for their health as the man who goes into a powder magazine smoking a pipe for his safety. If there is any difference in their reckless negligence it is in favor of the latter. Health is the most precious gift of nature. The aim of all should be its preservation. It is easier to retain, than to regain once it is lost. Keep the blood pure and the system strong and healthy and you'll be able to withstand disease.

Abbey's Effervescent Salt

has done this for many—it will do it for you. A teaspoonful taken every morning, before breakfast, keeps you in a state of insusceptibility to disease. Here are some words of praise we have received from prominent persons in England. Mr. Sims Reeves says: "This preparation is a great boon, simple, refreshing, and efficacious." Madame Marie Koze says: "I have used your Abbey's Effervescent Salt with remarkable results. It is really wonderful." Sir Henry Irving says: "It has certainly not been over-rated." Madame Christine Nilsson says: "I have much pleasure in stating that I find your Abbey's Effervescent Salt a very refreshing and agreeable beverage." Our booklet "An Invitation to Health" may interest you—it's free. This great English Preparation can be had of all druggists. Price 2/6 or 60 cts. a bottle.
