Rapid Progress Made On Memorial Building

Work is progressing rapidly on the Fathers of Confederation Memorial Building, R.M. Rickard, construction engineer on the site said yesterday. Since the pouring of the roof on the theatre building two weeks ago, the forms have been removed and the concrete on the inside is being sand-blasted. The maze of supports are still under the roof and will not be removed until the cables which help support it are tightened. This work on the cables is scheduled to start today. The supports will be removed after this is completed and the sand-blasting will continue for a week. After the cables are tightened the final stone slabs will be placed on the upper edge of the roof and the sitting on the theatre building will be completed so that work can commence on the interior.

Two stories have been added to the art gallery, and Mr. Rickard said they hoped to get a pour of concrete onto the roof by the first of next week. The roof frames are of the same perimeter measurement as the theatre building but one foot less in depth. The large plywood frames were hoisted to the gallery roof yesterday by crane. The frames are built of plywood and there are three sheets to a side. It is expected that the stone siding will be on the gallery building within a week.

Mr. Rickard also said that the frames and windows are expected to arrive in a couple of weeks and work should start in putting them in the buildings. The library building has progressed another story and the roof will soon be added. In explaining the speed of construction Mr. Rickard said, that in this type of work the building consists of large amounts of concrete in frames and once the shell of the building is erected the bulk of the work is done. There is not all the finishing work in plaster and woodwork as there is in conventional buildings.

Mr. Rickard said the theatre building will be opened in May as planned.

Conservatives Push Plans For February Convention

By JAMES NELSON OTTAWA (CP) — Progressive Conservative headquarters is stepping up preparations for the party's annual meeting which is to Ottawa early next February. Party headquarters is expected to announce this week the names of the 22-member resolutions committee which will hold its first meeting Nov. 23.

Meanwhile, formal notices are going out to riding associations advising them to submit their draft resolutions for consideration by the policy committee as soon as possible. The resolutions committee is to consolidate the suggestions received from the riding associations and present the annual meeting with a single set of proposals which will spell out the party's basic program.

Appointing the resolutions committee in advance of the annual meeting is provided for in the party's constitution and it is means whereby conflicting proposals can be prevented from reaching the floor of the meeting.

About two-thirds of the committee was named by the party executive meeting here last month. The remainder represent Conservative MPs and senators.

A headquarters spokesman said the names of the committee members have not yet been announced because headquarters has not received confirmation from all of them that they will serve.

The committee, bringing delegates from all provinces and the northern territories as well as from the Conservative caucus, is expected to meet several times before the annual meeting. Interest is running high in the tone of resolutions submitted by the constituent associations, especially for signs of what strength there is among those who want a new leader to replace John Diefenbaker.

VOTED CONFIDENCE At the last annual meeting, before last spring's cabinet crisis, and the Conservative government's subsequent defeat in the April election, there were rumblings of discontent but Mr. Diefenbaker won a large vote of confidence.

The composition of the committee now is reported to be little changed from the make-up of the resolutions committee which prepared for the last annual meeting.

Mr. Diefenbaker has said he expects to win another confidence vote, and a party headquarters source said there is no doubt he will.
