Ayten Salih, of the hospital staff. Looking on is Capt. Ted Day of Ottawa. The officers and men of the Royal Canadian Dragoons in Nicosia provided toys, food and music for a party they gave the children in the hospital shortly before Christmas.

Christmas In Cyprus Has Gaiety And Gruesomeness

By A.C. HOLMAN
Oranges in Christmas stockings are a standard item in many Canadian homes on Christmas Eve, but for the 1,000 Canadian troops who spent Christmas 1965 in Cyprus the oranges were not found in their stockings. They were hanging ripe on the trees, ready and waiting to be picked.

The orange, lemon and grapefruit trees, weather-similar to what Canadians are accustomed to in late September, palm trees and lack of snow were not conducive to thoughts of Christmas. But the thoughts were there nonetheless.

The mess halls and canteens in the Canadian camps were all decked out in tinsel and bright shiny balls; turkeys were flown out from Canada for Christmas dinners, plans for Christmas parties were made and carried out.

At the instigation of Major Walter L. Conrad of Charlottetown, the commanding officer of "B" Squadron of the Royal Canadian Dragoons, the officers and men of the RCD's threw a Christmas party for 50 children in the Red Crescent Hospital located in the Turkish enclave in Nicosia.

MARRIED ISLAND GIRL
The party was paid for by donations from all the officers and men of the Squadron. Toys were purchased for each child and the cooks of the Squadron, led by Sgt. Norman MacAskill, prepared a hot meal for the guests.

Sgt. MacAskill is married to the former Lorraine MacKenzie of Valleyfield West, P.E.I. Any Christmas party worthy of the name must have music and the RCD's provided this in fine style. A guitar player and a fiddler appeared and played a number of Christmas carols that had a real "Down East" sound to them.

Though it was Christmas for the Canadian soldiers, the children who were all Muslims didn't know or really care what the significance of the party was. The musicians soon realized this and started to play some down to earth toe tapping selections which one tiny girl couldn't resist and she jumped off her stool and started to dance.

The music was country and western, but the little girl's dance was definitely Turkish. The little three-and-a-half-foot dancer was soon joined by another who fell under the music's spell. Her partner was Capt. Robert Richards of Toronto and it was difficult to tell who was enjoying themselves more, the tiny Turkish girl or the six-foot soldier from Canada.

TOUCHING SIGHT
It was a touching sight to see soldiers, many of them Korean veterans, distributing toys showing the children how to work them waiting on the children at meal time and even spoon-feeding many of them.

A couple of days later the same scene was repeated. This time in a Red Cross Sick Children's Hospital 18 miles north of Nicosia in a town called Kyrenia. This time it was the officers and men of the 2nd Battalion The Canadian Guards, The Guards Lt. Col. C.V. Carlson of Regina Sask. accompanied Santa Claus when he flew into the hospital by helicopter.

On another day in still another part of the island another Christmas party was given for sick children in a Greek hospital by members of the Swedish contingent.

The hospital at Kyrenia is the only one on the island where there are Greek-Cypriot and Turkish-Cypriot children being treated together. A Christmas party for those children can be held there without causing any feelings of favoritism by the United Nations forces towards one side or the other.

CHILDREN USED
The party given by the RCD's to the Turkish children in Nicosia was only possible because the Swedes were giving the Greek children one in Famagusta. Though he was glad to be able to do something for the children Major Conrad regretted that the children were being used as political pawns.

While out for a stroll in Nicosia one morning another example of the ridiculousness that the children are subjected to in an effort to keep alive the hostilities between the Greek and Turkish factions was seen. It was in a house which the family of a Turkish medical officer supposedly died in murdered by Greek-Cypriots when the troubles broke out on Dec. 21, 1963. The Turkish leaders have set the house up as a "Museum of Barbarism." In the small five-room house all the walls are covered with pictures of atrocities committed against the Turks.

The story the Turks tell of the murdered family which consisted of the officer's mother his wife and three small children is illustrated with pictures of the bodies of the mother and children piled in the bathtub where they were found by the Turks.

BLOODSTAINS EVIDENT
In the bathroom where the family was supposedly found the blood was not washed off the bathtub the blood stained clothing of the victims was displayed and on the ceiling there were pieces of the victims hair and blood stains.

The Turkish people were having a week of ceremonies marking the heroic defense by the Turkish people in 1963 when this reporter arrived in Nicosia. One of the items on the program during this week was the visiting of the "Museum of Barbarism" by school children and their teachers.

At the time I was going through the horrible house a bus arrived and about 120 small children between the ages of five and eight were taken on a tour of the place by their teachers.

Though I did not see it I was told by many Canadians that the Greek Cypriots had a similar museum which they called the "House of Atrocities" and they were using the one I saw.

It was not by any stretch of the imagination a very Christmas scene.

A spokesman at the RCMP's divisional headquarters here said no further investigations would be made. A private plane carrying an RCMP officer flew over the area along the south-eastern border of Cape Breton Highlands National Park Wednesday but reported spotting no signs of wreckage or anything unusual.

The RCMP detachment at Ingonish Beach received three separate reports from residents Monday about what sounded like a low-flying aircraft followed by a flash and sound of an explosion.

Transport department and air-sea rescue officials said they had received reports of missing or overdue planes.

Police Wednesday said the noise and flash may have been a bursting flare dropped from an aircraft flying over the area.

Authorities Seek Name of Jumper

The identity of a person who parachuted from a plane near here Monday was being sought Wednesday by airport authorities.

The jumper landed in the vicinity of North River on the outskirts of the city where it was reported he was picked up by a ski-equipped plane.

Airport authorities say two regulations are involved-jumping near heavily-populated areas and jumping in close proximity to a major airport.

Sgt. Tedford of the Charlottetown detachment of the RCMP is reported to have seen the jumper, but wasn't close enough to identify the jumper.

Several people in the Charlottetown area claim to have witnessed the incident.

Soviet Ship Gets Free

SOURIS - Soviet seamen freed their freighter Cherniakhovsk from her second grounding Wednesday in the harbor here and returned the vessel to the government wharf where she was loading pulp when a storm Tuesday snapped her moorings.

Loading of pulp was expected to start today after reports Wednesday night there was no serious damage to the 5,382-ton freighter. She was to take on 13,000 cords for Italy.

High winds tore the freighter from the wharf Tuesday and grounded her on rocks in the harbor. The crew of 41 managed to free the vessel Wednesday but she grounded again almost immediately on sand. She freed herself for the second time in the evening.

Two members of the crew jumped from the vessel when she was first driven aground in the harbor but they later returned to the ship with no known injuries.

Celebrated Team Appears Tonight

By MAUREEN DRISCOLL
Charlottetown audiences are in for a treat this evening when the celebrated Benno and Sylvia Rabinof, a violin-piano duo, will be featured in a Community Concert at Confederation Centre.

One of the world's finest and most popular husband-and-wife violin-piano duos on the concert stage today, Benno and Sylvia Rabinof have been acclaimed by cheering audiences not only in the United States and Canada, but in Asia, Africa, the Middle and Near East, and Europe as well, and are noted as champions of contemporary music as well as exceptionally sympathetic performers of the tried and true classics.

The Rabinofs can claim the distinction of being the only husband and wife team to have been simultaneously awarded the degree of Doctor of Music which was conferred upon them by Lincoln Memorial University.

The New York Herald Tribune called them "a duo of distinction" while the New York Times critic hailed their performance as a "special treat." In Athens they were described as "two brilliant soloists" and in Istanbul, as "two rare talents, harmoniously united and balanced."

Benno Rabinof, a native New Yorker, is the last in a great line of Leopold Auer pupils that included Heifetz, Elmen, and Zimbalist. He made his debut at the age of 19 in New York's Carnegie Hall playing a Tchaikovsky Concerto. He plays the priceless "Lord Amherst" Stradivarius, one of the three greatest "Strads" in the world, formerly owned by Fritz Kreisler, who played his last Carnegie Hall recital upon this same violin.

Mrs. Rabinof, who made her debut in Paris as the 18 year-old Sylvia Smith, is not only one of the foremost women pianists of the day but the composer of more than 150 works, including instrumental, solo chamber music, an orchestral suite and an opera. She is one of the few pianists to play accompaniments and sonatas by memory.

This concert this evening will include Sonata in G major by Beethoven, Recitative and Scherzo-Opus by Frits Kreisler and Berceuse, from "The Fire Bird" by Stravinsky.

Claims Drop, Manager Says

Figures released yesterday by George W. Cheverie, Charlottetown office manager of the Unemployment Insurance Commission, show that there was a drop of 4.8 per cent in the number of persons drawing UIC benefits at Dec. 31, 1965, in comparison with the number drawing at Dec. 31, 1964.

Mr. Cheverie attributed the greater portion of this drop to the projects now underway under the municipal winter works incentive program in which 60 per cent of the labor costs are borne by the Dominion government and 30 per cent by the provincial government.
