ADVERTISING RATES.

For small advertisements which are ordered for only one or two weeks the charge is 5c cents per inch for the first insertion, and 2 cents for each continuation. Rate cards are furnished on application at the office. Special contract prices at a reduced rate are quoted for advertisements four inches in size or larger, which are to run for three months or longer.

No special notices inserted unless paid for at the rate of 10 cents per line, and under no circumstances will such paid notices appear in the local column.

Special discounts made on all advertisements connected with Church Fairs, Bazaars, Picnics, etc. No notices will be inserted with the same unless the regular rate of 10 cents per line is paid.

That THE EXAMINER is considered by our Merchants and Manufacturers to be the leading newspaper in P. E. Island, and consequently the most valuable advertising medium through which to make their announcements public, is abundantly proved by the fact that in order to accommodate our advertisers we have been compelled to enlarge the paper to its present size.

THE DAILY EXAMINER is for sale by the following agents:—

OLD AGE OF INDIANS.

Defying All Rules of Health They Keep Well and Strong.

The Remarkable Longevity of the Indian Race Explained.—For Every Human Ill They Have a Cure—They Know Where to Find the Roots, Herbs and Barks that will keep them in Good Health—The Secret Now Given to the World.

Laughing Dog. Age 104 Yrs.

Indians are long lived.

There are many Klekapoos now living who have trod parts of this vast continent long before white men ever set his foot on the soil of their vast domain. Their lives have been spent with nature.

Born to good health, as the saying goes, they keep it.

Think how they live, eat, sleep, travel about, exposed to climatic changes, poisonous night airs, damp sleeping places, food half cooked, and eaten with utter disregard of all common rules of health.

Yet, look at them! Pictures of health.

Chronic Rheumatism? Never. Malaria and Chills? Very rarely. Indigestion? Occasional symptoms perhaps, but Chronic Dyspepsia, utterly unheard of. While any of the numerous afflictions of the liver, kidneys or bladder, so frequently found among the whites, is rarely heard of among the Indians.

Why is it?

For centuries these children of nature have studied her ways. For centuries they have known where to look in the forest and field for a certain cure for the ills which arise from the disobedience of nature's laws. At the first sign, the first symptoms of sickness, they resort to their "Sagwa"—the most potent, remedial combination of roots and herbs known to the Indian or any other race.

A combination so valuable that the learned professor of Physiological Chemistry at Yale college commended it, and could offer no suggestions.

Science surpassed by Indian craft! Nature undefiled by mineral poisons. Indians are exempt to ills of the flesh, but they have a remedy for all.

Kickapoo Indian Cough Cure breaks up their colds and stops their coughs. Kickapoo Indian Worm Killer keeps their children free from these troubles; and Kickapoo Indian Oil arrests croup, allays pain, heals bruises, and quickly kills all pains; Kickapoo Indian Salve heals, wounds, cuts, abrasions of the skin, humors, eczema, etc.

These remedies are now sold by every druggist in the land, and their best proof of genuine worth is in the fact that on their merit solely they have achieved this sale within a few short years. Ask for them at the Trading Post on the Frontier, and you'll find them there. Go into the fashionable drug stores of New York City, and these remedies of the Indians are to be bought. Everywhere, high and low, they have made friends by their intrinsic value. Sold by Druggists and Dealers.

Why you take Cold and Cough.

Generally caused by exposure to cold, wet feet, sitting in a draught, coming from hot and crowded places, in thin dress, or wearing damp clothes, stockings, or any other cause tending to check suddenly the perspiration. The result produces inflammation of the lining membrane of the lungs or throat, and this causes phlegm or matter, which nature tries to throw off by expectoration. In many cases she is unable to do so without assistance, and this is

HOW HE MADE HIS FORTUNE.

Story of a Louisiana Slave Who Died Worth $1,000,000.

New Orleans Letter to the New York Times: Nobody knows the capacity the negro has for becoming a money saver, and even a miser, except the Southern man. When Francois Delacroix died a few years ago he was found to be worth $1,000,000. His history is interesting as showing the peculiar methods by which a fortune may be made.

Francois Delacroix was the chattel of Le Chevalier F. de la Croix, an old-time creole gentleman well known in New Orleans. The chevalier had been a soldier in his youth and believed in the Bourbon lilies. So when the Prince President Louis Napoleon became ruler of the second republic of France in 1849 M. de la Croix left his beloved land and came back to Louisiana, where he had a numerous and distinguished number of kinsmen among the leading creoles of the State. One of them dying soon after his return, the chevalier became seized and possessed of some valuable slaves. One named Francois, who had taken his master's name of de la Croix, was particularly valuable. He was an expert tailor, and shortly after he became the property of his new owner he was permitted to purchase his freedom for $2000. Soon after this he established a tailoring establishment of his own. It was famous for two things, the first being that it was the most expensive place of the sort in the city; and as the New Orleans dandy of that day followed the fashions of Paris rather than London, wily Francois always had on hand the finest French fabrics and the most skillful couturiers to make them.

But lucrative as the tailoring feature of his business was—far away back in the '50s a dress suit from Delacroix's, as he took to spelling his name, cost $80 to $100, when the most expensive tailor in New York or Boston charged only $50 and $60—there was another part of it which paid still more enormous profits. It soon became rumored about town that any young gentleman of family and possible fortune could be accomodated with a loan on no security at all if he stood well with Delacroix. He knew the general character and reputation of every young "blood" of New Orleans, as well as those of the great baronial sugar and cotton estates above the city and below. Delacroix took no notes. The gentleman simply gave his "word of honor" to pay at a given time. Delacroix did not lose 1 per cent of his loans made in this way. To be sure, the interest was enormous, but what would you? No one borrowed large sums for a long time, and after a "heavy night" at faro it was convenient for the young gentlemen who did not want to tap the paternal pocket to heavily to be able to promptly "settle up" by going to Delacroix, even if "the old scoundel" did charge 8 per cent per month.

It was just as well in those days, too, for a person in the business Delacroix was doing to have an owner. So Francois paid the chevalier for himself nearly all the $2000 agreed upon. He let enough of it stand to insure the protection of the fire-eater of the Bourbon armies should his aid be needful. "Ha! dat nigre of mine, he heap richair dan hees mast-r," this old man used to say. Though the slave could have liquidated the balance necessary to make him a free man any hour in the day he did not want to be entirely free. If he was he would have to pay taxes and all that sort of thing, and the police might ask inconvenient questions. It was much better as it was. And so the two went on maintaining the most amicable relations long after the war ended. Francois was kind to his old master until the chevalier died, which was about 1869. His slave soon followed him, and then it was that the immense fortune he had became known.

SCHEME FOR AN OCEAN TROLLEY.

Latest Plan to Send Great Ships Spinning Across the Sea.

It is pretty well understood that the limit of speed in ocean steamers is about reached if the present models are adhered to and that if there is to be any gain in swiftness it must be by the trial of a new form. The difficulty is to devise a vessel of which the structural strength shall be great enough to carry the massive engines requisite for increased speed and at the same time to resist the force of the ocean storms. If the sea were calm there would be no difficulty in increasing the speed of the "ocean greyhounds," but with the tremendous force of waves and storms it is not possible to do this with the present models. It is not impossible that the solution of the problem lies in the submarine ship, and that the passenger steamer of the future will go under water instead of across its surface. The advance made in the planning and working of submarine boats in the last ten years makes this seem not wholly impossible, as it must have looked once, and there is no doubt that the freedom from the effects of surface storms would allow a swiftness which could hardly be arrived at on the surface. It might also solve the question of seasickness, as it is probable that submarine locomotion would be much smoother and less disturbing to the stomach than the present method of traveling. All that one can say, however, is that we shall see what we shall see.

Perhaps the steamer of the future will be operated on a trolley by means of a submarine cable. The advantage of this plan would be great, as it would prevent the necessity of carrying immense quantities of fuel and of keeping the vessel loaded down with enormous engines. All the delay and difficulty and expense of managing furnaces and engines on board ship would be done away with by the oceanic trolley system, and the ship could be made so much lighter that it would go whizzing across the ocean in a couple of days. Danger of accident could be brought to be no greater than it is at present by having a sufficient number of repair steamers on the route, which could keep the cables in repair, and in case of any accident to the trolley could bring the passenger boat into port or put it again in connection with the cable.

There can be no question that the proper means of crossing the Atlantic quickly is by some system which will allow the motive power to be applied from the shore, either by a trolley or a cable. The limit of speed for ships that carry engines and fuel is certainly practically reached on the surface, and there are difficulties in the way of submarine navigation which it would be hard to conquer. The trolley system is capable of great extension, and we may yet live to go to Europe by its means.—Boston Courier.

emancipation from heavily boned stays the Empire corset affords a pleasant alternative.

The corset is pretty and light in weight, and supports the bust without compressing the waist.—New York Herald.

"HAVE ONE WITH ME."

The Odd Proposal Which a Convivial Man Was Lucky Enough to Make.

A party of ladies were talking about how their husbands had proposed, says The Detroit Free Press, when one whose present husband was her third, laughed.

"I think," she said, "that Henry's proposal was about the funniest I ever heard of. You know Henry was a bachelor and his weakness was drinking with the boys, which, by the way," she added promptly, "I cured him of completely; and one night he come to see me, as he usually did every week, and we were talking along very sensibly, though Henry had evidently taken a drink or two before he called. You see, I liked him immensely and he liked me, but somehow we had never talked matrimony to each other, although we often talked it as applying to other people. On this evening Henry had said something or other critising marriages, and I put right in:

"'Well,' I said, I think it the only way to be happy. I've been married twice and——

"'Have one with me,' interrupted Henry perussively, and I accepted him on the spot, and we've been happy as two bees in a honeysuckle ever since."

My Baby.

A cunning mite, in robes of white,
All lace embroidered o'er;
With tiny feet, so dimpled sweet,
That never pressed the floor;
With wreathed smiles and baby wiles,
With mischief brimming o'er—
Ah no, ah no, it is not so,
You surely, surely do not know
My baby.

He pulls your hair, nor does he care
How much the pain may be.
He waves his hands like fairy wands,
And jumps and crows with glee,
He loudly weeps, then gently sleeps
Upon his mother's knee.
Ah no, ah no, it is not so,
You surely, surely cannot know
My baby.

A sailor brave, who rules the wave,
Nor fear's the ocean's roar.
He's kind and true, with eyes of blue,
That twinkle evermore.
He loves his home, though he may roam
Upon a distant shore.
Ah yes, ah yes, come, now, confess.
Unless you knew, now could you guess
My baby?

Though winds may tan this bearded man,
And time may furrows plow;
Though life's rude shocks bring silver locks
To crown his noble brow;
Though years may go and come, I know
He'll still remain as now.
On land or sea he'll ever be,
From time until eternity,
My baby.

A New Coiffure.

This new arrangement of the hair for the back of the head is shown by the London Queen. It is called the Nest, and consists of three small marteaux curls, pinned in the center of twists of hair. It adjusts itself well to the shape of the head, and is specially comfortable for wearing with hats. It is no good ignoring the fact that most women from time to time have recourse to the aid of the hairdresser's clever inventions, says the Queen, and even people blessed with an unusually good head of hair must perforce occasionally fall back on these useful additions, which save time and minimise the trouble of hairdressing.
