Russian Leaders Inspect Big Dam In India

NANGAL, India (Reuters)— An American engineer Tuesday explained in detail one of India's largest power projects to the visiting Soviet leaders.

The American, Harvey Slocum, also exchanged good - humored banter with the Russians during their visit to the huge irrigation and power project in the Punjab. Slocum is the engineer in charge of operations.

"We should work together," Nikita Khrushchev, Communist party chief, declard after listening to Slocum's explanation.

"That's all right with me," the American rejoined. "I'll work for you and you work for me."

Khrushchev chuckled: "I couldn't do that - they wouldn't give me a passport."

Premier Bulganin broke in: "We are not your enemies. We want to be your friends."

"That's right," Slocum said. "We should compete and be friends."

Later, Khrushchev turned to an Indian engineer and said: "You must learn to do all things yourself and not depend on foreigners."

WILL RIVAL HOOVER

The project being inspected will turn part of the Sutlej river into a 60-mile-long lake in the Himalayan foothills. It is being financed by India, but some 60 American engineers are working on it.

Khrushchev and Bulganin saw concrete being poured into the foundations of the massive Bhakra dam. It will be 680 feet high, largest of its type in the world except for the Hoover dam in the United States.

Wage Showdown Nearing In Dominion Textile Co.

SHERBROOKE, Que. (CP) — A showdown is nearing in a wage dispute involving the Dominion Textile Company and 5,400 of its employees in four major Quebec mills.

The dispute dates back to Oct. 5, 1954, when negotiations started between the company and the National Catholic Federation of Textile Workers (CCCL). Now the majority of workers in three of the plants—those at Sherbrooke, Drummondville and Montmorency—have voted in favor of strike action to back up their demands. Workers in the Magog plant have voted for acceptance of a company offer.

At the outset, the federation sought a 10-per-cent wage increase.

The dispute was submitted to an arbitration board. Judge Achille Pettigrew, board chairman, recommended that wages and working conditions in the industry remain unchanged.

STILL FAR APART

He said that after consideration of the submissions of the parties it would not be in the best interests either of the company or the employees to grant any increase in the face of present competition in the industry.

Rene Chaloult, union arbitrator, recommended a 10-per-cent increase and A. Stewart McNichols, the company arbitrator, a five-per-cent decrease.

Following delivery of the board's reports Nov. 4, the company and union still found themselves unable to reach a basis of agreement.

German Can Helped Allies Win the War

LONDON (AP)—A can designed by the Germans was officially credited Monday with helping the Allies win the Second World War. It became known universaly as "the Jerrican."

The story is told in the war history of the Middle East. The British Army was running into trouble moving gasoline, when they came across the five-gallon steel welded can abandoned by the Germans in the fighting in the western desert in 1941. A sample was sent to London with orders to the war office:

"Give us this can in place of the leaky British 'flimsy.'"

The German can was adopted as regular standing British equipment. Until then, RASC historians said "the occasions, when petrol was scarce may well be attributed to the four-gallon flimsy can, from which the losses in transit were so great as sometimes to imperil operations."
