DOROTHY DIX'S COLUMN-- Retarded Maturity

22-Year-Old Lives In World Of Day-Dreams

DEAR MISS DIX: Since childhood, my daughter has had a habit of telling lies through her imagination. I thought she would outgrow this habit as she became older, but she still has it and will be 22 years old soon. She left high school and went to Trade School as she couldn't make the academic grades. When she talks to outsiders she is very polite, but when she's in the house she doesn't get along with her younger sister and is very disrespectful to her parents. We have made every effort to teach her manners, but our efforts are unavailing.

MRS. GEORGE

ANSWER: Your daughter's tendency to live in a world of day-dreams is rightly a cause of great concern. This habit, in a youngster, can be lightly dismissed, but when carried over to the twenties it is a sure sign that the girl is not attaining emotional maturity.

She is creating a fanciful existence to cover up some lack in real life that is bothering her. Perhaps it is a consciousness that she is inferior, mentally or physically.

For Tomorrow

WHILE the spirits and emotions may be keyed to holiday exuberance and ardor, it is advisable to count the cost, both in outlay of funds as well as in expenditure of energy. There may be critical denouements for over-stepping codes or for seeking release in peculiar or pernicious channels of expression. Luckily there are available sound advice and friendly supervision.

For the Birthday

Those whose birthday it is may have a rather strange or unique set of circumstances to confront and modify. Such may be attributed to peculiar sentimental or emotional incitements, which could escape into false situations or dubious entanglements. If given lax rein. Luckily there are sound and capable advisers, with elders ready to stand by in a critical impasse. With much at stake, it would be well to curb too ardent spirits in romance and in more prosaic contacts.

A child born on this day may be overabundant in its feelings, impulses and emotions. While creative aims may prod its efforts, it might profit by sound supervision or discipline.

Day After Tomorrow

The horoscope holds augury of a sudden and quite unpredictable state of affairs. A drastic upheaval

Modern Etiquette By Roberta Lee

Q. Should the parents of a child reprimand him if he misbehaves at the dinner table in the presence of guests?

A. It is better not. Either the father or mother should quietly take the child away from the table. He should not be scolded or punished in the presence of the guests—but neither should the misbehavior be ignored.

Q. How far in advance of the church wedding ceremony should the parents of the bride and bridegroom take their seats?

A. One or two minutes.

Q. Is it all right to acknowledge a formal invitation by telephone?

A. No; a formally written reply should be sent.

That Body Of Yours By James W. Barton, M.D.

A DRUG TO RELIEVE ANXIETY AND LOWER BLOOD PRESSURE

In a world that has been upset before, during and after World War II, physicians, old and young, and the public generally, are seeking drugs that will give relief in pain and anxiety without serious side effects and that will not be habit-forming.

Many individuals are so upset mentally and emotionally that it is causing disturbances of the body and they seek the physician's help for some body symptoms. To relieve the body symptoms, treatment of the mental and emotional symptoms must come first.

In Journal of Mental Science, London, Dr. S. Smith reports seven-teen patients, 12 women and five men, who had a combination of psychological indications of anxiety and tension and somatic (body) symptoms such as sweating, tremor, and palpitation of the heart. All these symptoms had received treatment from psychologists and psychiatrists before treatment with hexamethonium. The effect of hexamethonium was determined by the effect of the drug upon the sympathetic contraction or tightening of sympathetic nervous system signs and symptoms.

Four of the group were treated in hospital and the remainder as outpatients. Each patient took one tablet (0.25 Gm.) after meals twice a day for five days, then three times a day for another five days and so on up to four or five tablets every day. It was found that the best objective results were usually obtained between the fifth and tenth week of such treatment.

Where there was a history of a heart stroke (coronary thrombosis) a brain stroke (apoplexy), hexamethonium was not given. High blood pressure — the usual reason for use of hexamethonium — was lowered in 11 cases. Varying degrees of improvement were seen in all patients. Excellent results were obtained in some by removing body disturbances (tremor, sweating, palpitation) which in turn were causing the patient much anxiety. Anxiety is chronic fear. The side effects of the drug were a slight dizziness, which most physicians dislike prescribing drugs just to relieve pain or fears, there are times when it becomes necessary and this drug gave very satisfactory results.

Presently allowed "All the time you choose to take for it," since angling is a pastime which should be unhurried if it is to be enjoyed, they went down along the lane and away then in the direction of the other farm. If, as it turned out their catch was small, what lovely spots awaited the like of them; along the bridges and streams. On rustic bridges of stone when stretched to full length one might peer cautiously over an edge, or at a convenient chink between poles of cover to catch intriguing sights of the finny secretive tribe below.

Through the morning we saw James stop in the yard, and shading his eyes scan the neighborhood. "Do you suppose they're alright, Ellen?" he called, seems as though they should be somewhere about by this." Noon returned them with small takings but nevertheless satisfied with their fishing session. In the afternoon they joined the harvesters in threshing from a field at Alderlea.

But now all implements and machinery of farming is tested and in the light of our Sunday to come, these verses come to mind. "And what is prayer you ask of me?"

It's talking with God in secret; It's looking up with tear-filled eyes Into the blue of Heaven's skies; It's wanting strength to conquer strife, And blessings rich to gladden life; It's telling God what's in your heart Entreating Him to take your part; It's drawing near to touch His hand— It's begging Him to understand; It's promising to do your best— It matters not how hard the test; It's gratitude for favors past— A hope that they may always last; A rod that bars the way to sin— And keeps the soul at peace within; A prayer is this, the thought that goes With folks all day until its close— Until Monday — - - Diary — - - Good-night

ELLEN'S DIARY By An Island Farmer's Wife

"A prayer is this, the thought that goes all day with folks until its close." These lines from verses by Zaida D. Howard come to mind now in the quiet and peace of week's close when without, on this island farm, all implements and machinery are resting and within all is in order against the keeping of our Sunday to come.

"The thought that goes with folks"—and going out from the birds the mind gather in its strange sense the name of this or that loved one and friend to commit them, often in unformed, unspoken words, "While we are absent—the one from the other"—to Heavenly care and keeping. How naturally thoughts go! While the housewife's hands are busy clearing a breakfast table, laundering a favorite school-shirt, because I'd like to wear it on Monday, brushing the potatoes to tuck them away in the dinner-pot, or are about the hundred and one tasks of her day.

So ours went out today, to near and farther places—to Karolyn whose steps about this place we try in part to fill; to the harvesters for not yet has our harvest all been gathered; to Jeanie so busy about the cares at Alderlea, and the grandchildren on their day off from classes.

After a conference which included their father the two at this place decided with broad smiles, "Well just have to go fishing." "But why?" their grandfather queried. "Have you forgotten the troutling season closes on Monday?" Jamie asked. And Gage nodded with that finally which assures one that struggling is useless in the circumstance, "Yes that's that!" he said.

Presently allowed "All the time you choose to take for it," since angling is a pastime which should be unhurried if it is to be enjoyed, they went down along the lane and away then in the direction of the other farm. If, as it turned out their catch was small, what lovely spots awaited the like of them; along the bridges and streams.
