

Simmons - Simmons Wedding

Fundamental Baptist Church, Central Bedeque, was the scene of a pretty wedding on Aug 1 at 2 p.m. when Jean Elmer Simmons, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Simmons, Wilnot Valley and Wallace Robert Simmons, son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Simmons, Belmont, Lot 16, were united in holy bonds of matrimony. The double-ring ceremony was performed by the pastor, Rev. D. M. Fraser. The church was beautifully decorated with summer flowers and fern for the occasion. To the strains of Lohengrin's "Bridal Chorus", played by Mrs. Earl Leard, the bride entered the church on the arm of her father, and was charming in a floor-length gown of white satin, trimmed with seed pearls, with sheer illusion yoke, and ruffle of lace from shoulder to shoulder. The long sleeves came to a point over the back of the hands, and the skirt was cut on full lines. Her full-length veil fell gracefully from a beaded tiara. She carried a bouquet of Rapture roses. Miss Clara Simmons, sister of the bride, was bridesmaid wearing a gown of yellow organdy and netted skirt with matching mitts, headpiece of pink flowers with shoulder length veil. She carried a bouquet of pink roses. Mr. Freeman Dockendorff was groomsmen, while Messrs. Elmer Simmons, brother of the bride, and Leigh Simmons, brother of the groom, were ushers. Mrs. Roy Simmons, mother of the bride, wore a two-piece dress of navy crepe with matching accessories and corsage of pink roses. Mrs. Arthur Simmons, mother of the groom, wore a two-piece dress of grey crepe with red roses. Flying Officer Ralph Emery, R.C.A.F. Station, Summerside, was guest soloist, singing "I'll Walk Beside You" during the signing of the register. As this was the first wedding ceremony performed in the newly erected Fundamental Baptist Church, Mrs. Simmons was presented with a white Bible by the pastor, Rev. D. M. Fraser. The groom's gift to the bride were pearl earrings, to the bridesmaid an ornamental brooch, to the organist a brooch and to the soloist gold cuff links. Following the ceremony a reception was held at Birch Hill Tourist Home with 40 guests present. The toast to the bride was proposed by Rev. D. M. Fraser and responded to by the groom. During the reception a telegram received from Mr. and Mrs. Paul Muggah, Halifax, was read by the groomsmen. Later the happy couple left by motor for Ottawa, and other points of interest in Ontario. For travelling the bride wore a navy gabardine suit with light blue accessories and corsage of red roses. The young couple will reside in Summerside where the groom is employed as a mechanic at the garage of Mr. Willard MacDonald while the bride is employed on the office staff of R. T. Holman Ltd.

On Tuesday, July 24, a shower was held in honour of the bride at the home of her parents. The living room was tastefully decorated with pink and white streamers. To the strains of the wedding march played by Mrs. Elmer Waite, the bride was escorted to the seat of honour by her sister, Miss Clara Simmons. The many gifts were opened by Miss Phyllis Hogg and Leigh Simmons and were arranged on the table by Miss Audrey Waugh and Miss Dorothy Simmons, while Miss Leona Hooper and Miss Helen Simmons read the accompanying verses of good wishes. The gifts consisted of linen, electrical appliances, china, silverware, and money. After Jean thanked everyone for their beautiful gifts, all present joined in singing "For She's a Jolly Good Fellow." A delicious lunch was served by the hostess, assisted by Mrs. Robert Waugh, Mrs. Keith Simmons, Mrs. Herbert Simmons and Mrs. John Barrett.

ON MURDER CHARGE

NEW YORK, Sept. 5 - (AP) - A comely suburban housewife was booked on a homicide charge today after police said she shot her husband to death because she believed "he was cheating on me." Weeping remorsefully, Mrs. Margaret Swigonski, 25, was quoted by police as saying the .22-calibre rifle she aimed at her husband Theodore, 26, went off when "he lunged at me."

Elizabeth Travels Royal Path Blazed By Prince In 1786

(By George Kitchen)

OTTAWA, Sept. 6 - (CP) - Princess Elizabeth, when she visits Canada next month with Prince Philip will follow a transatlantic path blazed by her great-great-grand-uncle 165 years ago and well trod by royalty since. That first royal visitor to young Canada—a young girl who was just a collection of British colonies—was genial Prince William Henry, third of the nine sons of King George III of England, who himself later succeeded to the throne as William IV. Young Prince William—he had just turned 21—visited Canada in 1786 as a captain in the British Navy's Halifax and West Indies Squadron. He was in Canada on and off during a period of three years and visited a number of centres.

His visit was not in the category of a state or royal visit—royal visits as such didn't start until 1890—but history books show he did attend some official functions in the scattered towns of early British North America and perhaps set the pace for the descendants who followed him across the seas. Some, like Princess Elizabeth, were heirs to the throne. Others came as members of the British land and naval forces, perhaps landing for a brief stay at one of the Atlantic coast bastions. Some returned to represent the Monarch as Governors or Governors-General.

From all reports, Prince William was a gay and popular young blade. He made an extended visit to St. John's, capital of Newfoundland, and delighted the hostesses of the day by attending a government ball at Quebec.

Visited Montreal

He voyaged down the St. Lawrence to visit Montreal and, on the way, stopped off at the tiny river port of Sorel. The people of Sorel were so taken with his stay that they promptly changed the name of their town to William Henry. Later, it reverted to Sorel, as it is today. Prince William was created Duke of Clarence in 1789 and recalled to the throne in 1830 and died in 1837. Two daughters had predeceased him and his niece succeeded him as Queen Victoria.

Canada's next royal visitor was William's brother, Prince Edward, Duke of Kent and father of Victoria. Quebec's Ken House is named after this soldier Prince. He also left his mark on Canada as the builder of the Halifax Citadel.

He came to this country in 1791 when his regiment, the 7th Royal Fusiliers, was transferred from Gibraltar. He remained until 1800, living at Halifax and Quebec, and, at one time, quelled a riot at Charlottetown by addressing the rioters in French. He visited Niagara, Fredericton and Saint John, N. B., as well as other early settlements. He was Commander-in-Chief in British North America when he returned home in 1800. Perhaps with vision before his eyes, he suggested in a letter in 1814 that the British North American Provinces be united. He felt, he wrote, that there were too many legislatures. The first official royal visitor was handsome Prince Edward, then Prince of Wales and later King Edward VII, who toured the settled areas of British North America in 1890, laid the cornerstone of the original Parliament Buildings at Ottawa and visited Washington. He was Victoria's eldest son.

Became Governor-General

His brother, Prince Arthur and Duke of Connaught, was the first member of royalty to come to Canada at its Confederation. A junior army officer, he came in line of duty in 1869 to join his regiment at Montreal, where it had been stationed to bolster defences against the Indians. He returned to Canada in 1911 as Governor-General, serving until 1916.

Princess Louise, fourth daughter of Victoria, lived in Canada from 1878 to 1883 while her husband, the Marquis of Lorne, served as Governor-General.

George V, the sailor King, journeyed to North American waters as a sub-lieutenant in the Royal Navy in 1883 and 1884. He landed at Halifax. He later visited Canada twice before ascending the throne in 1910, once in 1901 for a royal visit as the Duke of York and again in 1908 to attend the Quebec tercentenary as Prince of Wales. On both occasions he was accompanied by the Duchess of York, now the Queen Mother.

His eldest son—Edward, Prince of Wales, later King Edward VIII and the Duke of Windsor—probably was the royal visitor, of recent years, best known to Canadians. He came to the Dominion several times, including one formal royal tour in 1919, and became Canada's first royal property owner through his purchase of a ranch 65 miles southwest of Calgary. As a rancher, he pays taxes like any other Canadian. Princess Elizabeth's visit is the first royal tour since her parents—the present King and Queen—came in May, 1939, short months before the ominous clouds of the Second World War shouldered across Canada's horizon.

As did young Prince Edward in that early, adventurous year of 1880, the King and Queen in 1939 visited Washington and the tomb of George Washington at Mount Vernon, Va. Princess Elizabeth and her husband, too, will visit the U. S. capital and may pay homage at the burial place of the man who led the American colonies in re-

Fitzpatrick-Goddard Wedding

A quiet wedding of widespread interest was solemnized in Halifax, N. S., at three o'clock on September 1, when Miss Myrtle Goddard, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G. B. Goddard, Dartmouth, was united in marriage with Mr. Milton Fitzpatrick, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Fitzpatrick, Bedford, Prince Edward Island. The bride looked charming in her wedding gown of white net over satin with jacket of Chantilly lace, sleeves tapering to points over her wrists and full skirt falling in a slight train at the back. The fingertip veil was held in place by a coronet of lilies of the Valley. She carried a cascade bouquet of Talisman roses with Lily of the Valley streamers.

Mrs. Maurice Oicic, Antigonish, sister of the bride, attended as matron of honor, and wore a floor-length gown of pink moire taffeta with matching headdress. She carried a nosegay of pink and white chrysanthemums.

The groomsmen were Edward Fitzpatrick, brother of the groom. Following the double ring ceremony, a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents. The beautifully appointed table was centred with a three-tier wedding cake, the room being beautifully decorated with gladioli and summer flowers. Mrs. Mabel Martin presided over the tea cups while Mr. Peter Howard proposed the toast to the bride.

Later the young couple left on a motor trip through the Eastern United States to Ottawa, returning by way of Prince Edward Island. For travelling the bride wore a
