SPORTS FRONT

Congratulations Ron

RON Giggey surprised the golf experts with his sensational triumph in the N.B.-P.E.I. tournament this week.

The 18-year-old Charlottetown youth played amazingly steady golf throughout the entire tournament and failed to panic under the heavy pressure of a playoff

Of course, Ron went to Edmundston with the one purpose in mind—winning that tournament. That is the only way that anyone should enter.

Undoubtedly Ron knews the odds were heavy against him but that didn't bother the Charlottetonian. He went at his game with a real seriousness and was consistent throughout the entire play.

His accomplishment, the first junior ever to win this crown, must surely be rated the sports upset of 1963 as far as Prince Edward Island is concerned. Ron took on the best golfer in this section of the Maritimes and showed his heels to all of them.

Ron goes at this golf business in a serious way. He tries to improve his game with every outing and his efforts surely have been successful.

While he was in Edmundston, his performances were greeted by golfers here with much enthusiasm. They were all happy to see this youth do something that no junior had ever done before.

He has gained himself a berth on the Willingdon Cup team and that's an honor that few golfers can boast of. He will really appreciate this big opportunity and we know he will acquit himself admirably.

Sports Front salutes Ron Giggey on his great sports achievement.

Quite A Race

THAT was quite a pony race staged at Summerside Wednesday night with Andrew Perry and Bob Dewar doing the driving.

These two Summerside sportsmen gave the fans a great laugh as they got up behind these little speedsters for the half-mile exhibition. Both Andy and Bob were really teasing their charges and it took a great stretch drive by Perry to nip Dewar in a photo finish.

The fans gave the boys a great hand for their good sportsmanship and it was indeed well deserved.

This match race went off without the benefit of pari-mutuel and nobody won or lost money on the deal. Unless Andy and Bob had a side bet all of their own.

Tyndall Was There

ONE of Prince Edward Island's grand old racemen, Tyndall Semple, was driving at The Summerside Raceway Wednesday night.

Announcer Erie Johnstone gave the veteran reinsman a fine introduction and the fans responded with loads of applause.

Tyndall drove his Squire Hanover to a 2:08 mile at Summerside 21 years ago and that is the present trotting record of this western oval. Co-holder of the record is Watchim and Billy Hood made that mark the very same afternoon.

Folks were delighted to see Tyndall in such fine shape that he still can drive in a race.

Best of everything Tyndall for many years to come.

THIS is a sports-packed week and at the present time riflemen are engaged in a three-day prize shoot at Squaw Point. Summerside has two more nights of racing before they close down their Lobster Carnival.

Next week Summeside will present a race program on Wednesday and Charlottetown Driving Park will go with programs on Monday, Thursday and Saturday.

Next week's big sports attraction is The Northumberland Strait swim set for July 27.

More about it later.

S'side Track Has Attractive Card

Summerside Raceway's big week of harness racing is nearing an end and promoters insist that the last two nights will be as good, if not better, than the ones that went before.

Tonight an eight-dash program is arranged for the patrons. It is a double dash card with all horses getting two trips to establish their abilities.

The show opens with a good-looking trot with six starters. They are Gliding Billy, Windy June, Vogue Gem, Tommy Shanter, Bifty Silver and Chuck H. Both these mares should be hotly contested and some good pays are likely to emerge from those races.

Races two and six find seven fighting it out for supremacy. In the first trip Clarke Smith takes Blue Haven away on the rail. Members of Clarke's opposition are Mr. Dugan, Belle Texas, Future Chief, Myrtle E, Country Mile and Eyre Don. Fans are expecting keen competition in both trips of this event.

Four other dashes round out the race show which doesn't go until 9 o'clock. That gives shoppers and clerks a chance to take in the proceedings.

Twins Batter Yanks 9-3, Orioles Edge Tigers 8-6

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Late inning splurges won for both Minnesota Twins and Baltimore Orioles Thursday in the two American League afternoon games.

A single afternoon battle in the National saw second place Chicago Cubs blend a triple, double and a single to score three runs in the sixth inning for a 3-2 win over Milwaukee Braves.

In the AL action, the Twins crushed New York 9-3, while Baltimore toppled Detroit 3-2.

At Minneapolis, Rich Rollins drove in five runs with a two-run homer and bases-clearing double in the seventh and eighth innings for Minnesota's big win.

The Twins were nursing a 4-3 lead until Rollins started to work.

Bill Dailey's sharp relief pitching choked off any Yankee rallies in the last three innings.

ERROR HELPS

Minnesota built a 3-0 lead off Ralph Terry in the first three innings, with Bobby Richardson's dropping of a popup leading to the first tally.

Elston Howard belted his 19th homer off winner Calimio Pascual in leading off the Yankee fourth. Terry's groundout and passed ball by Earl Battey produced the other New York runs.

At Detroit Joe Gaines delivered a pinch - hit two - run double in the 11th inning to help Baltimore overcome an early defeat.

Gaines' liner into the left field corner made Stu Miller the winner after the Orioles slowballer came through with another sparkling relief stint.

The Tigers built up a 3-0 lead in three innings but the Orioles fought back and tied it 5-5 in the eighth on Brooks Robinson's run-scoring double.

The Tigers went ahead again in the bottom of the inning when Billy Bruton tripled in a run, then Baltimore again tied it in the ninth on John Orsino's leadoff homer.

WINS 11th GAME

At Chicago, the Cubs' 17th victory in the 25 home games, gave Larry Jackson his 11th triumph.

After Jackson yielded a lead off single to Joe Torre in the ninth, Lindy McDaniel came out of the bullpen for the 33rd time this season. The big fireman made just 10 pitches to retire Gene Oliver on a double play and Dennis Menke on a ground out.

Milwaukee turned two hits into two runs in the second, after Torre drew a leadoff walk. Both runners were safe when Chicago shortstop Andre Rodgers threw wildly on Gene Oliver's grounder.

Menke bunted safely for a base-filling single. Torre and Oliver scored on Del Crandall's line single to left field.

After Jackson whiffed Oliver to end the Milwaukee sixth for the No. 1,000 strikeout of his nine year National League career, the Cubs scored all their runs in the bottom half. Ron Santo's triple followed a walk to Billy Williams, and Ken Hubbs doubled to score Santo. Rodgers then singled to score Hubbs.

HUNTER'S CORNER

Trout Are Taking Shelter In Alder-Bordered Channel

This week we have experienced real Florida weather. . .Dog Days at their hottest. Days when I watched a bulldozer operator working in places there wasn't even a breath of air stirring. I wondered how he endured the heat from the machine, and its torrid at times, combined with what the sun was transmitting. In June when the thermometer hovered close to the freezing mark we longed for heat. An old saying comes to mind. . .when you get what you want you don't want it.'

How true at times.

On Tuesday of this week it was bright and hot all afternoon with scarcely a breath of air stirring at times. The water in the dam at Corrivale had risen close to the three quarter mark and looked blue and inviting. . .for swimming that is not trout fishing. . .and I sure got a surprise when a car load of men, women and children drove in on the parking lot for a spot of angling. No trout were connected with but three eels decided that a wiggling worm on a hook looked inviting. Two were landed and one little girl lost her's and it dropped back into the water. An eel is quite a scrapper on the end of a fly rod so she had quite a thrill while the struggle lasted.

A Massachusetts car stopped when the driver spotted the inviting blue water, and the bevy of anglers lining its bank, it stopped pronto. The latest in fishing rods were assembled in short order but they might just as well cast in the Sahara Desert. They 'whipped' every square inch of water within range, and some of it had just been flooded since morning and was only inches deep. I felt like walking over and telling them but sometimes advice like that is not appreciated. This pair of visiting fishermen will probably leave our shores under the impression that our trout angling bait and nothing else.

NOT OUT IN OPEN

There are all kinds of trout in the Corraville dam but in this type of weather they are not out in the open, not during the day at least, but in the alder bordered creek channel that meanders for seeming miles back into a trackless wilderness. Residents of the district, who should know if anybody does, claim water floods between two and a half and three miles of such channel. Of course it winds and curves through a maze of alder tangle and beaver meadows and its easy, too easy in fact, to lose ones sense of direction so watch it fellow anglers.

Last week I was told about a fisherman who caught 48 trout in the nine and ten inch bracket at one sitting. My informabuild up is just mere attraction tion is they were taken out of one hole and there are some so deep the longest oar cannot touch bottom. They tell me the creek bed amid the alders is plentifully sprinkled with such spring fed holes where trout love to congregate and lie when not on a feeding prowl.

A few days ago I spotted a boat aground at the entrance to the alder maze and out of curiousity walked up along the waters' edge to have a look before the rising water prevented me reaching it. It was an ordinary dory but in good condition and I presumed it was the means used by the 'long count' angler to make his haul. I didn't check it very close but noted there was some rain water in the bottom mixed with weeds and such like. In the old days I'd have gone over it with a fine tooth comb particularly so if I had heard about the 48 trout take.

A couple of days later two anglers called at the dam. I did not know their names but their faces were familiar and didn't inquire. I told them about the dory up near the alders they could reach without any trouble. I reminded them not to expect any luck worthwhile as it was bright, calm and hot. They poked up the alder channel until they were out of sight from the highway and returned an hour or so later. They had no luck worthwhile, just one nice pan trout, but told me about the lovely holes amid the alders that the oar was too short to touch bottom. I reminded them that the water in this channel would be a least four feet deeper when the water reached the planned level and that it would be a trout fisherman's Paradise. One of the anglers sort of grinned at this and told me they had discovered a real deluxe jig in the dory. . .four dinky brass hooks welded back to back.

DIDN'T INQUIRE

I didn't inquire as to who they were or what action they took with the 'jig' but informed that I would have spotted it myself in the old days if it had have been there. I wasn't 'jig' minded on the day I visited the dory. Incidentally I again looked the dory over on Tuesday of this week but it was as bare as the Proverbial Mother Hubbards Cupboard.

I inquired of the dozer operator as to who owned the dory and he told me he didn't know. I'd say offhand that a professional 'jigger' made that jig. A cod hook fastened to a length of stick is a crude affair compared to it. I have run across them in the old days when I used to be on the look-out for jiggers and inquired from one of the know as to how anyone could 'jig' trout with a set of hooks that were not designed to be attached to a rod or stick. I was told by this chap that it was more effective in the hands of an expert. He informed me that he knew a 'jigger', that I also knew, who could pull trout out of a deep hole when you couldn't even see bottom. He stated that this chap could be fishing in the same hole with a person and be 'jigging' trout and the chap wouldn't even suspect anything wrong. He had a very sensitive touch and could feel when a trout touched the line. . .bumped, is a better word . . .and that trout was as good as in the bag.

As a guy once remarked about 'jigging' "It's all in the way you hold your mouth." There could be more truth than poetry in that.

Dominion Byrd Captures Honors In Free For All

Over 3,000 wildly cheering race fans watched Dominion Byrd, driven by Joe Hennessey and Tammany Hall with Clark Smith up, split honors in the $2,500 Ensor Bowness Memorial Pace at Summerside Raceway last night.

The Doug Hill owned Dominion Byrd copped the first dash in the great time of 2:05.4 which was 1/5 of a second faster than the track record. Draw Games Are Feature

Dodgers and Tigers battled to a scoreless tie in minor league action at Victoria Park Wednesday, and the Twins and Colts put on an identical performance.

Carl Trainor and James Theriault were the hurlers in the Dodgers-Tigers battle and Gary McQuaid and John Bell shared the pitching spotlight in Twins-Colts tussle.

Theriault, Thompson, Trainor and Campbell got base knocks in the first game. The second contest found hits going to Hennessey, King, D. Theriault, Molyneaux and Wood.

In Little League action Mets blanked the Red Sox 3-0 behind the combined pitching of Bill Acorn and Eddie Power. Power and Darrach belted home runs while S. MacDonald had two hits for the losers.

Other Little League activity found Braves edging Angels 3-2, with Harrison Robins picking up the win. Richard Young was the loser.

Peter Butler led all batters with a perfect 2 for 2 performance. In Bantam-Midget action the Cubs blanked the White Sox 5-0 behind Willie McCallum's neat three-hitter.

The top batsmen in this game were Pat Walsh and Alan Doucette. Each had two hits.

Little League Ball Sees No-Hitter

In little league action yesterday a no-hitter by the combined pitching of Winston Weatherbie and Andy MacKinnon featured the action as the Angels blanked the Braves 7-0.

In other action the Yanks downed the Mets 7-3. In the first game the Angels scored twice in the second frame and never looked back. Weatherbie led all hitters with a perfect 3-3 day while Joe Martin lashed out two hits. The only other hits were picked up by LeClair and Campbell.

In the second game two hits each by Don MacLean, Dave MacDonald and Paul Carmichael led the onslaught against the Mets. Phil Claybourne's double which drove in two runs gave the Mets their only spark of life.

The fielding gem of the game was supplied by first sacker Barry Parsons when he robbed a Mets' batter of a sure hit.
