Women With Two Roles Take Up Speed Cooking

By IDA BAILEY ALLEN

More than ten million women are carrying on two jobs: a career and homemaking. So any time-saving food or method of food preparation is eagerly welcomed. Rice is one of the foods receiving the speed treatment.

Two Varieties

We have the already-cooked packaged white rice that needs only the addition of boiling water. This rice can be made ready to eat in 15 minutes, and is now enriched like other cereals. Also, there is a new canned, cooked white rice of good flavor and flakiness. In this case, just place the can in boiling water and heat for about 10 minutes.

These products cost more than raw white rice by the pound, and the reason they are used is because many persons don't know how easy it is to plain-cook rice. They still think it must be washed in several waters before cooking, then drained and re-steamed afterwards.

Here's a new quick method of preparing flaky rice:

New and Quick

For each 2 persons, measure in to a saucepan 1 c. raw white rice, 2 tsp. salt and 1 c. cold water. Cover closely. Place over high heat until boiling vigorously. Reduce to a simmer, cook 14 min. longer.

Remove cover. Let rice steam 5 Province later in the season.

ELLEN'S DIARY

by an Island Farmer's Wife

Again it is night, one of waning water by the easterly, February-frosted and fetchingly starlit. How they sparkle, these friends of the darkness! And regarding them we wonder: are the other planets earthy? What color cradles, if any, their lakes and their pools? Are the mountains towering heaps of dark rocks, snow-crowned and hidden in the clouds? Or is part scarred winsomely with trees?

And the folks, if any—the women, would they be taken up as were Island farm-wives today with the Saturday's work? Dusting floors and stairs, polishing a stove, a mirror, a window; baking loaves and a cake, maybe dressing a chicken to cook for the Sunday dinner.

Do they there have high winds in the chimneys like the wild one of this day to have a husband come indoors to remind one: "Bethah watch dose fi-ahs woman! Buildings would burn like so much tind-ah in this. Baking? Nevah mind yo' baking until dis wind is spent."

Would one of those women of Mars, whose door someone may some day come to in a space ship, of venus, of saturn or like spheres, see farmers at work as did we at Alderlea today? A horse and sleigh at the doors of stables during the spells of cleaning, another taking away and bringing in grist from the mill.

Could they see horses in stalls—a young mare bending low a head to nuzzle the palms of the children, to nibble daintily at the bits of clover offered? Would there be piggeries and sties and weanlings... And indoors when the day was still new, a farmer turning back the leaves of an old calendar soberly adding up a measure of months and days slipped away, saying "30 and 31 and 31—that makes..." and then nodding "It's as I suspected. We should move those first ones to the farrowing pens shortly. In a few days now—not more than a week we should have more little pigs. And" with some surprise time has passed so quickly "it won't be too long now before the first calf is due." What joys and concerns attend the spring increase on farms!

The day of the wood-sawing has not yet dawned though we heard it discussed today: "Now that it's clean about James said 'we must get to it; in the event of another snowfall it may be delayed until spring.'"

"Neither losses nor crosses this week!" we smiled to him at supper, looking back along its days.

"As it happened, no losses, Ellen, though I wouldn't say we had no crosses" James replied. "It 'to be' to be if there were no worries in it." But now the night bids us for-

British Housewives "Dial For a Menu"

HULL, England, (Reuters) — Housewives troubled by menu problems will soon be able to get ideas for the family dinner by calling the local telephone exchange here.

The Hull telephone committee—its Britain's only municipally-owned telephone system—Wednesday approved a "dial for a menu" service for the town's 46,000 telephone subscribers.

The idea was suggested by a bachelor member of the local council.

Each day a different menu, complete with recipes, will be available on a recording between 8:30 in the morning and noon. It will cost housewives twopence to dial the menu service number from a public call box, and a fraction of a penny if they have their own phone.

The Hull telephone system, the only one in Britain not run by the central government, already has special services for relaying a daily health talk, a diary of events and, at Christmas, the voice of Santa Claus.

MORNING SMILE

"It is high time," said the reformer, "that we had a moral awakening. Let us rise in our might. Let us gird our loins. Let us take off our coats. Let us bare our arms. Let us..."

"Hold on!" exclaimed a tall, thin woman near the platform. "If this is to be a moral awakening, don't you dare to take off another thing!"

Lovely New Linens Brighten Baby's Crib

By ELEANOR ROSS

Each new arrival should have a new mattress—no hand-me-downs, if possible, although in a large family such is often the case, as any "youngest" child will remember.

Firm and Buoyant

To provide healthful support for baby's muscular and skeletal structure, the mattress should be properly firm and buoyant, not worn down here and there, but firmly level.

To make nursery life more pleasant for mother, as well as baby, there are new contour crib sheets that can't possibly pull out, no matter how much baby kicks and tumbles about in his bed. And because of the fitted corners, no pinning or tucking is required. They fit beautifully.

The sheets come in pastels and patterns in bright colors, giving the nursery a gay look.

If He's Allergic to Wool

For the wool-allergic baby there are soft blankets, bunting and sleeping bags produced in a special fiber, as well as puckered nylon quilts with an all-nylon filling that washes and dries quickly. In floor-at patterns as well as solid pastels, the nylon quilts retain their shape through much washing.

Spring-like Yellow

Maize is a new shade added to the usual pink, white and blue pastel color line-up, and appears to be gaining in favor. "To be" if there were no worries in it." But now the night bids us for-

HOUSEHOLD HINT

Snow or rain carried into the house may turn a floor white in spots. When dry, rub the spots lightly with steel wool and denatured alcohol. Then apply two thin coats of fresh, white shellac. Dry between coats.

One sensible way to brighten a stained floor that is old and worn and not worth refinishing, is to paint it.

It is economical in the long run to use a good quality floor paint or enamel which will stand up, and if the floor is to be subjected to heavy traffic, use three coats.
