Liberal Confusion

Mr. Diefenbaker's election promises are causing the Liberal bigwigs a lot of concern. There would be nothing unseemly about that if they could agree on what they expect the Prime Minister to do about them.

Mr. Walter Tucker, M.P. for Rosthern and one time Liberal leader in Saskatchewan, stated in the Commons that the Government should not call an election "until it has carried out its election promises"—every last one of them.

Mr. Paul Martin, former Health Minister, apparently doesn't share Mr. Tucker's view on this matter. In a television address he cautioned the Government that "there is more to governing than carrying out election promises" and gave the impression that in carrying a promise is not necessarily binding when it is made in an election campaign.

Is it not a fair assumption that the Liberals are in a quandary? They don't want an early election for the simple reason that they are not ready for one, having not yet recovered from the mild shock they received in June. On the other hand, they fear that if they do not proceed to say, next fall or the following spring—by which time the Government can be expected to have carried out the bulk of its commitments—they will be in even a worse position. So perhaps it is little wonder that there is confusion in their ranks. They profess to dislike the way in which the Government has started out on its responsibility. Yet, they haven't the courage to support the C. C. F. "no confidence" motion which will be voted on shortly.

Education in Russia

Educators have known for years that the Western democracies are falling behind in the race to produce enough trained natural scientists, teachers of scientific subjects, engineers and researchers. Now comes the report of the United States Office of Education on Soviet education, giving chapter and verse on just how intensive Soviet education actually is. Here, diligently young people in the U.S.S.R. are required to study, and how much they concentrate on physics, mathematics, and engineering. The report discloses that Soviet college enrollment has increased in 10 years from 169,000 students to 1,867,000, that all secondary (high school) graduates are able to boast of having taken five years of physics, four years of chemistry and ten years of mathematics; whereas fewer than one-third of American secondary graduates have taken a year in chemistry, only one-fourth have studied physics and one-seventh have grappled with advanced mathematics. Project the results of this Soviet training ten and twenty years ahead in terms of trained nuclear scientists, space researchers and all the rest, and it is very evident that Soviet successes in these fields will extend far into the future.

It is being widely remarked that the United States and Canada are going for that matter, not merely more education in natural science, crucial as this is, but more education per se. There need to be more honour and respect among citizens of all ages, for learning and the search for knowledge. Professors and teachers must have a higher standing in the community. The quality of education should be raised to the grades right through the universities.

In the Soviet Union, teachers and professors are very definitely the elite of the community. Advanced students at the University of Moscow have the best apartments in the city and get special honors and privileges. This shrewd encouragement of learning is paying off handsomely, and it might well provide a lesson for the democratic countries. But it is worth remembering that this phenomenal progress achieved in Russia is due to the fact that the government, as a dictatorship, is able to decide the number of skilled personnel needed in various fields, from ballet stars or athletes to science graduates.

Throughout the whole system runs the Communist party shadow. The secret police maintain surveillance on the political reliability of all school personnel, from teachers and administrators to the humblest students. This is carried on with almost fantastic energy, the report says. There is no freedom, and therefore no chance for the fullest individual development. The system has all the ruthless efficiency of an anthrax, and constitutes all the greater menace to the free world for that reason. The great problem is how to match this efficiency without sacrificing our own democratic ideals. No adequate answer seems yet to have been given, but it is one which will have to be found and acted upon if we are to survive as free nations.

A Special Occasion

The Christmas Seals from the Tuberculosis Association are here again in eight attractive designs. It's the fifteenth year that plans have been asked to buy Christmas Seals to raise funds for the fight against tuberculosis, and the changes in the tuberculosis picture since the first seal sale provides evidence that this is an important occasion. When the first seals went out the TB death rate in Canada was well over 20 times what it is today. Were the rate still as high there would have been more than 25,000 deaths from this disease in Canada in this past year. What a host of families would have had sad Christmas, had the march against tuberculosis not prospered!

But let us not forget that we haven't succeeded completely by any means. There are still a good many thousand Canadian homes where one or two members of the family won't be home for Christmas. They are in sanatoria, more than 13,000 of them. And there are perhaps a thousand homes where they must face the fact that one member will never get back—because TB is still a killer. Their staff is still a job of prevention to be done. It's only a fraction of the size it once was—but that is added reason for dealing with it. Anyone who wants to take a hand has a ready way of doing it. Buy Christmas Seals from the Tuberculosis Association.

EDITORIAL NOTES

"There is probably no country in the world where religion is as free as in the Soviet Union," declared Moscow Radio recently in a broadcast beamed to Moslem countries. Which proves that the big lie technique did not go out of use with the demise of Adolf Hitler.

A member of the Commons who made no speeches during the election campaign has carried out his promise "to make one after the election was over." He will now be anxious to know whether his constituents will keep him in Parliament despite his speechmaking.

President Eisenhower has expressed the opinion that "man's future is bleak indeed unless man's judgement and intelligence measure up quickly to his inventive genius". Some will question whether, in such circumstances, man can look forward to any kind of future of long duration.

In spite of annual population increase of close to 3,000,000, milk production in the United States is showing a decline. The United States Crop Reporting Board indicates that 20,642,000 milk cows were on farms in June, 1957, a drop of 280,000 head from the 1956 mid-year report. This is the lowest level of milk cows in United States farms since 1930.

Britain's Aging Population

Thomson Newspapers, London, England, Bureau

Back to work Britain's men of their election 'platforms' for a couple of years have been a promise that is being helped are the 1,000,000 unemployed, the 210,000 widows, the 770,000 mothers-to-be who get a maternity grant. Britain is still on finance, on the increased cost of living that has yet to find a cure.

But although the current government over here wants to keep money "tight," they have just released an additional $42,000,000 a year for the aged. Up goes that pension of $7.00 a week for a single person, $11.50 for a married couple. The rise is just $1.50 a week—a help, but totally inadequate. Some 4.34 millions will benefit from the increased pensions. Some 4.34 millions will benefit from the increased pensions. Some 4.34 millions will benefit from the increased pensions.

Oil Sought In Muscat

National Geographic Society
The sweet smell of oil is stirring the Sultanate of Muscat and Oman more than all the perfume that is made the land famous in Biblical days.

ONE OF WORLD'S HOTTEST
Muscat is one of the hottest towns on earth with an average yearly temperature in the 80's. A traveler from Samarkand who visited the town in 1642, claimed that hating "was a matter of perfect ease, for the desert was filled with roasted gables."

Baby's Pacifier Makes Comeback

By Herman N. Boudness, M. D.
Several years ago, I distinctly recall writing an article advising parents to get rid of their baby's pacifier as soon as possible.

BETTER THAN THUMB
Now an article in one of the national newspapers has done it. "Today Health," which is published by the American Medical Association, says that pediatricians and dentists, too, claim the pacifier is better than the baby's own thumb.

QUESTION AND ANSWER
Answer: A heart block is caused by some damage to the heart muscle. It is a condition that is not usually fatal, but it can be very serious.

SLOW DOWN AND LIVE

Driving upon the public highways is a privilege as well as a legal right. We owe it to ourselves and to the other driver to have our cars in good working condition; to drive at moderate speeds; to observe all traffic rules; and to DRIVE CAREFULLY. This aim combined with adequate insurance cover will bring relief from anxiety in many Canadian homes.
