Anecdotes of the Late Prince Imperial.

The Prince was slender, and had a mild, pleasing countenance; his ears were rather too large, and on this account the Parisians (for whom nothing is sacred, and who always find a nickname for everybody), called him 'Prince Oreillard.' His christening by Cardinal Patrizi, as representing Pope Pius IX., was a gorgeous court display. The Empress showed herself a real mother to the boy, often spending her entire days and nights beside his cradle in spite of court etiquette and the Emperor's remonstrances. She had her reward in the boundless affection that the child learned to feel for her—a love which has known no diminution.

His father, though he loved the boy very dearly, rarely petted him save in public. One day the boy, then perhaps 5 years old, was crying with the toothache. The Emperor scolded him, saying that the future Emperor of France should be above all such weaknesses. 'But it hurts me awfully, papa,' replied the boy. 'No matter,' sternly rejoined the hero of Sedan; 'stop up your ears with your fingers, and you will not feel the pain.' The boy glanced at him in amazement, but followed his father's advice, and ten minutes later announced that the pain was over.

Mild and amiable as he was, he occasionally yielded to temper when his play mates, the sons of Dr. Conneau and Gens. Fleury and Espinasse, were not ready to obey his whims. 'I am a Napoleon,' he said one day to young Espinasse, who had refused to race with him; 'woe to him that will not obey.' His father overheard him, and the boy was condemned to bread and water for twenty-four hours. The young Prince, when a little boy could not be induced to mount a pony until he had been threatened with the severest punishments, so much did he fear a tumble. Afterward he became a fine horseman. His favourite pastime was to listen to the music that the band of the Imperial Guard played daily in the court of the Tuileries. He took such a strong liking for the cornet player of the band, Dufour that he would not consent to the latter's retiring with the others. Often when all the others had gone, the colossal M. Dufour was seen either standing before the diminutive prince to play the cornet, or carrying him around in his arms for hours and hours in succession. One day the Empress was talking with some of her ladies of honour about a certain marriage which had recently taken place. 'I, too, will get married,' said the boy; 'I will marry M. Dufour.' Young Louis was frequently requested by his tutor, General Froissard, to be prudent; 'a prince,' he was told, 'should never commit himself one way or the other.' A short while after he had been reminded of this duty the son of General Fleury asked him whether he was hungry. 'I would not like to express any opinion on the subject,' young Louis gravely replied.

As he grew older he manifested uncommon talent and a strong taste for books as well as for military drill. His favourite study was history, in which he became proficient rather through his own exertions that those of General Froissard. He had a wonderful memory for dates and names, and at the age of 10 he could tell the exact day on which any important battle had taken place, and the names of the generals engaged in it. One day, at the Paris exhibition of 1867, the Emperor and family happened to pass through the outside gallery of the Prussian department, where the immense Krupp gun was exhibited. It weighed 3,000 tons, and was mounted on a massive gun carriage about eighteen feet in height. The Emperor was obliged to pass under it, and cast a stealthy glance at the monster without raising his head. The Prince Imperial, with boylike insistance, sought to attract his father's attention to the gun by pulling the skirt of his frock coat. The Emperor gave him a jerk, and the party moved along. But the boy was not satisfied, and in a subdued tone almost timidly, asked:—"Why have you not a bigger one, papa?' 'I do not want war,' child, he Emperor replied aloud. Applause greeted his words, but perhaps those of the boy were worthier of consideration.—New York Sun.

CATARRH.
Constitutional Catarrh Remedy
CURES CATARRH.
Hear what a Reverend Gentleman says of the Constitutional Remedy.
T. J. B. HARDING, Esq., Brockville, Ont.:—
DEAR SIR—It is now two years since your "Constitutional Catarrh Remedy" was introduced to me. I have waited this long to see if the cure would remain permanent before doing this, my duty, to you, as at first the happy effects seemed to me to be "too good to be true."
I was afflicted in my head for years before I suspected it to be Catarrh. In reading in your Circular I saw my case described in many particulars. The inward "drop" from the head had become very disagreeable, and a choking sensation often preventing me from lying long, I would feel like smothering and be compelled to sit up in the bed. My health and spirits were seriously affected. When your agent came to Walkertown in August, 1876, I secured three bottles. Before I had used a quarter of the contents of one bottle I found decided relief, and when I had used two bottles and a third, I quit taking it, feeling quite cured of that ailment, and have not used any since until of late I have taken some for a cold in my head.
A sense of duty to sufferers from that loathsome disease, Catarrh, prompts me to send you this Certificate, unsolicited, with leave to make what use of it you may see proper
Yours truly,
W. TINDALL, Methodist Minister.
