

Scott's Emulsion of Cod-liver Oil with Hypophosphites brings back the ruddy glow of life to pale cheeks, the lips become red, the ears lose their transparency, the step is quick and elastic, work is no longer a burden, exercise is not followed by exhaustion; and it does this because it furnishes the body with a needed food and changes diseased action to healthy. With a better circulation and improved nutrition, the rest follow.

For sale at 50 cents and $1.00 by all druggists.

ACTORS AND SINGERS AND THEIR REMARKS ON THE CRITIC.

Callous Indifference or Ignorance the Commonest Refuge of the Artistic Nature. Several Cases Cited by the Innocent Reporter.

"There are many amusing things about the artistic temperament," said the innocent reporter, "but you have to know the disposition in order to tell how funny they really are. You must know enough not to believe them always and then through all your intercourse with the professionals there will flow an accompaniment of easy humor that gives acquaintance with these persons an added pleasure. One charming incident of this can always be found in their views of what the newspapers say about them. Mrs. James Brown Potter is the only woman I ever saw who talked frankly about that subject.

"So long as they don't ignore me," she said, "I don't care what they write. Let them say anything so long as they say it, but it would be horrible to be left alone."

"That was a very truthful statement of her own opinions and almost unparalleled in its frankness. Everybody knows that Mrs. Potter has never had very much to thank the newspapers for that was really pleasant, but she had plenty to be grateful for as long as she was willing they should print anything if it kept her in the public eye.

"Almost as genuine was a young American singer who came back here after she had made a debut and some little reputation in Europe. She was a pretty woman and she had a good voice, but she was unfortunate. Once she had a sore throat and another time she was out of condition for some other reason. At all events she was never in condition to do herself justice. So there was nothing pleasant that, even with the kindest intentions, the newspapers could say about the young woman. One night toward the close of the season she was in a grand tier box at the opera house. During one of the entr'actes she was walking about the foyer with a friend, and halted in front of the greenroom. 'What is that room?' her friend asked.

"Planting herself deliberately in front of the partly opened curtains, she said in a voice audible to every man in the room, 'Oh, that is the place they go to write, in the most disagreeable way they can, the most disagreeable things they can think of about you.' The younger singer was unjust, but she had no false vanity. She was willing to have it known that she read what the newspapers said about her. Let more illustrious colleagues are not always so willing to admit that.

"I have heard Mlle. Calvo protest that she never saw any newspaper but the Paris Figaro, and declare that she really had not the slightest idea what New York papers wrote about her. She said this one day while waiting outside of Maurice Grau's office at the Metropolitan, and then turning suddenly to a reporter standing near her asked if he was the man that wrote she had signed a contract to give some concerts at $2,000 a night when she was really to receive $2,200. The man did not understand French, so Mlle. Calvo's companion translated the question into English. The man replied that he represented another newspaper, and when she turned this into French for Mlle. Calvo she mentioned the name of the newspaper from which she had translated the dreadfully erroneous paragraph which had led the public to believe that Mlle. Calvo had consented to take $200 less than she was to get.

"Mrs. Eames has an indicated indifference for what the newspapers say which is sometimes a little bit difficult to reconcile with her intimate knowledge of what they publish about her. Mme. Melba is also familiar with them, and she is a little less averse to having that fact known than Mme. Eames is. It is well known that Mme. Nordica takes her press clippings with her coffee, and she makes no bones of it. Jean de Reszke is a regular reader of what the newspapers have to say about him, and, whatever he may think about it in reality, he never, but in one instance, took any notice of it. Plancon enjoys reading the agreeable things that are written about him and doesn't care who knows it. Only the women profess to be wholly ignorant of what the newspapers write.

"With the actresses the case is very much the same. The celebrated foreigners, according to their own accounts, are quite unacquainted with anything that the American press may write about them. Agnes Sorma said that she did not intend to read any of the criticisms of her work until she started home on the steamer. It didn't take a conversation of more than three minutes to show that she had a fairly accurate knowledge of everything that had been printed about her. It must have been some superior sort of clairvoyance that is possible only to the artistic temperament, for hadn't she said that none of them would be read until she had got on the steamer to go to Europe? Sarah Bernhardt has them all translated to her and accompanies the performance with more or less emphatic reflections on the intelligence of the writers who do not agree with her own ideas of what she does. It is said that the atmosphere of the Hoffman House was heavily charged with brimstone for several days after Mme. Sarah had the New York accounts of her performance of 'Magda' read aloud to her in English. When the American actors read unfavorable accounts of themselves, they are always able to tell how they came to be written. There is always some specific cause for everything unfavorable. Either they snubbed the writer accidentally or said something disagreeable about him to one of his friends. There is never any explanation beyond their bold truthfulness for the flattering notices that appear.—New York Sun.

One Eye on Him.

A gentleman who had a glass eye went to India. When he got there, he engaged a number of servants. The duty of one of these servants was to fan his master through the night. These fanners—punch-wallahs as they are called—usually do their work very badly. This gentleman knew of this. One day while he was out walking he was much amused to hear his fanner and another one talking. The fanner said: "Ah, my master is a sly fox! When he goes to bed, he takes out one of his eyes and lays it on the table to watch me. Therefore I am obliged to go on fanning all night till the other eye opens."—Strand Magazine.

WOMAN'S DELIGHT.

Crepe de chine in the loveliest tints imaginable will have high place among elegant dress textiles for two seasons to come.

White belts look well only on slender women, a conclusion one reaches daily as they are beheld circling the ample waists of over stout persons.

There will be a great vogue during the fall and winter seasons of repped silks of every description and color, corded silk and wool and all wool materials.

But very recently a mixture of many opposite colors in gowling was the rule. Parisians, from whom we take our initiative in fashion, are now declaring in favor of harmonies.

The hardy Scotch tweeds and chevots hold a very favored place in the season before us among popular dress fabrics designed for traveling, shopping, walking and similar uses.

Ribbon belts with loops and ends are still in high favor, and many fasten on the left side at the back, with two long, slender standing and falling loops on the right in front, the standing ends reaching up well on the waist.

Among autumn skirt models are many finished with three very deep flounces, the three wholly covering the closely gored foundation, or there are many rows of tiny frills set on from belt to hem, and in this case the sleeves and upper portion of the waist are likewise trimmed.

Overdresses appear caught up at one side, or in regular pointed apron style, some very long, the point reaching to the skirt hem, others in l'aveuse fashion, the lower edge faced with a bias fabric contrasting in kind and frequently in color with the material forming the overskirt.

The latest flat of fashion is that only when they accompany a toilet or costume in black and white effects are white gloves stitched with black any longer indispensable for day wear. Doe color, biscuit, mushroom, almond and pale brown and tan shades are, strictly speaking, more fashionable.—New York Post.

CURTAIN RAISERS.

Charles A. Bigelow will have a prominent part in "The French Maid."

Frank Perley will manage the Bostonians and "The Sporting Duchess" this season.

Paula Edwards will play the leading role in "The Whirl of the Town" when it goes on tour.

Harry Bagge had only good things said of his performance in "The Privateer" by every critic in New York.

Lillian Burkhardt, Charles Dickson's talented wife, is seriously considering a proposal to head a fine stock company.

James O'Neill will make a special feature of "The Dead Heart" this season, which he will revive in spectacular form.

If the New York Baseball club wins the pennant, Frank McKee will be a rich man. The odds he obtained are tremendous.

Fanny Davenport begins her season on Oct. 18 at the Boston theater. It will last 25 weeks and embrace only the large cities.

Jacques Kruger and Clara Palma have been specially engaged by Rich & Harris for important roles in "Courtied Into Court."

It is not generally known that Oliver Byron once was a pretty good tragedian. He played "Richard III," "Hamlet" and "Othello" when a young man.

Charles B. Hanford, who accompanies Thomas W. Keene as leading man and manager, will appear at the Wednesday matinees in "Ingomar" and "Virgilius."

Annie Irish has a strong part in "A Virginia Courtship," and it is said to be a prototype of Lady Gay Spanker. Eugene Presbrey, the author, has strengthened the role in view of Miss Irish's engagement by W. H. Crane to originate the character.

RARE CHANCE

The property occupied by J. J. Gay and son situate in the village of "owna", 7 miles from Charlottetown, is offered for sale. The proprietors have carried on a large market garden nursery, and seed business for thirty years, and the purchaser will no doubt retain a large share of the local trade. The premises comprise a large dwelling house, 8 or 9, warehouse, barn, shed, orchard, and about 10 acres of the most fertile land on the island. This land has been manured year after year for so long that as an old man said the other day: "It is all a bed of manure and could be hauled for top dressing." This would be an ideal spot for a country merchant, or it would be admirable for a summer resort. The situation is one of the most beautiful on the island. Good bathing, fishing, boating, shooting, and with in easy distance, churches, post office school telephone and shops all at the door.

For terms and further particulars, apply to Von Clare Gay, J. J. Gay & son or to JOHN T. MELLISH, Solicitor, Charlottetown.
