

Ass'n Aims To Protect Customers

By WILLIAM MacDOUGALL
MONTREAL (CP)—A builder accepts a known payment for a home, starts to build it, then goes bankrupt before it is finished and the customer is left in a financial tangle.

Or a builder decides to make a few extra dollars by using inferior materials, causing the home-buyer a major expense within a year or two after moving in.

These are the things the Montreal District Home Builders Association—and similar associations elsewhere—are trying to prevent.

This is one of the reasons the Montreal district association has embarked on a membership-creating campaign, says Raymond F. Laque, association executive vice-president.

The aim of the association is to become a better business bureau of our industry," pending renewed efforts to convince the Quebec government to enact legislation requiring the licensing of builders and setting stiff standards for them, Mr. Laque said in an interview.

INTEREST EXPRESSED
The provincial association is working towards such legislation and Mr. Laque said the Laque government has expressed interest in the idea. He said no such legislation exists in any province.

By getting new members and by putting on a high-powered publicity campaign, the association seeks to establish a public-respected seal of quality or stamp of approval on member-built homes.

The publicity advantages in members were obvious in addition, for a membership fee ranging between $100 and $200 a year, a builder also obtained the benefits of the association's liaison committee with the central mortgage and home corporation and other mortgage companies. There were sundry other benefits.

ASSOCIATION SETS CODE
The association's code of provisions are:

Members shall comply with the national building code of Canada as a minimum standard for construction. Members shall plan their sites and homes to conform to the principles of good community planning. Members shall deal justly with their employees, subcontractors and suppliers. Members shall deal honestly and fairly with their customers.

Members shall cooperate to extend the effectiveness of the association by interchanging information and experience and encourage research on materials and techniques in order to provide better homes at lower cost. Members shall uphold the principle of appropriate and adequate compensation for the services which they render. Members shall avoid all conflict or practice likely to discredit or do injury to the home-building industry."
