

THE DAILY EXAMINER.

DECEMBER 1, 1883.

St. Andrew's Celebration.

SOMEBODY is credited with saying that the world is governed by sentiment; and who knows how much of the success of Scotchmen everywhere is due to keeping ever green in their memories the virtues of their sturdy, canny, indomitable forefathers? It is certain, at all events, that Scotchmen, the world over were engaged yesterday in celebrating the feast of their Patron Saint, that Scotchmen the world over, boasted yesterday (as only Scotchmen can boast) of the virtues of their race; and that Scotchmen the world over hold first-rate places in every domain of human thought and activity! A very good illustration of a thorough Scotchman's idea of his "ain country" is given in the following extract from a sermon read last evening by Alexander McKinnon, Esq., at the Caledonia Club Dinner:

"Ah, my friends," exclaimed the preacher, "what causes have we for gratitude, oh yes, for the dearest gratitude! Look at the place of our habitation. How grateful should we be that we do not live in the far north, oh no! amid the frost and the snow, and the cold and the west, oh no! where there is a long day and a long night, oh yes! and a long lang nicht the tither, oh yes! that we do not depend upon the Aurawry Boreawis, oh no! that we do not gang shivering about in skins, oh no! smoking among the snow like mowd' warts, oh no, no, no! And how grateful should we be that we do not live in the far south, beneath the equator, and the sun eye burnin, burnin, where the sky's het, ah yes! and the yearth's het, and the water's het, and ye're burnt black as a smiddy, ah yes! where there's swagers, oh yes! and lions, oh yes! and crocodiles, oh yes! and fearsome beasts growling and grinin at ye among the woods, where the very air is a fever, like the burning breath of a fiery dragon; that we do not live in these places, oh no, no, no, no! But that we live in this blessed island of ours, callit Great Britain, oh yes, yes! and in that part of it named Scotland, and in that bit o' auld Scotland that looks up at Ben Nevis, oh yes! yes! where's neither frost, nor cold, nor wind, nor weat, nor hail, nor rain, nor teegers, nor lions, nor burain snas, nor hurricanes, nor— Here a tremendous blast of wind and rain from Ben Nevis blew in the windows of the kirk, and brought the preacher's eloquence to an abrupt conclusion."

The dinner at "the Osborne" was thoroughly Scotch, in this, that there was an abundance of everything good. But there was no whiskey. Yet, strange to say, there was almost as much nonsense spoken, and quite as much real merriment round the board as if the "flowing bowl" inspired the feast; while, as for boasting, why, all the whiskey in all the world would not have made it louder, longer or more enthusiastic.

But, withal, there was plenty of good sense in some of the speeches. Mr. Woerden made a few very felicitous remarks on behalf of the great nation whom he worthily represents in this Province; and Mr. Byrne, as President of the Benevolent Irish Society, was quite eloquent. The Hon. A. A. McDonald, in proposing the health of His Honor the Lieutenant Governor, referred to the sad event which has cast a gloom over Government House, and feelingly expressed the regret of the Club and the community; and the Hon. Donald Ferguson, in responding to the toast, spoke of the hearty interest shown by His Honor in the success of the Club and in the prosperity of the Province. The Hon. David Laird responded to the toast of "the land we live in,"—of its immense extent, wonderful resources and great destiny; and after all his travels in Canada, said that he had not yet seen a more charming spot than P. E. I. The toast of "the best speeches of the evening" was delivered by Mr. F. J. Conroy, in response to the toast to "absent friends." He referred to the success of Islanders in winning prizes throughout the world in all the walks of life; referred particularly to the enormous lately passed upon Island seamen by Captain Maxwell, R. N., and instanced His Grace the Archbishop of Halifax, Captain Robert Fraser, Mr. Robert Harris, R. C. A., Captain Davies, R. N., and others, as among those who, born or bred on the Island, had won high rank in the battle of life.

A. McNeill, Esq., President of the Club, spoke for Agriculture and Commerce; and urged that the Dominion Exhibition should come here next year; because (1) the Island is the only Province which competed in Montreal in 1880, and on their way home the Island stock shows there were taken to St. John and exhibited although no money prizes were obtainable; (2) in 1881 the Island competed in Halifax, (3) and in 1883 in St. John; and as on three different occasions we had crossed the Straits to attend their different exhibitions, it is but reasonable that the other Provinces should now send their products to this Island to compete here.

As before announced, Mr. A. B. Warburton will lecture on Monday evening next, in the Y. M. C. A. Hall. This is the second of a course of lectures provided by the Young Men's Christian Association, which seems to be the only institution intellectually awake in the whole city. The subject, "Scraps from Canadian History," is one which ought to awaken interest, and the lecturer deserves to be greeted with a full house for treating of a matter on which there is so much need of enlightenment.

We hear that in connection with his present visit to the metropolis, Sir Alex. Galt has arranged for a huge block of coal from the Galt mines at the Bow and Belly rivers to be forwarded to London, as a proof of the nature and value of the deposits there.

St. Andrew's Day.

DINNER AT THE OSBORNE HOUSE.

Saint Andrew's Dinner at the Osborne House last evening, November 30, was indeed a very enjoyable entertainment. The following was the

The toasts, which were alternately proposed by Hon. A. A. Macdonald, Chief of the Caledonian Club of P. E. Island, A. McNeill, Esq., President, and J. F. Robertson, Esq., 1st Vice-President, were as follow:—

- The Queen.
- The Day and all who honor it.—Responded to by A. R. Beaton, Esq., of Souris.
- The Governor-General and Parliament of Canada.—Hon. Senator Howland responded, and gave an eloquent and good speech.
- The President of the United States.—This toast was appropriately responded to by A. W. Worden, Esq., U. S. Consul.
- The Land of our Forefathers.—The Chief of the Club, and Alexander McKinnon, of the firm of McKinnon & McLean, Esdale Foundry, responded to this loyal toast. The Chief gave a short recitation, from Sir Walter Scott, and Mr. McKinnon a humorous extract from the Sermon of a Scotch minister of the elden times.
- The Lieutenant Governor.—Responded to by Hon. D. Ferguson, Provincial Secretary.
- Sister Societies.—Responded to by James F. Byrne, Esq., President of the Benevolent Irish Society.
- The Land we Live in.—Hon. David Laird responded to this toast in his graphic style.
- The Local Legislature.—Responded to by Donald McKay, Esq., M. P. P., Hon. A. B. McKenzie, and Hon. D. Ferguson.
- Islanders Abroad.—This toast was responded to by F. J. Conroy, Esq., in an eloquent speech which elicited much applause.
- The Bench and Bar responded to by Angus A. McLean and John Small McDonald, Esquires.
- The Army, Navy and Militia.—Responded to by Major Irving.
- The Press.—Responded to by Mr. Bowers, of the New Era; and Mr. Welsh, of the Herald.
- Our Guests.—Responded to by James H. Reddin, Esq.
- Agriculture and Commerce.—Responded to by A. McNeill, Esq.
- The Ladies.—Responded to by John M. Campbell, Esq., of the Postal Department.

The prosperity of the Osborne House, and "Our Host and Hostess," called forth a suitable reply from the proprietor, Mr. McGregor. "Auld Lang Syne" was heartily sang at the close of this very excellent and truly national gathering of Scotchmen and their friends.

ANNIVERSARY CELEBRATION—GRAND PROCESSION.

One hundred years ago yesterday, New York was evacuated by the British. Today the anniversary of the event was celebrated in a style of grandeur and magnificence characteristic of New Yorkers. A procession of 40,000 men started soon after nine o'clock, a. m., from Central Park for Bowling Green, which was reached a little after one o'clock, p. m. The route was through Fifth Avenue and Broadway. It was composed of soldiers, sailors, marines, firemen, veterans, policemen, grand army posts, societies, municipal representatives, Indians, the President of the United States, nine Governors of States and their staffs, Fifth Avenue and Broadway contained one compact mass of humanity. Flags, banners, streamers of flowers were suspended from thousands of buildings, and, notwithstanding a cold, drizzling rainstorm set in at ten o'clock, it did not chill nor dampen the enthusiasm of the multitude. In the first carriage of the procession sat President Arthur, beside him on his left General Grant, then came in carriages Cabinet Ministers, Members of Congress, Governors of the original revolting States, followed by Regulars, National Guard, Fireman, Policeman, etc. From the start President Arthur and General Grant were applauded—but faintly; but when Governor Ben Butler, of Mass., appeared, and his peculiar visage was seen, long and loud cheers went up, and his ride down 5th Avenue was one continuous ovation. The procession contained some notable organizations.

THE PHILADELPHIA LIGHT HORSE (escort to President Arthur), was first organized Nov. 17th, 1774, and has always been recruited from the elite of Philadelphia. It served with Washington in many engagements. This troop wears the antiquated uniform worn at that period. Next to this, on the right of the line was the FOURTH U. S. ARTILLERY, organized in this city, Jan. 6th, 1776, and had for its first commander, Hon. Alex. Hamilton, first Secretary of State under Washington. It has an eventful history. A carriage owned by Gen. Washington, and drawn by six horses, also a fire engine, (Washington 20), used in his day, were prominent amongst the curious things. In the first division of carriages were a number of lineal descendants of Commanders of the revolution. Of these, two, Guy Carlton, and John Aire Dempsey, are descendants of Sir Guy Carlton, British Commander of New York, at the time of the evacuation.

UNVEILING WASHINGTON'S STATUE. At two o'clock, p. m., a statue of Washington, erected on the steps of the sub-Treasury in Wall Street, where he first took the oath of office of President, was unveiled. Dr. Storrs offered up a prayer. Then President Arthur stepped forward, and looking down upon the sea of upturned faces, said: "I have come to this historical spot for the purpose of being present at the unveiling of the statue to him who protected and defended the country. This monument is a testimony of your generosity and public spirit." George William Curtis then delivered an address. Quite a novel feature of the celebration was a procession in the harbor of STREAM VESSELS. of all descriptions, numbering 500, including war ships, ocean steamers, river steamers, tugs and ferry boats. At ten o'clock, a. m., they started from Bede Island (down the harbor) and steamed up North River, then back and up the East River, blowing whistles, war ships firing a salute, etc. Many English residents of New York take exception to this celebration on the ground that it revives

UNPLEASANT MEMORIES. This, I think, is a mistake. There is nothing in it to offend any subject of Great Britain. Few can be found anywhere, to-day, to defend the tyrannical, mad policy of the ruler who sat upon the English throne a century ago. All nationalities joined in the procession. More anon.

Yours,
New York, Nov. 26, 1883.

SIR,—Having noticed an article in your issue of yesterday in reference to the albums for which our agent is soliciting orders in this place, we desire to disabuse the public mind of any erroneous impression which the article referred to may convey. Our agents are not allowed to take any orders by misrepresentation, for the simple reason that we give our customers six months to pay for any article they choose to purchase from us, in consequence of which it is to our own interest to represent the goods just as they are. As we have our albums manufactured in large quantities, expressly for our own trade, we can sell cheaper than any retail firm who supply only a portion of one small city. Moreover, the spring clasp which is on all of our albums, and which will preserve an album three times as long as the old style clasp, cannot be had from any other firm. Mr. Chappelle claims the agent took orders fraudulently because the subscriber was told that the same article could not be bought elsewhere for less than nine dollars; and yet in the same issue in which his letter appears he publishes an advertisement stating that he is selling an article at five cents which he has formerly sold at one dollar. Now, Mr. Chappelle has either defrauded the public out of ninety-five cents on an article worth only five, or he wishes to inveigle them into buying a five cent article, by telling them that its actual worth is one dollar. We guarantee our subscribers that we will give them an article on six months credit which cannot be purchased any cheaper from any other firm, and that all albums we deliver will be equally as good as the sample from which they ordered. We feel sure that before we have finished our business in this place, the generous public will realize that we are doing a perfectly legitimate and honest business.
