Opening lead — three of diamonds.

Bridge is not usually thought of as a spectator sport. Playing conditions being what they are, only a handful of kibitzers can gather around a table to observe the players and give vent to mixed reactions.

To watch the top-ranking experts in action is an experience enjoyed up to now by relatively few fans, but, starting this Sunday afternoon and continuing each week therafter, millions of bridge players throughout the country will be able to tune in on their TV sets and see the champions perform right before their eyes.

The opening show will feature Helen Sobel, famed New York star, partnered with Paul Hodge of Abilene, Texas, playing against Sidney Lazard of New Orleans and Lee Hazen of New York. Lazard and Hazen were members of the team which represented the United States in the last world championship match.

The hand shown today was once played by Mrs. Sobel. It demonstrates an ingenious play she made to fulfill a small slam contract.

East had opened the bidding with three diamonds and North had gaily leaped to six after Mrs. Sobel smoothly dropped the king!

A diamond return would have defeated the contract, but it was difficult for East to conceive that Mrs. Sobel had started with the K-J-6 and would play the king on the ace. East thought his partner had started with the J-6-3, in which case the three would normally have been led.

So East returned a spade, hoping against hope that West held the ace of spades. Declarer won the spade and lost no time drawing trumps, eventually discarding her diamond losers on dummy's good clubs.

Perhaps East should have seen through the scheme and returned a diamond despite the drop of the king, but he didn't.

Had Mrs. Sobel played the six on the opening lead, East very likely would have played back a diamond in the hope that West's three was a singleton.

Beating Said Causes Death

CHELSEA, Vt. (AP) — The Vermont state pathologist testified Tuesday that Orville A. Gibson died of asphyxia, the result of drowning.

Dr. Richard F. Woodruff said he came to that conclusion after examination of tissues from the body of the Newbury dairyman.

The state contends Gibson was the victim of "vigilante" killing in revenge for Gibson's beating of his elderly farmhand on Christmas Day, 1957.

Robert O. Welch, 45, Newbury janitor, is on trial for murder. A second man, Frank W. Carpenter, 44, also was indicted but is to be tried ater.

Gibson disappeared a week after his atercation with farmhand Eric Martin, 57, over two cans of milk that were spilled.

Gibson's body was found almost three months later in the Connecticut River, seven miles downstream from a bridge near his farm. His knees were drawn up against his chest and his hands were tied together behind his legs.

New Nfld. Union Would Affiliate

TORONTO (CP)—An official of the Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America (CLC) said Tuesday the union will probably consult with the Canadian Labor Congress before acting on an affiliation request from the Newfoundland Brotherhood of Woods Workers.

The Newfoundland union, promoted by Premier Joseph Smallwood in his campaign to drive the International Woodworkers of America (CLC) from the province, has applied at carpenters union headquarters in Indianapolis, Ind., for affiliation.

Andrew Cooper of Toronto, a vice-president of the carpenters and the union's top Canadian officer, said he did not think the international president would act on the request without discussing it with CLC president Claude Jodoin.

William Dodge, executive vice-president of the CLC, said the congress has warned all affiliates against contacts with the Newfoundland union.

NAB MILLIONAIRE

SINGAPORE (AP) — Chinese millionaire Chia Yee-goh, 70, was kidnapped Monday night on his way home after a game of gold at the Royal Island Club. Police said they believe a gang of five armed men seized the wealthy garage owner.

Brewing Control Idea Is Charge On Taylor

TORONTO (CP) — A special crown prosecutor told the Supreme Court of Ontario Tuesday that E. P. Taylor, chairman of the board of Canadian Breweries Limited, conceived the idea of controlling the Canadian brewing industry in 1927.

Prosecutor R. F. Wilson made the statement as the company's combines trial opened before Chief Justice J. C. McRuer.

Canadian Breweries Limited is charged under the Combines Investigation Act with operating a combine consisting of a merger, trust or monopoly. The company has pleaded not guilty.

The action was launched on the basis of a 1955 investigation by the restrictive trade practices commission.

Mr. Wilson said the commission found the company's merger program, which he described as conceived by Mr. Taylor and put into operation in 1929, was "monopolistic and not in the public interest."

He said that while the indictment names only Canadian Breweries Limited it alleges that five other firms — Western Canadian Breweries Limited, Carlings Breweries Limited, Dow Brewery, O'Keefe's Breweries and Brewers' Warehousing Limited—were parties to the alleged offence.

The accused company, he said, was organized for the purpose of acquiring ownership of other breweries.

While there were more than 80 breweries operating in Canada in 1931, Mr. Wilson said, there were 57 in 1958 of which Canadian Breweries Limited owned 17 accounting for 47.4 per cent of total production.
