Mr. Johnston's appeal for gifts of Magazines, etc., for his Reading Room. GRAPES AND LEMONS, very fine, at W. F. CARTER'S. [April 12, '83 in.] MARRIERS are not an unmixing blessing, mingled in by adults, they soon become a dangerous habit; administered to children, they are fearfully fatal, and yet it is infants that they are most largely given. The irritable mother finds a ready method of obtaining rest by dosing her sleepless baby with one of the opium-containing soothing syrups, and the child, instead of being blessed by his mother's sweet restorer, lies in a poisoned state. A recent investigation into the substance of a London revelation that one Benjamin Hanley sold as much as six gallons of opium in a single day, and a nurse in the Tewksbury, Mass., almshouse admitted freely dosing the children under her charge with some stuff that made them sleep, "as she was going to make the day for herself as she could." Easy for parents, certainly, but death to the helpless child! CHOICE Soda Water at W. F. CARTER'S. [April 12, '83 in.] A CURIOUS DOCTOR.—During the Nicholson case suit, which is being tried before a committee of the Dominion senate, a person calling himself Dr. John Curry, who resides in Harrisville, Mich., was examined. He had attended Mrs. Nicholson, a daughter of Mr. Saxton, in October, 1882, and delivered her of a child. On the 12th of December, he declined to testify. He was a homeopathic physician. He was subjected to being sworn in by the committee. If the counsel were to be successful, he the witness, would not be very successful with him. (Laughter.) Mr. Nicholson would not come down here, there being no representation as to who was to pay the car fare and hotel bills. He came here to testify to a fact, and Nicholson then declared his case closed. Mr. Macdonald moved that the committee refer to the senate the preamble of the bill not to sit on the ground of collusion between the parties, and if the committee would not agree to this, to order an adjournment until the case pending against Nicholson in the court of Kingman for the seduction of his niece should be decided.
