A Grit Member on the "National Policy."

(From the Perth Expositor.)
It is rather remarkable proof of the feelings of the electors, that we should find that even Mr. Galbraith has been brought to see the necessity of at least pretending to favour the national policy of Sir John Macdonald. In his address to the electors Mr. Galbraith says:—

"As a large amount has to be annually paid by the people of this country to meet the public requirements, a great part of which must be raised by customs and duties charged upon imports, I cordially endorse the policy announced by Mr. Mackenzie when he first assumed office, of charging those duties principally upon articles coming into competition with Canadian manufactures, thereby affording a liberal measure of protection to the Canadian manufacturer, while taxing the people only to the extent necessary for the purposes of the revenue."
Now this is exactly what the resolution of Sir John Macdonald proposes to effect, and it is also the policy which Mr. Mackenzie and his subservient follower Mr. Galbraith have steadily opposed since the Grits came into power. Mr. Galbraith refers to his votes in Parliament as evidence of his policy, but unfortunately for him, his votes and his present address are altogether at variance.

Hard Times.

A few months ago it was deemed a capital Grit joke to represent "old Hard Times" as taking his departure by express from Canada, while the Opposition leader in vain begged him to stay a little longer, to help through the elections. Now we have a question to put to business men—to men who really know something of the country's commercial condition—which we hope each one of them will answer candidly; to himself, in any event, and to others too, if his tongue be not tied by devotion to party. How does the concurrent and almost unanimous testimony of the bank reports this summer harmonize with the boast that the fly-on-the-wheel policy was at last being crowned with success, and that the departure of "hard times" from Canada was no joke merely, but a substantial fact? If it were possible to compel every Grit amongst us to speak his true inmost thought on this subject, the miserable no-policy which now cramps the country's energies would be so universally condemned that the general election would be the mere formal record of a sentence of dismissal of our present incapable rulers, already agreed upon by men of both parties. But then party spirit does not work that way, and hence we find devoted Grits, who in one breath declare that Mr. Mackenzie's policy is ruinous to the country, and in the next that they must support him, notwithstanding.—Mail.

Mr. Ralph A. Earle, whose name has been connected with the scurrilous articles in the Fortnightly Review, entitled "The Political Adventures of Lord Beaconsfield," contradicts the report, and says that he is neither the author of the articles nor has had anything to do with their composition directly or indirectly.

Before and After.

The organ says that while Mr. Jones and Mr. Hill were about to speak at a meeting of their in the West of this County, a large scowl of meekness struck in. The organ suggests that Providence sent them as an omen of good for the Grits. If they had come after the speaking, there might be something in the suggestion. But coming before it is plain that Providence meant the people to stay away so as not to be deluded by the invocations of the Grit orators. It makes all the difference in the world whether the hee struck in before or after the meeting.—H. Reporter.

The Anglo-Turkish Treaty.

In the Home Secretary's intimation to the Imperial House of Commons relative to the Anglo-Turkish alliance in Asia there is one point that deserves special attention. As far back as the 4th of June, ere yet the Congress had met, a convention was made between Great Britain and Turkey, but a conditional one only, dependent upon certain events. These events having turned up, the convention takes effect, and Europe now hears with some astonishment of an alliance with which it is beyond the scope of the Congress to interfere. The news that Earl Beaconsfield did not sit down to the diplomatic game at Berlin without good cards in his hand, which he appears to have played well besides. It seems quite natural to read that, following Mr. Cross' announcement, there was "great excitement," and that the Conservatives were "exulting."

Orange.

A little way from the line of the railway that leads from Marseilles to Lyons and Paris, on a small tributary of the Rhone, having once papal Avignon for a not distant neighbor, and, in times past, not unfrequently for an ally against surrounding aggression, lies the old Roman and Burgundian city of Orange. It is the ancient Aransio, and the great walls of its theatre, still standing, tell of the days when Southern Gaul was a Roman province. It is, indeed, celebrated among French cities for its monuments of a long past splendor. Its history is a remarkable one, and the most noteworthy points in it are its maintaining its independence after it had been almost completely surrounded by a hostile and covetous power, and its giving a titular name to princes whose lives had practically no connection with it whatever. William the First of Ireland, Second of Scotland, and Third of England, was (according to the best reckoning) William the Tenth of Orange. Some philologists claim that there is no connection between the city of Orange (Aransio) and the color of the fruit, mabum aureum (golden apple.)

Our Washington Letter.

WASHINGTON, D. C., July 9, 1878.

That the Potter investigation is gradually collapsing is conceded on all hands. Since Mrs. Jenks was discharged from the witness stand little interest has been felt in the actions of the committee. This woman has attained a notoriety that would be most unpleasant to most, but is not to her.

The Fourth of July was only celebrated here by the "Oldest Inhabitants." That society met in a hall, orated, toasted, sang songs, eat, drank and were merry for the greater part of the day, which was too hot for younger people to enjoy themselves.

The use of fire crackers in the city was prohibited, but was of course indulged in by numerous small boys, as usual. The Fourth wouldn't be itself at all without fire crackers. Altogether Thursday was a quiet day at the capital. The usual number of minor accidents occurred. Two boys had their faces blown full of powder, a small cannon exploded tearing hands severely, and so on, but no serious ones were reported. One or two fires were started but were extinguished before any buildings were burned down.

Mrs. Hayes is decidedly intent upon making the most of her four years in the White House. Rumor now has it that her son Webb is soon to be married to an Ohio lady, in which event the Executive Mansion will doubtless again be the scene of wedding festivities.

Let Mr. Mackenzie give the New Brunswick Lieutenant-Governorship to Mr. Anglin after he is returned for Gloucester. There would be no more harm in drawing $8,000 a year through a viceregal Commission than drawing it on a printing contract. If any wretched Tory should contend that it was indecent to have a warm partisan sitting in the Lieutenant Governor's chair of New Brunswick, why, the Premier can cite the Letellier precedent and laugh at him.—Mail.

GENERAL SIR GARNET WOLSELEY has written an important and exhaustive article for the North American Review on the subject of the native army of India and its present and future organization. He discusses the effect of Earl Beaconsfield's movement of troops to the Mediterranean, and declares that posterity will acknowledge the benefit conferred on England by Earl Beaconsfield's masterly policy in thus utilizing this mine of military strength. India, he says, is a recruiting ground vaster than all Europe put together.

SIR GARNET WOLSELEY is on his way to Cyprus, with a British battalion. He will also take the Indian contingent with him from Malta.
