A CURIOUS CASE.

How a P. E. Island Widower Made Love to a Chatham Widow.

(Moncton Times.)

Among the cases tried at the recent session of the Northumberland Circuit Court was that of Isido S. Chaisson vs. James D. Murphy, administrator, and Mary Curran, administratrix of Elizabeth Walls. A brief summary of this case is as follows: The plaintiff, Mr. Chaisson, is a resident of Tignish, P. E. I., and had in years past done lobster business on a small scale, but of late has turned his attention to selling beer, etc. On the 9th of January, 1894, he opened a correspondence with Mrs. Walls, a widow milliner of Chatham, by a letter of which the following is a copy:

Tignish, P. E. I., Jan. 9th, 1891

Mrs. WALLS, Chatham,— I beg to apologise for addressing you thus, being an entire stranger; but having the misfortune to be unknown to you is my excuse for this strange proceeding, which, I am well aware, is entirely at variance with the rules of etiquette.

I have, on two different occasions conversed with a gentleman friend of mine here, (a captain) a neighbor, who has been in your company in your own house at Chatham, saying that you were a widow lady possessing abilities, etc., and I am frank to confess that it has made a deep impression on me as to make me extremely desirous of forming your acquaintance. Now, will you do me the great favor of allowing this to commence a friendship which I trust will never be regretted by yourself. Should you not wish for further correspondence I enclose a stamp for return of this letter and have it not exposed. On the other hand, if you write to me, I will immediately reply with full name and all about me. Meantime I remain,

Very truly yours, A Widower, (A Merchant.)

P.S.—If you write please mention address. Madam, please address: Station, Tignish, P. E. Island.

Mrs. Walls responded and a mixed correspondent of business and affection ensued. In the latter part of May, 1894, Chaisson visited Mr. Walls at Chatham for eight days, during which time they made an engagement for marriage. Chaisson on returning to the island pressed Mrs. Walls to visit Tignish, which she did the latter part of August, 1894. Chaisson was then in possession of two village lots, with a small dwelling, large store and warerooms, but no stock. In the case he put up he alleged and swore that while Mrs. Walls was at Tignish he sold to her his property for $5,500. Mrs. Walls, on her return journey, instructed a lawyer, Mr. McQuarrie, of Summerside, as Mr. McQuarrie swore, to prepare a deed of the property from Chaisson to her, and state the purchase money there at $5,500. She then returned home to Chatham and in a few days Chaisson came to Chatham and brought the deed with him, prepared by Mr. McQuarrie in favor of Mrs. Walls. This deed, though executed by Chaisson, was not completed or proved in a condition to be registered. Chaisson left the deed with Mrs. Walls, received from her $1,500 and her notes for $1,000, $1,500, payable in one year, $1,500 in two years and 1,000 in three years. Chaisson was indebted to E. T. Holman of Summerside, upon a mortgage of this same property for $1,100 and upon a judgment for $751, upon which two claims there was a balance of $1,125.

With the $1,500 Chaisson received from Mrs. Walls, he paid this debt of $1,125 to Holman and took an assignment to Mrs. Walls of the mortgage and judgment. The correspondence between the parties was continued till May 6, 1895, during which time about forty letters were exchanged on each side, some breathing affection, some business, and some quarrels. It appeared at the close of correspondence the engagement was broken off in disagreement.

Mrs. Walls died in August, 1896, without making a will, and the action was brought against the administrators to recover the first of the promissory notes above mentioned. It appears by the correspondence that Mrs. Walls claims to have loaned Chaisson the $1,500 and had also sent him $60 in addition, which money at the breaking off of the engagement Chaisson promised to repay with interest.

It is also to be gathered from the correspondence that Mrs. Walls repudiated the idea of having bought Chaisson's property and relying upon passages occurring in the correspondence. Mrs. Walls' administrators set up a defence to the action the sale and deed of the property from Chaisson to Mrs. Walls was a sham, intended only to serve the purpose for Chaisson in compromising with his creditors and after it had served its purpose to be undone.

Chaisson continued in occupation of the premises, treating them as his own, altering them at his pleasure and paying the taxes as owner.

Within a fortnight of Mrs. Walls' death, the buildings on the property were destroyed by fire, there being no insurance, and the land stripped of the buildings was valued only at $200.

As some evidence of the fraud it was contended by the defendants that the property nominally sold to Mrs. Walls at a value of $5,500 was in reality worth only $1,500 and three sworn statements made by Chaisson to the government assessors valuing the property at $1,500 were put in evidence by the defendant in confirmation of this view. The finding of the jury was as contended for by the defendants, that the pretended sale to Mrs. Walls was a sham and the $1,500 was a loan from her to Chaisson. They accordingly found that there was no value given for the notes and defendants were entitled to recover $1,500 from Chaisson as money loaned. L. J. Tweedie and R. Murray for plaintiff; G. E. Gregory, Q. C., for defendant.

COLD DAY ISN'T IT?—The north wind blow and premonitory shivers run down one's spine in anticipation of what is to come. Thinking thus, if one should happen to pass Paton & Co's window, it is probable that a cheerful glow will be felt at sight of the display of warm blankets cunningly exhibited so as to appeal to the present needs of shivering mankind. Apart from the appropriateness of the blankets displayed, the window is dressed with rare taste. To describe it would convey no idea—inspection alone can do that. Pretty dolls, smothered in blankets, points the moral, which is—Paton's blankets banish cold.

THEATRICAL.—The Mail and Empire says: If anyone wants to know what the "Devils Auctions" means, we respectfully decline to furnish the information for multitudinous reasons; one primary reason being that we do not know. Anyhow the title covers a good show, made up of various specialties, pretty women, excellent scenery, songs, dances and music. A funny number was "The Bashful Maidens and Timid Old Maids," which was heartily applauded. A clever trapeze performance was a feature of the evening. Some patriotic songs (in which the conjoined flags of the United Kingdom and the United States were waved) were the occasion for continued tumultuous applause, several times renewed. The clever singing of "Dear Heart" was interfered with by some disturbance in the gallery of the house, and in the circumstances, the lady properly declined to respond to a recall. The show is well staged and a lively one.
