OTTAWA LETTER

An Interesting Budget.

(Special Correspondence of The Examiner.)

Since I last wrote, we have had rain two or three or more times every day. Yesterday was the eighth successive Sunday on which it rained. The farmers are complaining sadly that the low lands are flooded and the crops on them ruined.

Prorogation is booked for the last of next week, but may run a week later. Some members have left for home and others are busy packing up. Cartwright, however, intends to have a parting shot before they disperse, and likely he will hurl it tomorrow on going into Supply. Cartwright is politically dead, and no matter how bitterly envenomed his attacks, they prove utterly futile. The result of Canada's last sale in the London money market shews conclusively that British capitalists pay no attention to the ravings of the "mixer and muddler." Wednesday and Friday of this week are holidays, but the House intends making up for lost time by sitting on Saturday.

I see that you were informed by telegraph of the honors the Island carried off at the Ottawa University last week. It happened to be "Island day" in the House that evening, and I was sorry that our members could not be present to witness the triumph of the "shreds and patches." British Columbia came first, with the Island close on its heels. It is no discredit to any young man to be beaten by Dennis Murphy, of B. C., but it should be borne in mind that he has spent ten years at the College, while McNally has spent only two, and Cullen (who gives promise of carrying everything before him next year) only one. The success of McNally and Cullen is not only creditable to their talents and industry, but reflects lustre upon the careful instruction and grounding they received at the Prince of Wales College. Mr. Neil McLeod, principal of the Summerside Davies School, whose pupil McNally was for several years, has good reason to feel proud of his scholar. If Cullen's life be spared, there is no doubt that he will occupy first place next year, with a record that has never been equaled in the history of the University.

The statement of imports and exports from the Dominion for the month of May and for the eleven months of the fiscal year shows that the latter more than maintained the enormous increase which has occurred this year, and the former are still in advance of the same period last year. For the month of May the exports were valued at $7,170,618, and for the eleven months $96 606 411, which shows the great increase of $12,033 578 over the same period last year. The value of the goods entered for consumption last month was $9,424,759, and for the eleven months $99,300,905, an increase of $943,581. The duty collected in May was $1,459 529, and for the eleven months $17,518,251, which is $2,867,319 less than the same period last year, when the sugar duties were in force.

The Post Office Savings Bank statement for May shows deposits of $576,862, withdrawals of $569,408, and a balance at the credit of depositors of $21,480,773.

The whole of Monday was spent in committee on the Redistribution Bill. During the debate Clarke Wallace took the opportunity of shewing up Cartwright and his attempt to bluff the House a few days before with a bogus Reform majority. Your readers will remember that Cartwright said he had received an official statement, signed by George Johnson, Dominion statistician, giving a majority of 7,000 odd for the Reform party in Ontario at the last general election. Wallace denied that Johnson made any such official statement, and defied Cartwright to produce it. Of course Cartwright could not produce it, as no such statement existed, but he ran out of the House and shortly afterwards returned with a blue book issued by the Clerk of the Crown in Chancery, giving the number of votes polled by each candidate at the last general election. From this book he read out a lot of figures, giving each member's majority, and without adding up the figures declared that they corroborated his statement. Mr. Wallace got hold of his figures and placed them side by side with the official figures. He found that in some large Conservative districts Cartwright had conveniently omitted to take any account of the Conservative majority, while in others where there were two Conservatives running he took credit to the Grit party for all the defeated candidates' votes. For instance, in Carleton, Ont., where Hodgins defeated Dickinson (both strong Conservatives and no Grit running) by 43, Cartwright computed the Conservative majority at 43 only; whereas it is well-known to be over 1,000, for in 1887 Sir John Macdonald beat a straight Grit by 1,085, and the Grit lost his deposit. This explains the way Cartwright figured up his Grit majority for the Province of Ontario, and is illustrative of the shameless manner in which this would-be financier imposes upon credulous grits. But he is rapidly being found out and unmasked, an operation to which he has been forced to submit more than once this session. Correction or reproof he resents from any quarter, but particularly from the Government benches, and when it comes to being dressed down by Charley Tupper or Dr. Montague, he can fall back only on insolence, relying to be backed up by Landerkin and Somerville and Murdock, and a few other grits who are never particular what they say. Clarke Wallace produced the official figures, which proved conclusively that in the elections of 1891 the Conservatives had a majority in Ontario of 1,678 votes, which has been increased by the bye-elections to 5 645, giving the twenty-six Ontario Conservative majority sitting in the House an average of 220 majority each. This, I take it, will be taken as a sufficient answer to the charge that the Government's majority in the premier Province is obtained by a gerrymander of the constituencies and that a majority of the people are opposed to the present administration.

The whole of Tuesday was spent over the redistribution bill in its relation to the Province of Quebec. Several modifications were adopted, and altogether the Quebec members were pretty well satisfied at the end of the evening.

On Wednesday morning the House met at 11 o'clock, and immediately resumed discussion of the redistribution bill. Quebec was cleared off, then Nova Scotia, New Brunswick and British Columbia. At last "the Island" was reached.

Mr. Welsh was the first speaker. He had a crow to pick with Mr. A. C. Macdonald for having spoken disrespectfully of the Local Government a few evenings before. The Commodore challenged contradiction when he asserted that, ever since the Island obtained responsible government, it had been better governed than any other British colony, no matter what administration was in power. He was sorry to hear Mr. Macdonald make the statement, for Mr. M was his (Mr. Welsh's) political godson. He was responsible for Mr. Macdonald's entry into politics, but since then Mr. M had changed his name from Liberal to Tory. The Island had not had a day's luck since it entered Confederation. He was opposed to the division of the Island into five districts. East Queen's would be one hundred miles from one end to the other. He favored the retention of the county lines.

Mr. Davies protested against the Government perpetrating such an injustice as the proposed gerrymander of the Island. In Nova Scotia and New Brunswick it had been determined to maintain the County lines, notwithstanding that the populations were dissimilar and varied all the way from 8,000 to 74,000. Why apply a different principle to the Island? Prince County has 36 500; Queen's, 46,000; and King's, 26,000. Not from Queen's with a population of 46 000. Queen's had a population nearly double that of King's ever since Confederation, but no Liberal had been heard to say that King's was unfairly treated because she had two members. There had been a solemn compact made at Confederation between the political parties on the Island that the counties should remain intact and should each have two members in the House and a representative in the Senate. Now that a member was to be taken away, it should be taken from King's, which had only 4,000 above the unit. A glance at the map should convince any man that an attempt of the grossest kind was being made to gerrymander the Island—a gerrymander prepared by little local politicians, whose souls cannot rise above their noses. Mr. Davies appealed to the Government to treat the Island the same way as Nova Scotia and New Brunswick, and respect the historical integrity of the county lines. The bill then would be satisfactory. Queen's would return two members, having a sufficient population; Prince, the only county whose population had increased in the last ten years, would return two members; and King's one member. Mr. Davies concluded by declaring that the gerrymander was for the purpose of legislating him out of the house, and he moved in amendment that the counties should remain as at present, Queen's and Prince returning two members each, and King's one member.

In rising to reply, Sir John Thompson said that if he thought the proposed redistribution of the Island justified one twentieth part of the strong adjectives and substantives Mr. Davies had applied to it, he would withdraw the plan and consider some other method. He repudiated any design to legislate Mr. Davies out of his seat, because he was well aware Mr. Davies' abilities and influence could place the strongest Liberal constituency on the Island at his disposal. By Mr. Davies' proposal each member for Queen's would represent 23,000; each member for Prince, 18,000; and the solitary member for King's, 26,634. Why should that disparity exist except for the purpose of depriving a Conservative county of one of its representatives. If there was so much to be said in defence of the county lines—if the strong expressions used with respect to honesty, fairness, justice, meanness, etc., could be urged in defence of the county lines on the Island, surely the Local Legislature, which has the domestic interests of the Island in charge, which has the power to change those county lines and depart from them, should have treasured them more sacredly than they did in the measure they recently passed, when they carved up the county and departed from old established lines, and divided townships in two.

Mr. Dennison characterized the gerrymander of King's County by the Local Legislature as disgraceful, and for the sake of a paltry 3,000 of population, thought it hardly necessary to gerrymander the whole Island. He would, therefore, support Mr. Davies' amendment.
