A LONG FARE.

I liked Sammy better than any cabman I had met before in London. I don't remember how I first became acquainted with him, or why he confided in me, as he ultimately did, but his cab-rank was the nearest to my office, and so I got into the habit when I wanted a vehicle, of sending the office boy down for Sammy, and thus he and I took many a journey together.

In the early spring of this year Sammy confided to me the vast speculation which he had undertaken. It was nothing less serious than the buying of his horse and cab on the instalment plan. Few cabmen in London own their own horse and vehicle, but Sammy had always been a careful man, I should judge, who did not drink and did not have rows with their fares, and consequently did not appear at the police court. Sammy was popular enough with his patrons and with his fellow cabmen, and when it became known that he had bought his horse and hansom there was much interest in the ultimate outcome of the venture.

Sammy said little about his visions of becoming a cab proprietor on a large scale, although I am certain that he looked forward to this happy result. "The weather was good last summer," Sammy said to me, and he hoped for good weather this year also. Now, good weather, in the cabman's vocabulary means rain and plenty of it. Last summer, as everybody in England knows, was one continued downpour, and if it was bad for the agriculturist, it was good for cabmen. But alas, for the predictions of Sammy, the spring of 1895 began hot, and the early summer continued hot, and people walked where they wanted to go or rode on the tops of buses.

Anxious about Sammy and his speculation I sent the boy for him on many occasions when I did not strictly need a cab. The boy returned again and again without Sammy, and then I went down to the cab rank myself and learnt the astonishing news. Sammy, horse and hansom had disappeared, and it was now a month since anyone on the cab-rank had seen him.

When the summer was well advanced, as I walked along the pavement beside the cab-rank all at once I saw Sammy on his cab, standing in his usual place. He did not look at all like the man who had disappeared and there was about him an air of prosperity which was exceedingly creditable. The cab had always been well kept, but now the paint was fresher and the glass more polished, and there was a sleek, well-fed look about the horse.

"For Heaven's sake, Sammy," I said, halting beside him, "where have you been?"

Sammy brought his forefinger to the rim of his hat and said:

"Well, sir, it's a long story."

He fastened his reins at the top of his cab and slipped down from his lofty perch. I will make no attempt to reproduce in print Sammy's vocabulary and dialect. His favorite expletives are "strike me blind" and "S'help me Gawd," which he intersperses freely in his conversation.

"You see, sir," said Sammy, "there's some queer gents in this world, as maybe you know."

"There are, Sammy," I replied, "still, I don't see why I should know it more than anybody else, though. I suppose you meet queer characters now and then. But how about the horse and cab?"

"Oh, they are all paid for, sir, every penny, and I have money in the bank."

"Bless me," I cried. "That's astonishing news. You must have struck a better paying cab-rank than this one, and the weather has not been good from your point of view."

"Well, kind o' speaking, sir, I did. Perhaps you remember, sir," said Sammy, "the day I took you to Regent street?"

"Yes," I replied, "that was the last day I was out with you. I sent for you repeatedly, but the boy was never able to find you, and the rank said you had disapepared."

"Quite so, sir," said Sammy. "Well, you see, sir, I 'ad hardly been 10 minutes 'ere after leaving you at your door, when along comes a gent with a portmanteau. 'e inquired from one cab to another; you see, I was at the rear end, 'aving just come in from a fare, and 'e should have taken the first cab, but 'e didn't, and at last someone pointed me out and 'e comes up to me. 'Cabby,' says 'e, 'they tell me you own your 'orse and cab; is that true?'

"'Well, sir,' I says, 'it's kind o' true; at least I'm a-payen another man on the installment plan for 'em, and I 'ope, if the weather 'olds good and we have a lot of rain, to own the cab myself before long.'

"'Very well,' said the gent, short like, and then instead of 'anding me 'is portmanteau to put on the top 'e lays it down on the pavement and examines the rubber tire, and then 'e gets on the step and feels of the cushions for you know, sir, that some cabs with rubber tires, 'as 'ard cushions. Then 'e walks round the cab and looks at the 'orse. 'E raises 'er nigh fore foot, and then 'e pats 'er on the flank. Now, it's all right for a gent to be particular about 'is cab, but I never seen anything like this, so I said to 'im when 'e 'ad walked around the cab twice: 'I 'ope you're satisfied, sir.'

"'Quite,' 'e answered, and 'e 'ands me up the portmanteau. I puts it on the top o' the cab, and then 'e, with 'is foot on the step, says, short like, as 'e 'ad said everything, 'Scotland.'

"'Scotland Yard, do you mean, sir?' says I.

"'Scotland, 'e say again, speaking like a man who expects everybody to jump when 'e opens 'is mouth. I puts the reins down on the top o' the cab, and I says to 'im, says I, 'I know Scotland Yard, but there isn't a Scotland street, or a Scotland square, or a Scotland terrace in all London, and I knows London pretty well.'

"'Cabby,' 'e says, 'you talk too much. Please pay attention to what I say. Do what I tell you, and do not make unnecessary remarks. Drive me, if you please, to the 'ighlands of Scotland. Do you understand?'

"'Well! Strike me blind, but I still understand, and tho'ght I'd got 'old 'o a cove from Bedl'm 'o'spital, who was crazy like, so I says to 'im, says I:

"'The 'Ighlands o' Scotland, sir, is out o' the four miles radius.'

"'I'm not disputin' that fact,' says the gent. 'Are you going to take me or not?'

"'Well, s'elp me, Gawd, you could have knocked me off the cab with a brick.

"'It's a longish fare, sir, says I, and if you don't mind I'd like to see the color o' the money before I starts.'

"'Perfectly right,' says the gent, 'why didn't you make your objections before?'

"Then he pulls out a bank o' England note and 'ands it up to me, and strike me blind, if it wasn't a £10 note. Now I've 'ad gents bilk me before, but I knows a Bank of England note when I sese it, for there is nothing in the world just like it; crimply, crumply, and crisp like, and a very comfortable thing to 'ave in a man's pocket, so I stuffs it away, and touches my 'at to 'im, and says: 'The 'Ighlands o' Scotland or Jerusalem, sir, it's all the same to me, as long as you pays your fare. But I'd like to know, sir, that if you takes me by the day, the fare will be 30 shillings, and I likes to 'ave these little matters settled so that there's no trouble at the hend o' the journey, sir.'

"'Quite right,' said the gent, 'but I don't intend to pay 30 shillings.'

"'Then you can take back the £10 note, and you'll 'ave to get another cab, sir,' says I, a 'anding down his portmanteau.

"'I think that 30 shillings is too little,' says the gent, 'or 40 shillings, either, and I propose to pay you 45. If that satisfies you, then get along, for we have a lengthy job before us.'

"'Right you are, sir,' says I, a-stuffin' the banknote back in my pocket again. 'And what number in the 'Highlands, sir?'

"Then the gent answers as calm as if 'e were a tellin' me to drive to King's Cross: 'Drive to Pibroch Lodge on the shores of Loch Skirling. As I take you by the hour, I have the right to nominate the direction in which you shall go. Take, therefore, the east coast and drive through Edinburgh. And with that the gent 'e steps into the 'anson and closes the doors on 'isself.

"Well, sir, s'elp me Gawd, I'd never been out o' London in my life, except in at Epping Forest, or a day at Rochester ville down the river, but I was game for it, and I thought I'd give the gent

THE TIDE TURNS.

Great Improvement in the Health of a Well-known Peterboro' Lady.

PETERBORO, Aug. 5.—General satisfaction is expressed here at the greatly improved condition of health of Mrs. K. Stephens, the well-known music teacher of this town. Her friends have been much exercised over her condition for a long time, and a number of remedies have been tried during the ten years that she has been a martyr to a complication of complaints, which recently became very severe. She suffered frightfully with pains in the back, nervous prostration and swelling of the limbs. She has been taking the new remedy for kidney troubles, Dodd's Kidney Pills, and has already experienced the most beneficial results.

Mr. Gladstone will speak on August 6, at Chester, dealing with the Armenian question. The effect of the meeting, it is said, will strengthen Lord Salisbury's hands on that question.

[Don't Wait for the Sick Room.

The experience of physicians and the public proves that taking Scott's Emulsion produces an immediate increase in flesh; it is therefore of the highest value in Wasting Diseases and Consumption.

ANOTHER DISCOVERY.

Of Interest to Bicycle Riders.

A well known bicycle rider has made a discovery that will be good news to all who locomote on the wheel. He says:

Since I first began to ride a wheel, which is several years ago, I have been subject to more or less chafing and irritation. Sometimes when heated the itching inside my legs would be so severe that I would feel compelled to forego riding for a time. Nothing that I tried did any material good until my attention was drawn to an advertisement of Dr. Chase's Ointment for all itching of the skin. I tried it and almost from the moment it touched the skin the itching stopped. I also find its occasional use prevents chafing. Further evidence of the efficacy of this preparation is given by Chas. Roe, foreman Central Press Agency, Toronto, who was troubled with Itching Skin of the most aggravated kind. When the skin became heated during sleep from too much clothing, would wake up with absolute pain from digging into the flesh with his nails. Chase's Ointment gave relief from the first application and permantly cured. Price 60c.
