Let us Stop Grumbling and Farm Better.

Is it not time to stop this constant complaining about the poverty of our soil, and the unprofitableness of agriculture? If our soils are poor from previous management, why not go to work and make them better?

If our present methods of farming are not so profitable as we could wish, then let us learn how to improve our methods, or to adopt others that will bring us more satisfactory returns. That farming here is profitable, no one can deny when they look around among the successful farmers that may be found in every township. But our successful farmers will be found to be intelligent men every time, and just so fast, and just so far intelligence is brought to the cultivation of our soil, just so fast, and so far will their cultivation be found profitable. But he is a mistaken man who supposes that the time is now past when farms can be carried on here now as they were a hundred years ago. It is the sticking to old customs beyond their day of usefulness, that keep so many of us from attaining better results from our efforts. We need to cultiivate our land a great deal better though it requires us to cultivate fewer acres. Our most successful farmers at the present time are those who endeavor to make each acre do all that is capable of doing.

Strong Men.

Many cases of remarkable strength are reported among the ancients. The Roman tribune, Dentatus, who went by the name of the second Achilles, is said to have killed, at different times, 300 of the enemy, and when treacherously set upon by twenty-five of his countrymen, although he was then past his sixtieth year, he killed fifteen of them before he was slain.

Fury tells us of one Athanasius, who walked across the stage at Rome, loaded with a breastplate weighing 500 pounds, and with buskins of the same weight. Another man named Milo, when stood up right, could not be forced out of his place by any of the athletes. But of all the prodigies of strength of whom we have an account in Roman history, Maximin, the Emperor, is to be reckoned the foremost. Whatever we are told of him is well attested; his character was too exalted not to be
