THE DAILY EXAMINER.

AUGUST 4, 1892.

The Manitoba Matter.

SOME of the oppositionists are shouting that the Dominion Government has been beaten in respect to the Manitoba school question. Nothing of the kind. The Dominion Government were asked to disallow an act of the Manitoba Legislature. They declined to do so, but advised that the constitutionality of the act be tested by the courts and offered to pay the costs of the appeal. The appeal resulted in the constitunality of the act being denied by the Supreme Court of Canada and affirmed by the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council of the Empire. The caution of the Dominion Government in declining to disallow the act on the ground of its unconstitutionality has been justified. The measures to be taken in view of the decision of the Privy Council, of the recent triumph of the party in Manitoba which passed the Act, and of the fact that the Catholics of Manitoba were guaranteed separate schools at the time of Confederation—are yet to be considered. A peaceful and easy solution of the difficulty can only be obtained by the exercise of reason and wisdom and the suppression of all prejudice and hardness of heart in respect to it.

Meeting of Parliament.

THE meeting of Parliament, to-day, will have for its central figure Gladstone. A New York paper, speaking of the anxiety of the Grand Old Man's friends concerning his health, says that "when Mr. Gladstone has a cold the entire Liberal party is seized with a chill." This is a happy expression of the fact of the Liberal leader's importance at this juncture. The latest telegrams report that his health is good; and it is hoped that the wonderful strength and vitality which has sustained him in so many emergencies will remain with him until the great end for which he desires to live has been gained. His attitude in respect of the relative position of the home rule question with others clamoring for a settlement was aptly described in his conversation with the representatives of the workingmen who waited upon him to endeavor to enlist him as a recruit for the eight-hours-day propaganda. On grounds of public utility, duty, honor and character he must, he then said, face the settlement of the great constitutional question which had been raised between Great Britain and Ireland. That constituted the first duty, and not on account of Ireland alone, but because without the settlement of that question it was quite impossible, as has been proved by the experience of his whole life, for parliament to do its duty to Great Britain and to make proper progress with British questions. "I am," he emphatically declared, "so bound in honor and character to the Irish question that I should really disgrace myself to the lowest point that the most unprincipled could possibly sink to if I were to recede from the position to which I am bound by the struggle of the last few years."

His first effort to this end will, of course, be to oust Lord Salisbury from office. This will be an easy matter. His difficulties will come after. The Opposition will be formidable in numbers and in unity of purpose to prevent the passage of a Home Rule bill. Apart from Ireland, Lord Salisbury has a majority of seventeen. From England alone his majority is seventy-one;—and English public opinion will always greatly influence the British Parliament. Any measure which will greatly shock English public opinion cannot be carried. On the other hand, the Parnellites will not easily be satisfied with any measure which falls short of the expectations of their deceased leader. The Anti-Parnellites, too, must necessarily strike for such a measure as will satisfy the national aspirations of the Irish people. So that, apart from all unexpected developments which may disturb the present conditions of Parliament, there is in the situation of to-day sufficient to test to the utmost all the tact and talent, the strength and resources of the Liberal leader. This is the fact, which it is well that all friends of the Irish cause should know.

—The Ottawa liar is getting in his work, and now we see in the New York papers, big head lines such as "Canada Getting Scared."

—Bismarck is reported to have declared in a recent address that he should devote his efforts in the future to strengthening the Parliament and increasing the power of the press in the German Empire. In the days of his mastery the Iron Chancellor made no concealment of his contempt both for the press and the national law-making body. It is a striking spectacle to see Europe's greatest statesman in his old age publicly acknowledging that in his desire to make Germany mighty he made the mistake of under-rating the importance of the people's representatives and the organs of public opinion. It proves that, aged though he is, the builder of German unity is not too old to learn, nor too proud to confess his errors of judgment in the past.

THE MONCTON TRAGEDY

The Coroner's Inquest.

SOME OF THE EVIDENCE.

Samuel C. Somers, sworn, said: I seen J. E. Steadman on the south side of the Donnelly house last evening. I first saw a man come out of the side door and clinch with the deceased; think deceased raised his baton when they clinched and struck at him; I then heard a shot and in a very short period I heard a second. Then there were four shots. The four shots appeared to be to the eastward of them. I didn't see who fired these four shots. I seen those two men come towards the street; and the deceased hit and stunned the prisoner. I saw Mr. Scott strike the prisoner, and heard Mr. Steadman say "My God, I'm murdered." I was only close enough to see the two men when I heard the first shot; the man they arrested was under my eye from the time he met Steadman at the door until he was arrested.

To Juror Cole: I could not tell the position the pistol was in when the first shot was fired. Deceased fell in the road after the four shots were fired.

Policeman Scott, sworn, said: Am a policeman in the city of Moncton. By the instruction of the city marshal I went to assist in making an arrest. Marshal told me that I had better go around on the north side of the house and keep a lookout. I was going around the building by the rear when I heard the first shot fired. I then ran towards where the firing was and when I got to the southeast corner of the house I heard four shots fired; can't say that I saw any more men besides the deceased and prisoner who were in a clinch; I could see the four flashes, which apparently came from the door. The men seemed each to have an arm around the other and the deceased trying to strike the prisoner with his baton. I struck the prisoner with my baton and the two staggered towards the street; I followed them up and struck prisoner again and brought him down. I was not aware that Steadman was struck until I had one handcuff on prisoner and heard deceased exclaim, "My God, I'm murdered."

To Juror Cole:—I saw no revolver in prisoner's hands; I fired no shots myself. Foster came just as I had one handcuff on. We took him to the lockup. The prisoner made the remark, "My God, don't hit me again, my head is broken." I said to him, "You didn't get half enough." He said, "I did not do it."

Maggie Donnelly sworn, said.—Am a daughter of Mrs. Donnelly, of Donnelly House; have been at home for the last few days; recollect a couple of strangers coming to our house last Saturday, sometime after dinner. Was in the house at the time the arrests were attempted; the prisoner was in the dining room when the marshal entered the house. When Mr. Foster entered the front door, my sister said, "here's Foster," or something like that. She then made for the back part of the house. She went to the dining room. The prisoner went out the back door; he caught Steadman at the side door after going through the back door; I was looking out of our sitting room window. The man who was arrested ran out of the back door; the next I saw of the prisoner was the deceased and he wrestling at end of platform; there had been two shots fired prior to this. The shots appeared to be on the platform right by the door. I couldn't see the four shots; I heard them. I went to the front door and called "Buck" by his chum and Buck called his chum Jim. I didn't hear any remarks after the Marshal came. I took from what I heard the men saying that they had something hid somewhere which they wished to go after. They both got new caps yesterday; my brother bought them; they gave him the money. There was a young man playing the organ in the front room when the shots were fired. He left the house when the shots were fired.

To Juror Cole—The man called Jim was in the shed when the arrest was attempted; am positive Buck went out of the side door; I saw Buck with something in his hand that looked like a revolver; there was more than one going off; two shots were fired, then four. There were no other strangers at the house.

Selina Donnelly, sworn, said: I was at home about 9 o'clock last night; remember marshal coming to our door last night. Someone said "fire." I went to the door and saw the marshal, and then went into the dining-room, and when I got there I said "the cops are about the house." Had no special object in saying this. The men called each other Buck and Jim. When I made this remark Buck put his hand in his pocket and called for Jim and made for the back door. They came to our place Saturday; they had no luggage; they drove there in a single team; I don't know who drove them there; heard no conversation as to where they were from or where they were going. When I said the cops were about the house, Buck put his hand in his pocket, held up his hand with a revolver in it, and said "Hi Jim." He held his hand away up and then rushed to the back door; heard the shots next. I didn't look out the window nor side door. There was one shot and then four. They seemed to be at the platform. The shots appeared to be all in one place. I opened the door marked C in the Daily Times and saw an officer's cap. While the men were at our place I saw Buck examining a dirty black pistol. I think he was cleaning it. My mother and Ira Germain were in the room when the alarm was given. The marshal said to Ira not to go out. Buck and Jim were whispering together nearly all the time they were at our place. I don't know what they were saying. They asked for the news all the time, and we said they would have to wait until the Times came around. They would look over it together. When they read Monday's Times (containing an account of the Chatham burglary) Jim said "he was wrong, he didn't know what he lost; the $40 was right but the $500 was wrong." They were reading the paper together yesterday and I was working about the room. They afterwards talked together. I didn't see them write any letters there. There was only the two men came to our place; they always came to the house on foot after the first day; the prisoner Buck was in Moncton 4 or 5 weeks ago. He was at our house on that occasion. He made his home at McDermott's, the Moffat house; he was there before.

Witness at this stage was taken to the cell where prisoner was confined and identified him as the man called Buck, and the man who had the black looking revolver.

Witness continued: When Buck was here before he and McDermott chummed together; don't know where McDermott is to be found now.

To a juror—I think Jim jumped over Keith's board fence; I don't know that Jim fired any shots; they appeared to be all together.

He said his clothes were not done and we are late for the train now; they both went out and went into Mrs. Smith's (colored). That would be pretty near sundown. They stayed there awhile and came back and remained in my house until the marshal came. I was standing by the table fixing something for the baby. Buck was sitting on the table. Selina came in and said "the cops are around the house." Buck put his hand in his pocket and held it up again, saying "Hi, Jim," and then made for the back door. I went upstairs and it was then I heard the report of a revolver. I turned and looked into the front room, and saw Germain fall back on the lounge and I thought he was shot. The shot sounded as if it had been fired in the house; I only heard the one; this is the last I remember until about an hour afterwards.

To Juror Cole: The windows were all down. I don't know of anyone in the house that could have fired the shot. Besides Germain, John Dryden was in the house.

To coroner: Buck asked me Sunday if I got the late paper; I told him I didn't get it; when he came down stairs Monday morning he asked me what time the first paper was out; after dinner he asked me for the paper. I told him Monday morning's Times was in the front room and he went in and got it. The party Buck was at my house before. The man Jim was not with him. Ned McDermott brought him to the house and asked me if I would give him something to eat.

Ira G. Germain, sworn, said: I was in the Donnelly house last night when Selina Donnelly came in the room and said "Foster is in the house." The prisoner was sitting on the table alongside of me and when he heard this he pulled a revolver, saying, "Hi Jim," and went out the back door; that is by way of the shed. About the time he got around the corner I heard the shooting; I went to the door. They were then putting the handcuffs on him. I heard about 5 or 6 shots fired. I think it was Buck fired, there, because he was the head man. I saw Buck at the Opera House with Henry Donnelly about three weeks ago. I don't know of the two having any friends in the city. At the Opera House previous to this is the only time I saw him. Buck met deceased at platform where the shooting took place; there was one shot and then a pause, the rest rapid succession.

To Juror Doyle: I saw the revolver when Buck pulled it out in the house. I cannot identify the revolver as I never saw it only when he pulled it from his pocket in the house.

THE VERDICT.

We, the Coroner's jury empanelled to enquire as to the manner and cause of the death of Joseph E. Steadman, late of the City of Moncton, County of Westmorland, N. B., police officer, find that on the evening of the first day of August, inst., the said Jos. E. Steadman while in discharge of his duty as such police officer attempting to make an arrest of two persons who were stopping at the house on Telegraph Street in said city of Moncton, known as the Donnelly House, suspected of breaking a safe at Chatham, belonging to Wilson & Co., and taking therefrom a sum of money, he came to his death by a shot fired from a revolver in the hands of a person to us unknown, and called "Buck," who is now in custody, and that he fired the said shot with intent to kill and murder the said Joseph E. Steadman.

Signed by all the jurymen: E. C. Cole, foreman; Jas. W. Oulton, Jas. Doyle, G. R. Sangster, Geo. McSweeney, E. W. Givan, H. D. Chapman.

Sporting Notes.

Over 300 people visited Sullivan at his training quarters on Sunday last. He weighs 217 lbs. now, and will train off about ten pounds more.

Some of our local athletes are putting on the finishing touches for the Scottish sports here on August 10th. They will make it warm for any of the visitors.

Zimmerman, America's wonderful cyclist, will compete at the Ashbury Park meet, on Aug. 5th and 6th, and will endeavor to create a new world's record.

In the yacht races at Cowes, on Tuesday, the Kaiser's yacht Meteor (formerly the Thistle) crossed the line first; but the Corsair won the race on time allowance.

At Hampden Park, Springfield, Mass., on Tuesday last, Geo. F. Taylor rode a mile on a Safety in 2 min. 14 1-5 sec., thus breaking the previous world's record of 2.15.

When Zimmerman was distinguishing himself in Berlin in the races, Emperor William who was present, threw his crown in the air and yelled with the rest of the enthusiasts, "Go it Zimmy."

Springfield, Mass., will this year surpass all its former efforts by giving as first prize to the winner of the one mile world's record race (Safety) a pair of thoroughbred horses harnessed to a buckboard, all to cost $1000.

O'Rielly, a St. John athlete at present in Boston, will compete in the Trimounts sports at the latter place to-day. He is down for 220, 440 and 880 yard runs. He lately won a gold watch for first in a 440 yard race in New York.

Jim Corbett's colors in his coming fight will be a silk United States flag, having across the bar of red and white a coat of arms of California, with the green and gold harp of Erin in one corner, and in another the words "America Forever."

Some twenty years ago the Wards were the cracks of the rowing world, but they have long since retired. On September 11th, next, Hank Ward, aged 64, and Ellis Ward, aged 48, will row double against two other crews, entirely composed of Wards. They are all of the one family, and comprise the great Ward four-oared crew of a quarter of a century ago.

Saratoga, N. Y., will probably witness the American Amateur championship races for oarsmen for some three years to come. Durnan, of Toronto, who was disqualified for crooked work at Toronto a few days ago, and was not allowed to row in the late Saratoga championship races, is endeavoring to clear himself through the papers.

The struggle for first place in the National Leagues second series is waxing warm. The Cleveland's now head the list with .687; Brooklyn has been doing well, and is now a close second with .625. Boston, the easy winner of the first series, is coming on at a great pace, and is third with .600.
