A Country Garden

The Bible is understandable since his father was a well-known Egyptologist and student of the antiquities, and there are no less than nine members of the clergy in his immediate family.

Twelve years was taken in the writing of this large book and many famous people assisted in the researches necessary. A popular interest in the botany of the Bible dates from very early times. Plants and plant products are referred to in so many hundreds of verses of both the old and new testaments, as well as in the books of the Apocrypha, that it is not at all surprising to find early theologians, divines, and scholars exceedingly interested in them.

Passing over the incidental—though none the less important—contributions to the subject made by Aristotle, Plato, Pliny and others, we find that the first book (of which we have a record) that dwelt entirely with the plants mentioned in the Scriptures was that of Lemmon in 1856, followed by other writers in the centuries that followed.

One of the most valuable was a book written by Hasselquist who explored the Holy Land in 1757, and it is still one of the most valuable books ever written on the subject.

In 1863 a writer tells of visiting the great British Museum of natural history in South Kensington and of finding specimens of plants and animals of all the rest of the world in great abundance, but scarcely any at all from Palestine! Even today this is most noticeable, and to the students of the Bible, most deplorable.

Floras change, especially in regions like Palestine and Egypt where man, notorious for his aptitude in upsetting the delicately adjusted balances in nature, has been most active, in one way and another, for at least 6000 years. How different the plant life of Biblical Palestine must have been from that of the present time!

Within the extent of a single landscape, there is every climate, from the cold of Northern Europe to the heat of India. The oak, the juniper, the cedar, the poplar, the willow, the ash, the ivy, and the hawthorn, grow luxuriantly on the heights of Hermon, Bashan, and Galilee.

Hence the traveller from the more northerly temperate lands finds himself, in some parts, surrounded by the trees and vegetation of his own country. He sees the apple, the pear, and the plum, and rejoices to meet the familiar wheat and barley, the peas, potatoes, cabbage, carrots, and various mustard.

The English is delighted to find himself surrounded by many of the flowers of his native land; for out of the 2000 or 2500 flowers of Palestine 500 are British. It looks like home to see the anemone, ranunculus, yellow water-lily, tulip, crocus, and hyacinth, the mignonette, geraniums, mal-

Flowers, the common bramble, the dogrose, the daisy, the well known groundsel, the dandelion, — sage, thyme, and sweet marjoram, blue and white pimpinell cyclamens, vervain, mint, horchound, nettles, and thistles; and ponds with the wonted water-creed, duckweed, and rushes.

These are the flowers familiar to us in the Holy Land, and next week we shall continue our study of this wonderful book.

One of the first steamship disasters was the wreck of the Royal Adelaide off England in 1850 with 400 dead.

The beautiful new fishing boat recently delivered by Mr. N. Bell to Mr. Laurie Gordon is the subject of much favorable comment along the waterfront, at the Harbour these days. This trim 36 ft. 3 in. craft with a 8 ft. 6 in. beam is a splendid example of fine workmanship. Her pleasing lines, even to the amateur, are compelling and alluring and one fancies her skimming with grace, ease and speed over the nearby waters as her owner plies his honorable trade of fishing. Mr. Gordon is a great fisherman, one of the best in this area, always top line or close enough to shake hands with the "topper", and for men such as he, only the best of equipment will suffice. Mr. Gordon, with this new "judy of the waves", will garner a most bountiful harvest.

Mr. Willard Brehaut, local school supervisor, accompanied by Mr. E. B. Walsh, visited the Harbour School on Monday March 23rd with the idea of starting singing classes in the primary and intermediate departments. Singing has been taught in this school for the past number of years but this year the lady engaged to do the instructing did not do so and so the matter was dropped until recently. Though it appears to be rather late in the school year to begin new activities, it is never too late to do good and undoubtedly considerable benefit will be gained from the venture.

Spurred by their unlimited vitality, and a desire to show any skeptical fans that their first victory was no flash in the pan, the Murray Harbour Girls hockey team, in a rough shod "Over the Married Ladies' sextette at the Murray Harbour Rink on Thursday evening March 19th by the score of 6-1. Their marvellous defense tactics, scintillating rushes coupled with deadly precision of their shooting left their married opponents, bewildered, befogged and befuddled. C. Herring, playing a steller game for the Married Women, scored with 20 seconds of the game remaining to rob the girls of a well deserved shut out. Another year the ladies hockey team of Murray Harbour will be serious contenders for Island honors.

year-old daughter? I have three other small children, and could use a little help. Should she be expected to wash dishes, dust, etc.? My husband and I try to tell her that she should help, but she refuses to co-operate.

ANSWER: A girl of 13 is capable of doing—and should be expected to do—many tasks around the house. In fact, such simple jobs as dishes and dusting can be handled by children even younger. She should be able to help with cooking, shopping, ironing, look after her own room, closet and dresser and help out with the younger children. Instead of miffed requesting her help, let it be understood that it is expected of her and failure to co-operate will result in loss of privileges.

Be sure your younger children learn their share of responsibility while they are still small.
