Weak and Nervous
 Whenever the body has been weakened by disease, it should be built up by Hood's Sarsaparilla. Read this: "About two years ago I suffered with a very severe attack of inflammation of the bowels. When I began to recover I was in a very weak and nervous condition, and suffered intensely with neuralgia pains in my head, which caused loss of sleep, and having no appetite."

Became Very Thin
 and weak. Fortunately a friend who had used Hood's Sarsaparilla with great benefit, kindly recommended me to try it. I am now as well as I ever was, and I would not be without Hood's Sarsaparilla in my house for anything." Mrs. G. KERN, 245 Manning Ave., Toronto, Ont.

THE NIGHT-BLOOMING CACTUS.
 A Cigantic and Beautiful Bloom Which Flourishes at Los Angeles.

A flower grown out of doors the year round surpasses one which has to spend half its year in an artificially heated room with little sunshine and less oxygen. The superiority of California flowers is no miracle and no accident, but the logical and inevitable result of more favorable surroundings.

The night-blooming cactus is a plant much admired by amateurs in the East, where it is also known as a cactus as well as a botanical event. It is needless to say, however, that an Eastern invitation to come and see our cactus bloom means a visit to Los Angeles. It is not so long since Cereus triangularis was one of the most showy of the night-blooming cacti. The branches are triangular, very thick and woody, with feathery spines. Outward it grows to immense proportions. If planted near a dwelling its great branches flatten themselves against the side of the house, sending out long, pale yellow, adventurous roots on either side, which attach themselves tightly to the wood, until the stems become hardened, and very loose, tarry gray and hard like fingers of string. Plants bloom from cuttings in a few months. The time of blooming is from July until November.

The buds are at first like rough balls. As they increase in size they develop into a gorgeous flower, with a scaly and pale green stem. They begin to open at about 5 o'clock evening, and close at 10 in the morning—except on foggy days, when they remain open until the sun comes out. The flowers are from ten to twelve inches from tip to tip of petals, and twelve inches in length. The sepals are greenish yellow, the broad inner petals like a large magnolia. The stamens are in the center like a skin of silken floss, their creamy anthers surrounding a magnificent large, light yellow velvet petal.

In this country the plants give no seed unless the flowers are fertilized by hand. When this is done it bears a large, pointed seed, tipped with green—the blossom end somewhat resembling that of the Norway Spruce. The seed and measure from seven to eleven inches in circumference. When cut open a pulpy, translucent centre is disclosed, dotted with shining black seeds, and the size of large pinheads and soft like fig seeds. The pulp is cool, juicy and delicately sweet. It is surrounded by a broad band of brilliant carmine about three-eighths of an inch wide, which makes a striking contrast and renders it a most picturesque fruit for the table. Cut in halves, and garnish with cream and eaten with a spoon from its deep, carmine cup, it is dainty enough for the most fastidious. By some the taste for this fruit might have to be cultivated, as is the case with olives and figs, but it looks good enough to eat—and almost too pretty.—From the Land of Sunshine.

GRATEFUL—COMFORTING.
EPPS'S COCOA
 BREAKFAST—SUPPER.

"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected Cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided for our breakfast and supper a delicately flavored beverage which may save many heavy doctors' bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame."—Civil Service Gazette.

Made simply with boiling water or milk. Sold only in packets, by Grocers, labelled "Epps's Cocoa."

JAMES EPPS & CO., Ltd., Homoeopathic Chemists, London, England.

WISER AND OTHERWISE.

"Thou shouldst eat to live, not live to eat."—Cicero.

A rich man may eat when he will, but a poor man must eat—Diogenes.

Laying to rest is bad, but what we eat should be good of its kind.—Dr. S. Fitch.

It is not the eating, but the indigestion which follows, that ought to be blamed.—St. Augustine.

Dress is the table of your contents.—Lavoisier.

We are often able because we think we are able.—J. Hayes.

The sympathy of a great nation is the most precious reward of authors.—Disraeli.

Avarice is to the intellect and the heart what sensuality is to the morals.—Mrs. Jameson.

Were we eloquent as angels, yet we should please some people more by listening than by talking.—Colton.

"Trust him little who praises all; him less who censures all, and him least who is indifferent to all."—Lavoisier.

There is no beauty of complexion, or form, or behavior, like the wish to scatter joy and not pain around us.—Anon.

Ambition is so powerful a passion in the human breast that however high we reach we are never satisfied.—Machiavelli.

Adversity is a severe instructor, set over us by one who knows us better than we do ourselves, as he loves us better, to our benefit.—Bacon.

Small crimes always precede great ones. Never have we seen timid innocence pass suddenly to extreme licentiousness.—Hobbes.

Men spend their lives in the service of their passions, instead of employing their passions in the service of their life.—Steele.

We should be as courteous to a man as we are to a picture, which we are willing to give the advantage of the best light.—Emerson.

Music resembles poetry; in each are nameless graces, which no methods teach, and which a master's hand alone can give.

What can be more foolish than to think all this rare fabric of heaven and earth could come by chance, when all the skill of art is applied to make an oyster?—Jeremy Taylor.

No accidents are so unlikely but that the wise may draw advantage from them; nor are there any so lucky but that the foolish are to be sacrificed to their own prejudice.—Bocheval.

The true test of civilization is, not the census, nor the size of cities, nor the crops, but the kind of man that the country turns out.—Emerson.

"To be free minded and cheerfully disposed at hours of meals, and of sleep, and of exercise, is one of the best precepts of long-lasting, happy life."

It is certainly a very important lesson to learn how to enjoy ordinary things, and to be able to relish your being without the help of the expected attack, or the gratification of some appetite.—Steele.

McKinnon's English Ointment.
 Mr. NEIL McKINNON,—
 Dear Sir,—For five years I was a sufferer from eczema. Physicians could not help me. At last I bought a box of your Ointment, which helped me wonderfully, while two boxes made a complete cure. I can recommend it to all others similarly afflicted.

ALEX. McKAY,
