The Markets.

SIR.—Fish market for the past week has been fairly active, still prices in all lines are rather heavy.

In mackerel our shore fleet are still giving us heavy stock of small sized fish, and sales of fares have been made as low as $2.75 to $3; dealers are full on this line of goods; large mackerel are wanted at $7 to $10. Several fares have been landed from the Bay and sold at $9 to $10.

Receipts from Nova Scotia are not large; still, as quality and size is no better than that of our shore fish, they are not sought for by our dealers and would sell at $3.50 for small and $7 to $7.25 for large.

Island mackerel received last week were sold at $12 for uncolled fish, and we hope to see the same figures for this week's stock. The boat was behind time and we have no sales to report from her.

In dry fish, the stocks at all points on our shores (held in butts) are very heavy, and it looks like a low range of prices all through the season; prices are now weak and buyers are not at all anxious for stock; would quote large pickles cured codfish, $3.75 to $4; mediums, $3 per cwt., large dry shore (ketch cured) $4.25; large dry Bank, $3.50; mediums, $3; large pickle Bank, $3.25; mediums, $2.75; hake, $2.25; haddock, $2; cusk, $2.25; cod oil, $8 to 40 cents; herring oil, 25 to 30 cents. Have not had as large receipts of barreled Herring, still prices are heavy; large Nova Scotia Shore splits, $4.50, round $2.00, gibbed, 2.25, Bay Shore gibbed, $2.24, Bay Shore splits, $2.25, Bay of Islands splits, $2.25, Alwives, $3.25 to $3.50. Salmon is duller than we have ever known it to be, and it is hard to move them, sales have been at $12.00 to $14 per cwt.

Eggs dull, and 18 cents per doz. is the best to-day for Island and Nova Scotia stock. Canned lobsters 1 lb. cans, $1.60 per doz., blueberries 1 1/2 lb. cans, $1.50 to $1.40 per doz., all labelled goods.

Yours truly,
EDW. T. RUSSELL, & Co.

The British Association.

(St. John Daily Telegraph.)
MONTREAL, Sept. 2.—Before 11 a. m., the hour of meeting, the Montreal Gymnasium, where the geographical section meets, was densely crowded, on the strength of the announcement that Lieut.
Greely would take part in a discussion on Lieut. Ray's paper on "Arctic Experiences at Point Barrow." Greely read a discourse on the recent discoveries in Northern Greenland, being an account of his own explorations. He spoke clearly and looked very well, but showed the nervousness of weakness now and then. He was complimented elaborately by Lord Rayleigh, Sir H. Lefroy, Sir Erasmus Ommanney, Capt. Bedford Pim and other great men of the association.

The list of papers in every section was to-day much lengthened, hard work being necessary to avoid an extensive "slaughter of innocents." The popular section F, economic science and statistics, filled up rapidly with Canadians after Lieut. Greely had been heard, a paper by E. Wragg and Alex. McDougall, civil engineers, on transport by land and water, bore particularly on Canadian routes, the authors maintaining that railways have the advantage of canals, a position warmly assailed and captured by their opponents in the discussion. Secretary Foxwell then read a profound paper on land laws, by the eminent Belgian economist, Emile de Laveleye, after which Miss Rye, Mrs. Burt and Mrs.
Joyce discoursed on female emigration, with particular reference to Canada. In this section it was a ladies day, the women holding their ground firmly during the reading and discussion on T. B. Sprague's paper on "The probability that a marriage entered into at any age will be fruitful, and that a marriage childless for several years will subsequently become fruitful."

A Mysterious Gold Mine.

GUARDED BY MIO-MAC SUPERSTITIONS.
The Aspy Bay correspondent of the Baddeck Island Reporter tells the following curious story about a gold mine:

There are many reports going the rounds about a valuable gold mine somewhere in the mountains between Aspy Bay and Chet-camp. It is supposed that the place is under some fascination or superstition, and that no one know or can find it but the Indians.

Very few Indians are living to-day that know where it is. At Sydney a few days ago, an old squaw was consulted about it, but she said, "If I tell me die. My poor husband go show it to whites, an be die; Ingonish; me never tell." There is another old Indian at Whyacomagh, who was often at the spot, but he says, "Me wai um Short Line take me there; me no walkum, and me no tell." Whatever is their view in keeping this a secret, we can't comprehend, but they are bound unto death not to tell, and they make out that if any of their tribe should go and attempt to show it, it is certain death for that person. It seems to be a thing unknown, wrapped up in a mystery. At one time two squaws came out of the wood at Chetcamp and stayed for dinner at the Priest's house.

On leaving they gave him a few stones, which they supposed would pay for the dinner. He, suspecting something, made enquiries as to where they got them, and offered to go back with them to the spot.
They refused either to go or to tell where it was found, but in pressing them closer, they said it would be found on the island on the fork of land where two brooks are joining, but on any consideration they would not go. After these stones were assayed their value was twenty pounds.

Mr. Joseph Guinn, of this place says he remembers well, although a lad at the time, when the Indians used to come to Chetcamp and stay over night near his father's house. They used to visit the camps frequently, and on several occasions saw them break up stones and throw them in the fire until something yellow would melt into a mass in the ashes, and then they would take up this stuff, cut it and brake it with hammers into rings, and when polished it would shine as bright as any gold. How to solve this mystery is the great question that is troubling the excited speculators of to-day; but if they wait for the Hognomah Indian and the Short Line, undoubtedly the long unknown secret will be revealed.

Maud S. and Her New Owner.

(From the Turf, Field and Farm.) The sale of Maud S. is still the talk of the town and country. Mr. Bonner highly appreciates the compliment paid to him by Mr. Vanderbilt, and he does not intend to place the Queen in absolute retirement.
She will never again start for purse, stake, or wager, but she will trot in public. Bair arrived in the city Saturday, and on Monday he and Mr. Bonner came to an understanding, and Wednesday morning Maud S. and her old trainer and groom journeyed by special car to Hartford. The preparation of the mare was interrupted after the 2.09 1/2 at Cleveland, but she is in good heart, and Bair hopes to have her keyed up for a fast mile in about three weeks.
He is very confident of still further reducing the record. In fact, he counts upon driving the queen in 2.08. Mr. Bonner will practice patience, and if the weather does not prove exceptionally bad, the public will have an opportunity before the end of October to see Maud S. sent for all that is in her. Jay-Eye-See will not be permitted to wear the crown if she can prevent it. The decision of Mr. Bonner with regard to trotting Maud S. has given the widest satisfaction. Thousands believe that the full powers of the great mare have never been developed, and it gratifies them to know that she is to be given another chance on the course. Associations will eagerly compete for her, but as money is no temptation to her owner, as he will pay the bills and ask for no returns, it is not probable that we shall see her on any but really good tracks. If Charter Oak does not suit her she will be taken to Providence and tried on Narragansett. But Bair thinks that the Hartford track will suit. Russell, the four-year-old sister of Maud S., will also be trained by Bair, and Mr. Bonner has confidence that she will prove worthy of her breeding.
She has shown, with very little handling, some fast quarters at the farm. Both Bair and grant state that Maud S. stands firmer on her legs than she did three weeks ago.
A little foot balancing has much improved her in this respect.

Maud S. was deeply grounded in the affections of Mr. Vanderbilt. The following letter, which is published with his consent, reflects great credit on him:

DEAR SIR.—Inclosed please find receipt for Maud S.

I must congratulate you upon being the owner of the fastest and finest horse in the world. I am sure you will find her simply perfection itself in every particular. She is always ready to do anything you want to have her do, always expecting kind treatment, and the fullest confidence that she is not to be hurt. She seems to know as much as a man, and is of the most affectionate disposition. These are great requisites. No one can but admire them, and we must all love the animal possessing them.

That Maud S. will please you, please herself, and every one connected with her, is the earnest wish of

Yours very truly,
WM. H. VANDERBILT.

Emerson's Americanism.

Emerson's Americanism, therefore, was Americanism in its last and purest analysis, which is giving him high praise, and to America great hope. But I do not mean to pay him, who was so full of modesty and humility, the ungrateful compliment of holding him up as the permanent American ideal. It is his tendencies, his quality, that are valuable, and only in a minor, incipient degree his actual results. All human results must be strictly limited, and according to the epoch and outlook.
Emerson does not solve for all time the problem of the universe; he solves nothing; but he does what is far more useful—he gives a direction and an impetus to lefty human endeavor. He does not anticipate the lessons and the discipline of the ages, but he shows us how to deal with circumstances in such a manner as to secure the good instead of the evil influence. New conditions, fresh discoveries, unexpected horizons opening before us, will, no doubt, soon carry us beyond the scope of Emerson's surmise; but we shall not so easily improve upon his aim and attitude. In the spaces beyond the stars there may be marvels such as it has not entered into the minds of men to conceive; but there, as here, the right way to look will still be upward, and the right aspiration be still toward humbleness and charity.

—Julian Hawthorne, in the Manhattan.

A CARD.—To all who are suffering from errors and indiscretions of youth, nervous weakness, early decay, loss of manhood, &c.,
