

Nemesis.

When he and she were ten and eight His little wife was she; And both were quite content to wait Till he a man should be.

At fifteen he on girlish toys Looks down with scornful mien; And she disdains to play with boys At feminine thirteen.

When twenty, sees him quite a man, Its bliss has no alloy; She laughs at him behind her fan, And calls him such a boy.

They now are middle-aged; 'tis said His chin a beard now covers; And strange to say, she's not yet wed, In spite of all her lovers!

Mark Twain From Another Point of View.

"One of these," said Mr. Fulford, "who has made both fame and fortune, is Mark Twain (Sam Clemens.) I knew him well. He was a reporter on the Enterprise while I was a young boy setting type on the same paper.

"You never suspected, then, that he was a humorist?" "Never. I saw him every day and read everything he wrote for the paper, but I never suspected there was anything funny about him beyond a little drollery in his manner of speech.

"Was Mark Twain well liked among his acquaintances?" "No; he was rather unpopular. I did not like him then, and I do not like him now. I dislike him so much that I never read much he writes, but I think I can tell the truth about him, and I am sure I am right when I say he retains as friends to-day very few, if any, of those who know him in Virginia City.

"The plan was to waylay him some night as he passed along this lonely road and take his watch, pistol and money and return them a day or two later. The night came. He was coming home pretty late from the other side. The boys knew he had a pistol, and it was a dangerous joke; but that was the sort of practical jokes we all indulged in at that time. It would, of course, be necessary to get the drop on him, otherwise somebody would get hurt. The plan worked all right. They rushed out from behind a rock, with pistols cocked and levelled, and commanded him to throw up his hands, which he did very promptly. There was nothing else to do. Of course the boys were masked. They took everything he had, including a very common old silver watch, and he seemed to be right glad to get away with his life. The next day he wrote a thrilling article for the Enterprise, giving a detailed account of the affair, abusing the supposed robbers with terrific vengeance. The secret was kept dark until he was going to leave on the stage coach for San Francisco. Just as Clemens was about to get on the stage, a committee of boys with very solemn countenances walked up to him and with a very formal speech presented him with a neat-looking case, which he supposed contained some pleasing memento by which his Virginia City friends wished to be remembered. You can imagine his surprise and the yell that went up from the crowd when he opened the case and found inside the watch, pistol and small amount of money of which he had been robbed a few nights before. The driver cracked his whip and the coach went off with a whirl. It was the sort of a practical joke Clemens did not appreciate and it was the last he ever saw of Virginia City."

NOTES.

Not the promissory, but facts about WELCOMER SOAP, an article that does not contain one particle of the adulterations used to reduce the cost of "Pure Goods," but does possess the value of legitimate Washing Qualities, the demand for which proves the advantage gained by the use of the genuine Soap of doubtful character. None should be deceived even by Red and Yellow Wrappers, or any of the imitations of the WELCOMER, as a pair of clasped hands is stamped on every box. Made by CUTTERS, DAVIS & Co.

How Lost, How Restored.

We have recently published a new edition of DR. CULVERWELL'S CELEBRATED ESSAY on the cure of Nervous Debility, Mental and Physical incapacity, Impediments to Marriage, etc., resulting from excesses.

Price, in a sealed envelope, only 25c or two postage stamps.

The celebrated author, in his thirty years' successful practice, that alarming consequences may be radically cured without the dangerous use of internal medicines, the use of the knife; pointing out a mode of cure at once simple, certain and effectual, by means of which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, can cure himself cheaply, privately, and radically.

This Lecture should be in the hands of every youth and every man in the land.
