Medicine for Throat and Lung Difficulties has long been, and still is, Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. It cures Croup, Whooping Cough, Bronchitis, and Asthma; soothes irritation of the Larynx and Fauces; strengthens the Vocal Organs; allays soreness of the Lungs; prevents Consumption, and, even in advanced stages of that disease, relieves Coughing and induces Sleep. There is no other preparation for diseases of the throat and lungs to be compared with this remedy.

"My wife had a distressing cough, with pains in the side and breast. We tried various medicines, but none did her any good until I got a bottle of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, which has cured her. A neighbor, Mrs. Glenn, had the measles, and the cough was relieved by the use of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. I have no hesitation in recommending this

"I have been afflicted with asthma for forty years. Last spring I was taken with a violent cough, which threatened to terminate my days. Every one pronounced me in consumption. I determined to try Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. Its effects were magical. I was immediately relieved and continued to improve until entirely recovered."—Joel Bullard, Guilford, Conn.

"Six months ago I had a severe hemorrhage of the lungs, brought on by an incessant cough which deprived me of sleep and rest. I tried various remedies, but obtained no relief until I began to take Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. A few bottles of this medicine cured me."—Mrs. E. Coburn, 19 Second St., Lowell, Mass.

"For children afflicted with colds, coughs, sore throat, or croup, I do not know of any remedy which will give more speedy relief than Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. I have found it, also, invaluable in cases of Whooping Cough."—Ann Lovejoy, 1257 Washington street, Boston, Mass.

A Few Anecdotes of Dr. Doyle.

THE following amusing anecdotes, which we clip from the London, Ont., Record, and which will reward the reader with a hearty laugh, are among the rounds of the press as the complement to Dr. Doyle's Jubilee literature:—

"The Rev. Dr. Doyle, whose silver jubilee elicits such a depth of enthusiasm some few weeks ago among all creeds and classes of the Island home, is admittedly the wittiest Maritime Province man of any repute. His wittier remarks, so easily and so judiciously, are the household property of Islanders, while many of them do signal service the Dominion over. The veteran Premier, Sir John himself, we are told, gives more than one of Dr. Doyle's stories a prominent place in his exhaustive repertoire. For the amusement of our readers we have collected a few of these anecdotes which, asking the Dr.'s pardon for violation of copyright regulations, we adapt to these columns.

On one occasion, Father Doyle happened to be at the wharf when the steamer Miramichi was about leaving Summerside for Montreal, and among the passengers was a Mr. S.—, a very zealous Baptist, and by no means overly well disposed towards Catholicity. As the steamer left her moorings, Mr. S.—, from the upper deck, shouted out: "Now, Father Doyle, if you only use your prayers to secure us a good passage and fine weather, we'll say there's something in your religion." "You'll have both a good passage and fine weather, Mr. S.—," solemnly replied the priest. On the return of the Miramichi, Father Doyle was again at the wharf. No sooner did the gangway touch the pier than Mr. S.— leaped ashore, and, seeing Father Doyle, began at once in loud tones to pronounce his prayer worthless. "Why," said he, "we were nearly all burnt up by fire, which some how or other—by spontaneous combustion they say—caught in the cargo in the hold and made such headway before it was discovered that we came within an ace of death by fire. Pretty prayers, these!" "My good man," said Dr. Doyle, "I could ensure a Baptist against wind and water, but against fire—no, never!" Mr. S.— didn't stop to join in the general cheer.

Because of their being no priest in that section of the country in the early times a number of Irish families round about Summerside intermarried with Protestants and the children of these unions were, for the most part, reared up Protestants, if anything, in religion. Hence it is that you might read on the business signs of the place such names as Grady, Lannigan, Power, Brennan, Lafferty, Walsh, Hibbett, Callaghan, and many others whose owners have lost the faith of their fathers. In some of these cases the Irish name is Americanized and good plain Brennan becomes Brennan, Callaghan, Callahan, etc. This matter of pronunciation came up once in Father Doyle's presence. A Mr. Callaghan, himself of the class above named, declared with all the fervour of the Milesian, that he'd hold on to his name without attempt at change "as long as he'd be in this world."

"And I'd stick to it in the next too, Mr. Callaghan," chimed in Father Doyle, "for when you'd come to the gate of heaven, St. Peter, asking your name, and being told 'Callaghan' would surely think you were all right and pass you in—your only possible chance." It is not said in what spirit Mr. Callaghan took this bit of council, but the bystanders enjoyed it immensely.

"Pat's temperance" is one of Father Doyle's stories that everyone has heard, and one that Sir John delights to tell. Pat, it appears, was given to the drop during his first wife's life and even while a widower drowned his grief in a pint of poteen regularly. In good time he sought him out another partner, and came to the priest to have the knot tied in proper form. "Now is the time, said Father Doyle to himself, 'to save Pat from the whiskey,' and accordingly refused to marry him if he would not take the pledge. Poor Pat was sadly troubled, but as there was no other resort he endeavored to secure the best possible terms. "And for how long, your Reverence?" "Till the first christening, Pat," replied the genial pastor. Pat readily consented and they were married. The poor fellow kept his pledge and anxiously awaited the time when he could drown care in a generous potation. But year after year passed, and as the christening did not come Pat grew alarmed, and, believing in his soul that Father Doyle had brought about this barren state of affairs by his priestly power to keep him sober, the very next time he met the priest he begged piteously: "Take it off me, take it off me, your Reverence." At first Father Doyle did not quite understand what the fellow meant, but when he did he laughed heartily and was all the more exacting in having the conditions of the marriage time adhered to. But the good Father complains that now he cannot get any other aspirant to the ranks of the Benedictines to take Pat's pledge.

Ever pastor of a flock has, once in his life at least, found himself almost at his wits end to know how to deal with some wayward member of his fold, who, despite his preaching, his coaxing, his threatening, would persist in keeping in a wayside Shebeen "a small drop of the cratur" to regale the passer-by and bring in an easy penny. These old whiskey-selling women are the plague of many a fair parish; and an angel from heaven could scarcely induce men to forsake their bottles, nor demon from hell frighten them into better habits. In one of Dr. Doyle's missions plied her nefarious vocation one of these troublesome daughters of Mother Eve, known to the country round as the 'big woman.' Many a tit had the good priest with her, and many a sound scolding she got from the altar of the little parish church on Sunday. The parishioners, too, were warned against her; in fact, long before Capt. Boycott gave a new word to the language a parochial boycott was declared against her by her pastor. But not a whit cared she. The so-called would call to her quarters for "paper and cigars" by the way, and her jar was emptied at regular intervals as usual; for there are always careworn brows in every parish, and there's nothing like a bumper, they say, "to smooth away the wrinkles." What was to be done to stop this increasing disorder? As a last resort Dr. Doyle called in the powerful arm of ridicule. The next Sunday the "big woman" was in her place at the church (such characters as she are always punctual in their attendance at "Mass") as large as life, and wearing the demeanor of one who had carried the day. When the time for making the usual announcements came round the priest delivered himself somewhat as follows:—"I hasten to admit it, my people, the 'big woman' has beaten me. I have done everything in my power to put her under, but
