Nfld. To Begin Power Project

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP) — Construction engineers this week began laying the ground work for a $2,000,000 power project in the Battling Brook area near Grand Falls.

The hydro-electric plant itself will be completed by late next year. The Newfoundland Light and Power Company is developing the power supply electricity to Grand Falls, Bishop Falls and Windsor in north central Newfoundland.

The expanding towns are now dependent on electricity produced by Anglo Newfoundland Development Company, the Grand Falls Paper Mill. Anglo Newfoundland needs most of the power it produces for paper making.

Past Noble Grands Had Monthly Meeting

On Thursday evening Mrs. Belle MacLeod, North River Road, was hostess to Alpha Rebekah Past Noble Grands Club for their monthly meeting. With the president, Mrs. Jean Smith, presiding the regular business was duly transacted, when the meeting adjourned to convene again in June at the home of Mrs. Lulu Nichol.

At the close of the business session, a White Elephant Sale was held. Miss Lillian Duchemin and Miss Hilda Harper very capably presented the articles for sale with the result that a goodly sum was realized.

Following this, a delicious lunch was served by the committee—Mrs. Bessie Compton, Miss Lillian Duchemin, Miss Hilda Harper and Miss Lily Dewar, and a social hour enjoyed.

PRINCE PHILIP ON BBC

LONDON (Reuters) — Prince Philip will introduce an hour-long program on the BBC's television service June 30 to mark the start of the International Geophysical Year. It was announced Tuesday.

leaving so much behind, and that through our own shortcomings, we are taking such a little bit of it with us."

Speaking in particular to the 1957 graduates, the Valetorian said, "Today, we direct our steps for the last time from these hallowed halls, and clad outwardly with the caps, gowns, and symbolic hoods that mark the fulfillment of our aspiration, we go to test our mettle in what the apostle assures us is truly a battlefield. We must never lose sight of our final goal or despond in any way the rich heritage that we are privileged to be able to bear away with us from this cloistered treasury; we must support, defend, and maintain that heritage, multiply it as a talent which we have only on loan, and spread the principles and practices which this heritage contains wherever we go, in whatever our labor, that we may give an acceptable accounting of our stewardship."

Valedictory Address At S. D. U. Convocation

"Just as a body is more than a cell upon a cell upon a group of cells; so Saint Dunstan's is more than a brick upon a brick upon a plot of red earth," said 1957 Science graduate, Tom Ford, who delivered the Valedictory Address at the S.D.U. Commencement Exercises held in the Alumni Auditorium yesterday afternoon.

Mr. Ford, whose home is in Franconia, New Hampshire, U.S.A., received the degree of Bachelor of Science (cum laude) at yesterday's ceremony.

"There is common to both the principle that gives to each its individual meaning and its intrinsic worth, and this is the life that flows within each," continued the Valedictorian. "We have been graded into the healthy stock of this life, nourished from the common font of faith and knowledge until that same life principle flowed through our every fiber. Now the vine can no longer support the ripened fruit, the harvest time has come and the product of the vine must be picked and placed before the eyes of men, before the scrutiny of the world."

THOMAS FORD, B.Sc.

of knowledge—we have been shown how. Our apprenticeship completed, we have been given the tools. "We will always bear the marks of this vine on which we were nurtured," Mr. Ford said, "as well as the sign of the guiding principle which this vine is rooted, the principle so simply expressed in our college motto: 'Ex eodem fonte, fide et scientia—out of the same font spring faith and knowledge.' So meaningful and so cherished is this ideal, that even if this plot of earth were rendered parched and barren and this vine of wisdom were to wither and die, the spirit embodied in that motto would still remain implanted on the hearts of her men and women, and mark them wherever they might be as sons and daughters of Saint Dunstan's."

NOBLE HERITAGE
"There is little wonder, then, that we should find sadness in our hearts as this final cleavage takes place, realizing that we are on our own, realizing that we are

SHIELD AND SWORD
Early in his address, Mr. Ford reminded his classmates that "armed with the shield of faith and the sword of truth" they were about to enter upon "a life-long crusade dedicated to the defense of that faith and the fostering of that truth, in the various professional trades and occupations in which life will find us."

Noting that the study of philosophy enabled them to recognize "the universality of the paradox," the 1957 Class Valedictorian stated that it was not surprising to find that on this occasion their emotions were "mixed... and certainly conflicting... that unique mixture of feelings that is universal to the heritage of the graduate sally mixture... that defies description and can only be retained in the heart as the sweetest of memories, food for the soul in the days to come."

Mr. Ford declared that he and his classmates were proud to know that their names were now "affixed to that same roll with these great of the past; the dedicated, the learned, the holy men whom we are fired to emulate."

GIVEN THE TOOLS
"We are also humbled," the Valedictorian said, "We have but to wander through the laboratory stockrooms, browse through our own college library, or engage one of the faculty members in conversation to become aware of how little we actually know—how little we have absorbed. The volumes of books in our own parlours touched—all these indicate how much we have yet to learn. These things undone serve to humble us in our most exalted moment. But we are consoled. We are told that by becoming humble, one becomes teachable, and by becoming teachable, one becomes wise. In addition, each of us has been conferred a degree, a mark of distinction, which according to its thirteenth century meaning, was to be but a "first degree", a certificate to show that its bearer was "ready to start learning". We are ready, then, we are prepared to spend our lifetime in the pursuit

S.D.U. To Proceed With Young Ladies' Residence

"It is the intention of our Board of Governors to proceed, as soon as plans are completed, with the construction of a residence for young ladies who are attending the College," said Very Rev. J.A. Sullivan, Rector of St. Dunstan's University, who delivered at yesterday's Exercises held in the Alumni Auditorium, his first annual Commencement-day report since his appointment last year as head of the century-old Roman Catholic educational institution.

"Although the residence will not be large," the Rector continued, "its construction will have to be financed by monies derived from sources of revenue, we are far from being in a position to provide for even this modest program of expansion. New library facilities must also be provided in the near future, and the program of training staff must not only be continued but must be enlarged.

"The total enrolment during the year was three hundred and eighty five, which is an increase of 20 per cent over last year, the increase being due to the student organizations. The work done by the students during the year was in general satisfactory."

CONGRATULATES TEAM

The Rector congratulated the members of the college debating teams on the successes they had achieved during the year, referring particularly to their coach, Rev. F.L. Cass, and the two young men who at Ottawa in March won the inter-collegiate Debating Championship of Canada.

Father Sullivan expressed his pleasure with co-operation given by the College students in connection with the Red Cross Blood Donor Clinics conducted on the campus within the year, and offered "a word of appreciation" to the officers of the student organizations "who, in addition to their regular work, carried out successfully the various student activities."

The Reverend Rector extended his congratulations also to the graduates who had received degrees at the afternoon exercises. "We have placed the stamp of our approval upon the work which they have done," he said, "and, as we loose the bond that bound them to us and bid them farewell, we remind them that whatever the future brings to them of success or failure will rebound in certain measure to the College that today sends them forth."

Father Sullivan called attention to the "considerable interest in education shown during this academic year on both provincial and national levels" such as the recent Provincial Select Standing Committee on Education, the establishment of the Industrial Foundation on Education; the three-day November meeting of the member institutions of the National Conference of Canadian Universities held in Ottawa; the decision of the Canadian Government to double its grants to Canadian Universities; the creation of the Canada Council, and the generous endowments and scholarship funds recently set up by Canada's International Nickel Company.

TRIBUTE TO PREDECESSOR
The Rector paid high tribute to his predecessor in office, Monsignor MacKenzie, now pastor of the newly formed St. Pius X Parish, Parkdale.

"Although the public in general may be aware of the contribution that he made to the College during his rectorship," Father Sullivan said "we who were intimately associated with him on the staff realize fully the energy and zeal with which he gave himself to the direction of the institution during its years of greatest expansion. Although busily occupied with a building program during most of his term as Rector, he was always attentive to the other needs of the College; and, in making provision for new courses and in improvement kept pace with the physical improvement of the institution."

Recalling the "severe loss" suffered by the College by the sudden death of veteran faculty member, Rev. Michael E. Francis, the Rector said, "E. Francis, the Rector said, "E. Francis as a member of the teaching staff as well as Director of the Extension Department were years of devoted duty, a devotion that continued even to the beginning of this year, when he actually resumed his teaching duties."

Father Francis passed away last fall just five days after St. Dunstan's had been re-opened for the 1956-57 term. Except for six years spent in parochial work, the late Father Francis had been a member of the S.D.U. faculty since 1923.

Reviews Activities

The Rector reported several changes that had taken place in the College staff during the academic year, and noted the addition of a third year to the engineering course, and the addition to the curriculum of courses in Education.

"Convocation exercises usually bring to your attention the successful students," the Rector reminded the large audience of relatives, friends, students, faculty members, and distinguished guests that have assembled to witness the annual ceremony, adding, "Occasional programs, which attract certain interested groups during the year, present to you those who are endowed with special gifts and talents. But neither of these gives a complete picture of the year's work of the faculty and classes, the supervision of different faculty and student activities, the hours of study on the part of the students, the work of preparation on the part of instructors. It is given only to the Faculty and students to know fully the work of each and every member of the staff. On these two groups chiefly is placed the responsibility of attaining the end for which the College exists."

"To the Faculty belongs the responsibility for teaching. In order that the members of the Faculty may fulfill their proper function successfully, they must not only carry out their teaching duties, but must also have a considerable part of their time available for continued study. Unfortunately, however, administrative and extra curricular duties often add such a burden to their regular duties that sufficient time is not always available for this desired study.

"We look forward to the day when more staff will be available to provide for more effective separation of teaching and administrative duties so that the teacher may be better prepared to teach
